The race in the National brought no changes in the positions of the eight clubs. The Boston team for the first time in six weeks got around on the winning side of the week's play with a half dozen victories but ten starts, but like the Red Sox, remained locked in the cellar. Cincinnati and Philadelphia, with four victories apiece, continued to jockey for fifth place with only a single game separating them, while Brooklyn, gripped by another slump, appeared ready to step aside for St. Louis.

TAYLOR'S HOME RUN IN NINTH WINS FOR DODGERS

BROOKLYN, N. Y., July 12.—(AP)—Taylor's home run with one out in the ninth inning today broke a deadlock and returned Brooklyn victorious over Pittsburgh, 4 to 3. Kremer and Osborne had a pitchers' duel but Osborne would have won easily if Cox had not lost three flies in the sun, which went as two triples and a double. Cox was benched after the third episode. Cuyler made four hits, one of them a homer. Wheat also hit for the circuit with one on. The score:

TAFTVILLE A. A. WINS BOTH WEEK-END GAMES

The Taftville A. A. continued its victorious march through the baseball world over the week-end, winning both games. On Saturday, the Fort Trumbull Stars were turned back in a brilliant game by a score of 4 to 1, and on Sunday, the Taftville team rode rough-shod through Harry Collins' Baltic team, emerging on the long end of a 17 to 2 score.

In Saturday's game Lloyd Jarvis held the Stars to three scattered singles while Taftville collected nine hits. Cardie's hitting featured this contest.

Sunday's game was more or less of a slaughter, Manager Troland using everyone except the bat-boy in the lineup. Baltic made a decidedly poor showing and were completely outclassed from the very first. The scores:

BEACH SYNAGOGUE DEDICATION SHOWS N. LONDON HEBREW STRENGTH

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 12—All roads led to Ocean Beach today. And the roads included those on which automobiles, busses and trolley cars operated. The weather was so hot that humanity longed for a sea breeze even though that breeze was scarcely of perceptible force, and though it brought little relief from the stifling heat created by temperature of 90 degrees. The attractions at the beach were bathing and the ceremony of the dedication of a synagogue for the Hebrews who make their home beside the ocean each summer for three months or more. The sound proved a veritable sea of gallies for the fishers came and went and along the shore worship was in order in the afternoon. It is said that more than four-fifths of the property at Ocean Beach is the possession of Hebrews. Those who went to the beach today did not doubt the accuracy of the claim. Extra trolley cars were run from Norwich to the beach, the number of automobiles that carried registration showing they were owned out of town was so large that they created more than passing observation and every Hebrew in the city who owned an auto or who could get to the beach was there, when the synagogue was dedicated. The officers of the synagogue association are chiefly from Hartford and vicinity and they will see to it that the modern methods of maintaining it are resorted to.

Ocean beach has not had a larger patronage this year than it had today. It was the objective point of people from all over this state and from adjoining states as well. To the question "whence camest thou and whither would you go?" the reply was, "I am a Hebrew." And that was indicative of the purpose of the assemblage and the character of the throng.

The sellers of liquor on the sly seem to be in for their annual clean-up in this city, because a start in that direction has been made. State Policeman Fred Caron secured the services of a fellow who was not above getting the evidence to convict those who would sell to him, as he is paid for his work and he produces the evidence that will convict. His work brought about the arrest of half a dozen persons Saturday. Three of them paid $200 each in to the court with the costs of their arrest and trial, while others are to appear tomorrow and take the dose that the court will hand out to them. They will pay rather than go to jail, the only alternative they have unless appeal is taken and that means increased expense. The convicted parties Saturday were Tony de Marco, a taxi driver who supposed he could get a bottle of liquor cheaper than to have it delivered. The latter proving to be the secret service man to his place and ordered it. Against Tony was produced a bottle of moonshine. Mrs. Aquilino Fiorenzy attempted to explain that the liquor came to her place and was hers, but declared that she had only what she and family needed to consume and that it was not for sale to him. But the police, according to Mrs. Petrosky, had information that he should have a bottle and he took what was on the table and thrust a bill into the pocket of the apron Mrs. Petrosky wore. That course was unique, but it didn't go with the court, of $200 was handed out to the woman. Her husband and his brother-in-law were mixed into the mess and they were charged with the sale of wallops from a bottle. They were prosecuted for interfering with officers in the discharge of their duties. That is why they were arraigned. They were willing to pay the costs of arrest if they were not further penalized. These were something more than $18, which they paid. Arthur Cook was the third man to appear. His penalty was $200 also. It took him some time to get the money, but he finally accomplished the trick and avoided a term in jail.

Those to come into court Monday are William Morgan and wife, Fernando Luzzi and Stella De Villaqur. They were trapped by the spotter, too. What evidence they will offer has not been disclosed, but the police say the spotter has "the goods" to convict them.

Mrs. Frank Savage, of 1 Jay street; Mrs. Fred Frattalini, 172 Poquonock road, Groton; Mrs. George Berube, 208 Fitch avenue; Philip Allen, Centerbrook, and Charles A. Paradise and Bernard Dupper, both of 48 Fifty-ninth street, Brooklyn, N. Y., the last two named being injured in an automobile accident in Waterford, July 4th when the machine in which they were riding overturned, were patients dismissed at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital Saturday.

William Wilkinson, coroled, died at Lawrence hospital Saturday, death resulting from a brief illness. But little is known of Wilkinson here and an effort is being made to determine whether he has relatives.

An automobile owned by Mrs. Jo-hanna Johnson and operated by Fjorne Johnson, of Montville, and a machine owned and operated by Mrs. Dora Walsh, 17 Tilley street, were in collision on State street, near Union street, Saturday afternoon. Both cars were damaged, but not seriously.

An automobile owned and driven by Joseph Silva, 87 Crystal avenue, and a car owned and operated by Charles H. Brown, 43 Rosemary street, collided this afternoon on Crystal avenue, near Front street. Both cars were damaged, but the occupants escaped injury. Silva was backing his car from the driveway of his garage and after the machine had reached a point about midway of the avenue, the car operated by Brown crashed against the side of Silva's machine. Each placed the responsibility for the accident upon the other.

An automobile owned and driven by Thomas L. Stuart, Mugo Point road, Niantic, struck a collie, owned by Antonio Fazzianti, 20 High street, on Hempstead street this forenoon, the animal being so badly injured that it was shot by Dog Warden John Sweesy to end its suffering.

Edward Klose, a sailor, stationed aboard tug 72 Submarine Base, was arrested by Patrolman John Sullivan Saturday night. He is charged with breach of the peace by Conductor A. Doyle, of the Connecticut Company. Doyle alleging that Klose created a disturbance on the car of which the former was in charge. Klose will be given a hearing in the police court Monday morning.

Clark Brown, colored, employed as a waiter at the Rotisserie Inn, Waterford, a place frequented by many autoists, was before Judge Frederick Dimmock in the Waterford town court late Saturday afternoon. Counsel for Brown entered a demurrer to the complaint, but the demurrer was overruled and a fine of $200 and costs was imposed.

Brown was arrested by Waterford officers, the place being raided, following the alleged sale of a quart of whiskey to Officer George Peabody by Brown, Peabody alleging to have paid Brown $8 for the liquor. No liquor was found at the inn when the raid occurred and because of counsel for Brown entering a demurrer, the evidence tending to show that Peabody purchased the liquor of Brown was not introduced.

It was the belief of the authorities that Brown in reality acted as agent for the management of the inn and did not sell the liquor as his personal property. The inn was raided about a year ago, at which time the proprietress of the place was fined $200 and costs.

Thieves gained entrance to the candy and ice cream store of Joseph Gentilella, 691 Bank street, Friday night, for when the place was opened for business Saturday it was discovered that the store had been ransacked. Entrance was gained by means of an open window in the rear, which was protected only by an ordinary screen making entrance to the store an easy matter. Twenty-five dollars was taken from the cash register and a desk was pried open, but nothing of value was taken from it. It is believed that the burglary was perpetrated by young men who had a knowledge of the practice of Gentilella leaving money in the cash register.

A depression of considerable dimen-sions was discovered today on Bentley avenue, the main artery of traffic at Ocean Beach. The danger spot was reported to the highway department.

An unsanitary condition was dis-covered on Cedar Grove avenue, Saturday afternoon, when it was revealed that two barrels of decayed fish had been deposited by an unknown person in the highway. A sickening odor existed until the police notified the health authorities of the location of the fish and then the cause of the annoyance was removed.

Mrs. Frieda Wallace, 39 Summer street, was ordered into court, Friday night, charged with operating an automobile without having a license to do so, as a result of the machine she was operating colliding with an automobile owned and driven by Henry P. Lee, 138 Blackhall street, corner of Montauk avenue and School street. She was fined $10 by Judge Lewis Crandall, Saturday morning. Following the conclusion of the case, Acting Prosecuting Attorney Percy J. Hollandersky issued a warrant for the arrest of Mrs. Wallace on the additional charge of reckless driving and as the result of the latter action, Mrs. Wallace will be in court again, Monday morning. Lee claims that his car, which was overturned, was damaged to the extent of $1,000.

About 400 excursionists from Hart-ford came to New London this forenoon, arriving here at 10.15 o'clock by railroad, the visitors occupying five coaches, which were attached to a regular train. The excursionists spent the day at Ocean Beach, returning to Hartford at 5 o'clock.

The Jibboom club held its first outdoor event in many years today, when the members of that organization had an outing in Waterford. The affair was attended by about 200 and feasting and recreation occupied the attention of the diversion-seekers.

The excursion of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad from New London and Norwich today was participated in by about 800 men and women. The special train left New London at 8 o'clock and returned here at 11 o'clock tonight.

An automobile owned and operat-ed by Eli Jennings, Fairfield, struck a cyclist, John McCarthy of 48 Hempstead street, late this afternoon, at the junction of Hempstead and Truman streets, the cyclist rounding the corner from Hempstead street as the automobile was about to pass the intersection of the highways on Truman street. McCarthy was knocked from the cycle, but escaped with bruises. The cycle was damaged and Jennings agreed to pay for the cost of repairing the machine.

An automobile, owned and driven by Thomas Morris, 19 Whitmore St., Hartford, and a machine, owned and operated by Anthony Mulsanata, 7 Wakefield place, Northampton, Mass., were in collision late Sunday afternoon, corner of Ocean avenue and Bank streets. Both cars were damaged.

CARETAKERS HAVE CLAIM AGAINST BRANDEGEE ESTATE

The late Senator Brandegee's dearth of ready cash before his suicide in Washington, D. C., last October is again attested to in a recent claim filed against the estate in the registry of wills. The claim is for $208.75 for services from Emma Kennedy, who with her husband, had charge of the Brandegee residence at 17th and Eye streets.

The claim involved sums spent by the Kennedys in the month preceding the senator's death. At that time there was an arrangement whereby the Kennedys ran the house and charged the senator and his chauffeur for "board." Whether this arrangement was an outcome of the senator's dwindling cash supply is not known. The Kennedys have put in a claim for salary as well as for "boarding" the senator and George Jones, the chauffeur. The colored couple also spent about $50 for extras, such as fruit for the table, and newspapers.

Another recent claim against the Brandegee estate, filed in Washington is one for $62.50, from the Dupont Motor Repair Shop.

The committee has held frequent meetings with district moderator A. G. Martin, the results of which are to be submitted for approval.

After a long session of Stonington court Saturday morning an appeal was taken, when the adjourned case of state vs. John Lema, charged with breach of the peace, was tried. Lema, aged 19 was arrested by Patrolman William Ostman on the night of Tuesday, July 7, while with others he was obstructing the sidewalk in front of Higgins' store. At the hearing Wednesday last he entered a plea of not guilty, through his guardian, Manual Lema, and an adjournment was taken till Saturday. The accused had as his attorney, Curtis A. Morgan of New London and the state was represented by Prosecuting Attorney George R. McKenna. Patrolman William Ostman, told of ordering the crowd away from the store front and all but Lema moved and he stood to argue the matter and Ostman. They clinched and fell to the concrete roadway. Ostman then took the accused to the lockup where he remained till bail was furnished at about midnight. Attorney Morgan tried to break down the story of the patrolman but did not succeed. Judge Wilcox found Lema guilty and ordered a fine of $25 and all the costs of the court. These amounted to the additional sum of $15.28. Mr. Morgan gave notice of an appeal to the next session of the criminal court of common pleas for New London county. Bonds in the sum of $300 were furnished by the father of the accused.

I., as a deputy sheriff of Washington county and keeper of the Washington county jail at Kingston, to begin his duties Wednesday, July 15th. He was appointed to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of George S. Phillips, who has held these offices since Sheriff Mitchell was elected, and who received his appointment from former Sheriff John R. Wilcox.

Retiring Deputy Phillips is to take a vacation with Mrs. Phillips at Salt pond before entering upon other duties. Mr. Bull is 51, married, and has two children grown up. He resides near Wickford, but as soon as he qualifies as deputy sheriff, he will make his home at the Washington county jail, where there are furnished apartments on the second and third floors of the building. Saturday morning about 1:15 o'clock a report reached the Westerly police headquarters that an automobile party of about ten, men and women, were creating a disturbance on the Boston Post road out of Westerly to the eastward just below the location of the old Whipping Post. James A. Saunders, a farmer, residing at 126 Franklin street, who had been disturbed by the revelling, telephoned the police. Sergeant Michael Curtin and Patrolman George H. Champlin went to the place in an automobile. As the automobile with the Westerly officers reached the brow of an incline just before them through the thick fog was seen a white birch pole four inches in diameter stretched across the highway metal from one side to the other. The warning was so short timed the auto with Westerly officers, going 50 miles per hour, that it would have been dangerous on the wet roadway to have put on brakes and the police auto struck the obstruction squarely and jumped it. Previous to this time Charles Zanelli, of 141 Franklin street, residing on the opposite side of the highway had been routed out by the racket in the roadway and started with a lighted lantern for the highway. When the police arrived he reported that he had been too frightened by the actions of the party to even attempt to take the number of the auto or to return to his home to telephone the police and that just before the police arrived the disturbers had gotten into their auto and departed from Westerly. The police went as far as the farm of John W. Ople and stopped to telephone to Westerly Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown, near Dunn's Corners, when they had found no trace of the car. The beaches were visited in quest of the revellers without success. Returning up the Post road large boulders were found on the right side of the roadway and in the gutter, having been taken from a nearby wall. They could not be seen through the thick fog until an auto was right near them. These were removed from the road. The identity of the parties, was not learned Saturday.

THREE CASES TRIED SUNDAY AT SPECIAL COURT SESSION

(Special to the Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., July 12—In a special session of the Third District court at 7.30 o'clock Sunday evening at the Westerly police station, before Acting Judge M. Walter Flynn, Jr., with Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown and Sergeant Michael Curtin in attendance three cases were tried.

Charles M. Kennedy, 18, of Staten Island, N. Y., arrested on Broad St., Saturday evening about 7.45 o'clock, by Sergeant Curtin, for driving a Scripps-Booth roadster, without an operator's license, entered a plea of guilty. He told the court that, in company with John G. Haussel and George Lyons, he was returning from a week's vacation to Newport, R. I., and that all he had was the registration paper showing the owner of the car was his mother, Mrs. Teresa Kennedy, of 763 Brighton avenue, Staten Island. He produced a telegram from her stating that she was ill. Returning to his duties as a bookkeeper with his two companions, the three on the front seat, he was stopped by Sergeant Curtin, as has been the practice of police officers in Westerly for the past week. It was then learned that he had no operator's license. In view of the fact that he had passed the day in jail, Acting Judge Flynn imposed a fine of $5 and costs, amounting to $7.80, which the accused paid and the three men returned to New York on the Federal express.

Joseph Tarninsky of Ansonia, Conn., was presented on a complaint of operating an automobile without a license. He was arrested by Patrolman George H. Champlin, when held up by the officer for a defective headlight, Saturday night, having had a load of furniture to deliver. He claimed to have lost his registration, which was in a pocketbook together with $2 and a railroad pass. He paid a fine of $10 and costs, amounting to $12.80 and passed Sunday in jail.

Michael Malley, formerly of Prov-idence, a weaver in the Pawtucket Woolen Company mill at Potter Hill, arrested by Patrolman George Madison for being drunk on Canal street, about 11.30 Saturday night, was presented on an intoxication charge. He entered a plea of guilty and was fined $2 and costs. He told the court that he was arrested seven years ago in Providence, which city he left on account of family differences.

NEWS OF BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, July 13—Surplus funds, piling up after their release from mid-year requirements, overflowed into the bond market last week and lifted the price level moderately higher. In the face of severe competition from new offerings for reinvestment favor, Wall street agreed that the progress of the market signified underlying conditions of unquestioned soundness.

In line with the recently pronounced trend, the week did not pass without the establishment of several new high records by U. S. government obligations. The strength of this group was not fully sustained, however, as investors showed a tendency to shift into other issues returning more attractive yields. That the strong technical position of the liberty and treasury issues was unimpaired was indicated by the responsiveness of prices to any indications of fresh buying.

Overshadowing in interest all other developments in the bond circles, was the announcement that Australia was about to borrow in the American market for the first time and probably would negotiate a $100,000,000 loan. Great Britain guarding funds to insure the success of her gold resumption policy, is understood to have approved the proposal of London bankers to make the business with a Morgan syndicate. An early offering of bonds, probably bearing interest of 5 or 5 1-2 per cent. is expected.

Arrangements have been concluded by Speyer and Co., with the Hungarian government for a $10,000,000 Hungarian consolidated municipal loan. The onds will be placed on the market this week.

Although negotiations are pending for more than $50,000,000 of new German municipal and industrial financing, unexpected obstacles have been encountered to delay the actual flotation of loans. Proposed offerings for the cities of Cologne, Munich, Bremen and Hamburg and a German land bank have been discouraged by the cautious attitude of the Central government, the low revaluation of gold German mark securities and the fact that the recent Berlin loan was not, widely distributed.

Bond flotations last week expanded to a total of almost 112,000,000 as compared with less than $100,000,000 in the preceding week. The volume of new business was the largest since the first week in June, and included such important issues as $40,000,000 Central Public bonds, $20,000,000 for the Hershey Chocolate Company and $13,500,000 for the Great Consolidated Electric Power Company of Japan.

Among the most conspicuous features of trading were the rallies in bonds of companies which were able to report progress in reorganization plans. Virginia-Carolina Chemical issues sold at the year's highest, on prospects that early action would be taken to end existing receiverships. Price movements generally, however, were restricted to rather narrow limits because of the current high levels at which most classes of bonds are selling.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace

"Smouldering Fires," Universal-Jewel-Clarence Brown production coming to the Palace Theatre today, has a particularly notable cast for it co-stars Pauline Frederick and Laura La Plante, has Malcolm McGregor as leading man, and Tully Marshall, Wanda Hawley and Helen Lynch in prominent parts.

Further prominence is given the cast by the fact that one of the necessities of the story is a shop committee, and while the members of this committee do not have much to do they are almost as well known as are the stars and leading characters for they have been in motion pictures for many year. They are Bert Roach, Billy Gould, Rolfe Sedan, Jack McDonald, William Orlomond, Robert Mack and Frank Newburg.

Cowboys love bright colors, but they are few and far between who possess genuine batik shirts. Lefty Flynn, F. B. O.'s popular young western star, has six shirts made of genuine batik which he recently received as a gift from Prince Cohen. Prince Cohen is one of the editors of Filmland the only film magazine printed in the British West Indies, and recently spent a month in Hollywood where he was entertained by Lefty who was at work on "O. U. West," his latest western drama, which comes to the Palace Theatre today.

In Semarang, Java, according to Prince Cohen, beautiful batiks can be purchased for $10 each.

Breed

A photoplay bringing a scathing indictment against the modern tendency to tear down conventions, opened last night at the Breed theatre. It is "Cheaper to Marry," Robert Z. Leonard's production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

A powerful lesson to the effect that matrimony is the best and safest, to say nothing of being the cheapest, policy is forcibly demonstrated before the final fadeout. The picture is extraordinary, aside from its rare dramatic and entertaining value, because in the course of adaptation to the screen not a single fundamental change was made in the original plot of the play by Samuel Shipman.

An exceptional cast is seen in this film. Heading the list are Lewis S. Stone and Conrad Nagel, who have established themselves as among the most popular men on the screen. They play partners in business who, on fundamental questions of life, differ radically, Stone as Jim Knight, holding conventions and matrimony in contempt, and Nagel as Dick Tyler believing in marriage and practicing his theory, with the aid of Marguerite de la Motte, as the play reaches its startling climax.

"Cheaper to Marry" is noteworthy because it brings Paulette Duval back again. This actress, who made her screen debut as Madame de Pompadour in "Monsieur Beaucaire," is seen for the first time as a modern vampire, and her work gives added promise of a brilliant future.

An excellent vein of comedy runs through the entire production, handled to rthe most part by the very capable Louise plays a "grass widow" seeking a fourth husband, and Claude, a "wealthy old bach," finally falls into her trap.

Besides the cross section of gay social and cafe life which Mr. Leonard has given in this picture, there are some intimate scenes in which an exclusive "women's athletic club" is pictured for the first time. The swimming pool and its beautiful bathing girls who really dive and swim, the "get fat," "get thin," and "get beautiful" episodes are especially interesting.

Frederick and Fanny Hatton made the adaptation, and Alice D. G. Miller prepared the continuity. Andre Barlatier was photographer.

Broadway

Henry King, producer of "The White Sister," "Tol'able David," "Romola," etc., has added another to his long list of screen successes—"Sackcloth and Scarlet," a Paramount picture with Alice Terry now at the Broadway Theatre. The story is an adaptation of George Gibb's novel. The scenes are laid in Lake Louise, Canada; in a little village in Brittany, New York and Washington, D. C. It is against these contrasting backgrounds that the plot unfolds in absorbing detail the life and love stories of two sisters, whose characters stand out in startling dissimilarity.

Polly, the younger of the two is a spoiled girl of nineteen. Imbued with the independent spirit of young womanhood, she packs her grip and starts out west under the pretense of visiting relatives. She registers at a mountain resort, becomes involved in a flirtation with one of the hotel guides. And it is Joan, played by Miss Terry who comes to the rescue when she encounters difficulties.

All through the picture there is Polly taking all—Joan giving everything, sacrificing everything even her good name to shield her sister.

It's a great woman picture, this one! Real, appealing.

Orville Caldwell, who played in the stage production of "The Miracle," has the leading man's role in "Sackcloth and Scarlet." There's a well known cast of players in support.

The comedy proved to be a bombardment of laughs being entitled "Great Guns." A new Kinograms completed a perfect picture program.

One of the riders of this inclosure is our local boy, Fred Morrell, known to the show world as Cannon Ball Mack. Other attractions are the Chair Oplaine where the ride in London traffic policemen, having adopted long white sleeve gloves so as to make their hand and arm signals more visible to pedestrians and drivers of vehicles, have been dubbed "white wings." As an experiment the "white wings" have been placed at congested street crossings near the houses of parliament and other busy corners, and for the first week or two attracted much attention. In several instances such crowds ascombled to watch the policemen wave their "wings" that extra policemen had to be called to show the spectators on their way so that traffic could again flow through its normal channels.

TAFTVILLE

Favored by the weather man with an ideal day, the Taftville Congregational church school enjoyed its annual picnic Saturday at Ocean Beach. Two special cars, crowded to capacity, left the foot of North B street at 8:45, arriving at the beach at 10:30, where the day was spent in bathing and sports of all kinds. Basket lunches were enjoyed in the pavilion. The chairman of the general committee was Allan Beagle, and Miss Elsie Heap was chairman of the ticket committee. Free transportation was furnished all the beginners and juniors, and a slight charge was made for the older scholars and their friends. The event, is one looked forward to each year, entire families making the trip.

The Ladies' Rifle team of the German Shooting club of Lisbon, with their husbands and friends, enjoyed an excursion to New York city, Sunday. The party spent the day at Bronx park, and returned late in the evening.

Miss Edna Baldwin, of Plainfield, spent a short time this week with her cousin, Miss Edith Louise Heap, of South Second avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. John Brown, of Springfield, Mass., who have been guests for the past few days of Mr. Brown's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Yerrington and family, of South Second avenue, motored to Hawk's Nest, Saturday, where they will be guests of Mrs. Brown's sister, before returning to their home in Springfield.

Conrad Tessier, of South A street, has resigned his position with the weaving department of the Ponemah company.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Pisarko, of the Canterbury Turnpike, have as their guest, Alexander Gesack, of Simpson, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Simeon Racette and family, of Canada, have moved to the village and have taken a house on South B street.

Miss Natalie J. Ferris, of Detroit, Mich., is the guest of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wood, of North B street, for the summer.

Another season is rapidly going by without anything being done to extend the state road over Merchants avenue to Norwich Town. The road is in exactly the same condition as it has been for the past few years, the state road from Taftville ending at the Ponemah mills reservoir on the Canterbury Turnpike, and continuing as a country road into Norwich Town. For many years an effort has been made to get this road finished. The selectmen of the town have been working on the case, and a special town meeting was called. However, there is still a delay, and it is said that it is now entirely up to the state officials.

Farmers in the vicinity are reporting a fair hay crop for the season. The big lot north of North B street was mowed Saturday.

Master Charles S. Stone, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Stone, of South B street, celebrated his seventh birthday on Thursday. In the evening, a party was given in his honor on the lawn of his home, and was enjoyed by 9 of his little friends. Ice cream, cake and sandwiches were served. He received a number of presents and the well wishes of his many little friends.

The Ocowasin Camp Fire group met Friday evening at the home of Miss Edith L. Heap, of South Second avenue.

Mrs. Joseph Fletcher is a patient at the William W. Backus hospital, following an operation for appendicitis.

John Reeves, former constable in the village, who now resides with his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander E. Reeves, of Portland, Me., has been spending a few days with a month with relatives.

225,884 CONNECTICUT AUTOMOBILES REGISTERED IN FIRST SIX MONTHS

Women were in a decided minority of 24,716 new operators licensed by the state motor vehicle department in the first six months of this year. Of a total of 28,599 examined as to driving qualifications by the state police, 3,598, or 13.5 per cent., were women. For failure satisfactorily to pass the examination, 1,883 applicants of both sexes were denied licenses. They may apply again at any time and, upon payment of the two-dollar examination fee, be examined again.

Automobiles registered in Connecticut in the first half of the year reached a total of 225,884, which is 1,113 in excess of the whole number of motor vehicles registered in Connecticut during the entire year 1924, and 20,000 in excess of the first half year's registration last year. Motor vehicle department fees, from all sources except the gasoline tax, during the six months up to the first of July aggregated $5,069,454.58, all of which goes to the state highway department, under the law for improvement and extension of the roads. The receipts for the gasoline tax, which are used for the same purposes, have not been computed for the six months.

On the first of this month, there were 235,573 persons licensed to operate motor vehicles in this state, as against 212,898 on the corresponding date of last year. There are approximately 9,600 more licensed operators than registered cars in the state.

Eighteen aircraft have been registered this year and twenty-six aviators were licensed. In the corresponding period of 1924, there were twelve aircraft registered and ten aviators licensed.

Motor vehicle transfers reported to the department for the past six-month period totaled 23,309. The figure for the first half of 1924 was 21,735, indicating a slight increase this year in the motor vehicle sales in the state.

BROCKETT BROTHERS IN COURT OVER LAND DEALS

The third hearing in the suit of Walter D. Brockett of New Haven against Clarence L. Brockett and his wife, Rosina Brockett for $24,000 damages in which a cross complaint has been filed by the defendants for damages of $70,000 is expected to be held in the near future, the exact date of which has not as yet been set. Thirty-nine counts all told, are found in both papers.

Attorney Charles L. Smiddy of New London is a committee of one to hear the facts and has been conducting the hearings in New London.

Attorney Charles F. Roberts of New Haven and the firm of Brown and James of Norwich represent the plaintiff while the defendants are represented by Hull, McGuire & Hull and Attorney Prentis W. Chase of New Haven.

The amended complaint carries the impression that the litigation arose over the Giant's Neck Land and Improvement Co., at East Lyme, in which the two brothers were mixed up.

On Nov. 13, 1909, the plaintiff and defendant and Lawrence B. Brockett, their brother, entered into an agreement with John L. Severance to purchase a parcel of land with buildings thereon at a place commonly known as Giant's Neck, East Lyme, according to the papers. The land was alleged to have comprised 200 acres.

On Oct. 10, 1911, it was alleged that Lawrence sold his share of the property. It was alleged that Walter and Clarence conducted many improvements and Walter alleges that Clarence owes him $6,666.66 as his share of the cost of the improvements.

Walter claims that Clarence and his family occupied the cottage and used a garage for a long time and that the latter owes $1,800 for rent. Walter also claims $550.55 on another count against Clarence.

On Sept. 28, 1916, Clarence and Walter are alleged to have mortgaged the property to the Mariners' Savings bank of New London for $10,000 to secure a note and Walter claims to have paid the $10,000 and interest later.

Walter claims that the transaction in which Clarence made over to his wife, Rosina, certain amounts and property was not bonafide and that it was done to defraud Walter out of collecting what was due from Clarence and that Rosina knew this.

Counts 10 to 26 in Walter's complaint allege loans which he made Clarence during a period from April 28, 1913 to July 16, 1923, amounting to nearly $7,000.

The greater part of the counts are denied by Clarence and he in his cross complaint alleges that from Nov. 13, 1904 to Feb. 13, 1915, Clarence rendered to Walter considerable service at the latter's request, the service being in the lumber business of the Brocketts and in which $23,125 is alleged to be due to Clarence.

Clarence also claims $11,459 due him from Walter as Walter's share of improvements which were made on the property. He also claims that Walter occupied the cottage which Walter claims that Clarence occupied and Clarence alleges that for rent on this, Walter owes him $1,000.

KILLED AT SEATTLE IN AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

Alfred H. Dunham who resigned as teacher of the village school at East Hampton to follow the gold rush in '49, was killed in an automobile accident in Seattle, Wash., according to word received at East Hampton by F. H. Dunham, his brother and only remaining relative.

Mr. Dunham followed the gold trail from California to Alaska, and established the first drug store in Nome, where he stayed several years. After selling his drug store he became a taxidermist, mounting many birds of Alaska, several of which he gave to the New York Museum of Natural History.

In late years he has lived in New York, going to Seattle and Alaska during the summer. He was on one of these trips that he was killed. He was born in East Hampton, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dunham. He is believed to have become wealthy through his prospecting. For several years he travelled over the country as a lecturer on bird life of the north.

GAVE BACHELOR SUPPER AT LANTERN HILL

Fifteen friends of Henry L. Plante of 83 Palmer street were his guests at a bachelor supper given Saturday evening at the cottage of J. Frank Kerrington on Long Pond, Lantern Hill. The party arrived as twilight was falling, giving opportunity to view the beauties of the lake at this time of the day, and shortly afterwards supper was served at the long table set under the trees, with the headlights of the parked automobiles furnishing the illumination for the meal.

A menu that combined quality with abundance was served under the direction of Chef Charles Korn and full justice was done to every item from soup to cigars. The party feasted on ox tail soup, roast chicken, mashed potatoes, native string beans, boiled onions, watermelon and coffee, topped off with cigarettes and cigars.

Victrola selections, quartette and solo numbers were included in the musical entertainment of the delightful evening, which ended at a late hour with a unanimous vote that Mr. Plante was a prince of hosts.

"GATHER UP THE FRAGMENTS" IS FR. REILLY'S TEXT

Having read the gospel for the sixth Sunday after Pentecost, Mark VIII, 1-19, narrating the miracle of the multiplication of the loaves and fishes, Rev. John J. Reilly, preaching at the 9 o'clock mass in St. Patrick's church Sunday, chose for his text words from the story of the same miracle, as told by St. John, VI, 1-15, "Gather up the fragments, lest they be lost." His theme was the significance which the Man-God gave even trifles in life, as furnishing opportunities toward working out one's salvation.

Father Reilly's thought was that few are called upon to make any great sacrifice, or accomplish some glorious deed which the world may acclaim; but that to each come countless opportunities in the habitual, dull, drab duties of daily routine to accept some small denial, suppress utterances that are uncharitable, curb the hasty temper, in a word, to walk with Christ, by bearing patiently, silently, gladly, any little crosses which God's love and wisdom may impose. The loss, the snub, the disappointment, the preacher declared, are no matters of chance; but are allotted each by an all-wise Father as a means of disciplining His children, so that by "gathering up the fragments" of little ordinary troubles and acts of abnegation they may store merit for themselves in the treasury of eternity, make progress toward that saintliness which is pleasing to their Exemplar, Christ.

More especially did the preacher impress the importance of valuing trifles in acquiring the great virtue of purity—the constant and vigilant watch over every possible small temptation and danger likely to prove a source of peril against this virtue, upon which God insists. Looks, words, reading, in countless insidious ways, apparently trivial, irreparable hurt may be worked to the soul.

Not to all is it given to be heroic, was the lesson which the speaker drove home; but to even the humblest come innumerable chances to perform little acts of service and sacrifice dear to the Sacred Heart, sure to be gathered up as fragments certain to win divine approval and reward eternally.

There was the customary large number at the altar for Holy Communion, following confession the day before. In giving Communion Father Reilly was assisted by Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May, the rector.

TOBYHANNA TOPICS FROM BATTERY B IN CAMP

If the following letter received from Battery B of this city, now in camp at Tobyhanna, Pa., may be used as a sample, the boys are evidently having a fine time away from home. The letter follows:

The boys of Battery B arrived at Tobyhanna Monday about 12:40 a. m. They detrained and marched to camp where they retired for the rest of the morning for the first time under canvas. The time since arrival in camp has been devoted to artillery and school of soldiers.

The weather has been unsettled but all hope for a clear sky. The camp is situated on the Lackawanna railroad, 34 miles northwest of Scranton, and the air is most refreshing and the scenery wonderful.

The rookies are receiving their usual razzing and looking for things that can never be found. Sergeant Seifert, our rookie sergeant, would make a better sailor than a soldier because he is always at sea and it is said that he would furnish the sideshow for some dull night.

Bugler Gordon has composed a new call entitled, Jumble Call, which is a combination of tattoo, mess call and retreat mixed together. The question of the hour, however, is where did our three rookies disappear in the lamp-lights of Tobyhanna.

The Battery boasts of two up-to-date shicks, one from the village of Taftville and the other from Jewett City, and they are none other than Privates Robertson and Gaffney, who may be seen picking daisies along the road anywhere. Corporal Gernhard and Mechanic Fitzgerald were seen picking daisies on the shores of Lake Porono and the Battery is wondering why.

Tractor Driver Joe Beausolell is to be relieved of the responsibility of driver owing to the fact that it is impossible to run the engine because of his own hot air. Young Dennison is wondering about the camp wishing it was Camp Laurel or looking for girls with white felt hats.

Private Doolittle is longing to be in the wilds of Ledyard for he is homesick. He did not give the boys milking lessons this year because there is no cow in camp.

Sergeant Calkins first thing in the morning, "You men-up and at them—on your toes—some day you will learn to be a soldier." We wonder.

Private Welsh tried to commit himself to the hospital by falling over a match.

Flynn and Johnson are running a close race for president of kitchen police.

Professor Jack Chancerelle is at least becoming a soldier. Already he has been graduated from K. P. and is now on guard duty. We know this is true because he told us so.

Mechanic Rinehart is becoming an artist of no mean ability with the scissors as he has already cut out a number of pretty paper dolls.

Corporal Fenton, alias "The Alemite Kid," is seen tracing the plans and training officers. The boys think he is looking for lice.

Battery B boasts of being the hollest outfit in camp because we always have Private Angell in the company street.

Private Brauman, a rookie, received his initiation at the cruel hands of the sticker squad. He pleaded that the boys use him gently but after a few moments of entertainment he was dismissed.

Sergeant Beasde has acquired the reputation of being the most kind-hearted sergeant in camp, as he has never refused to give the boys anything, his favorite answer being, "See me tomorrow."

Ask Private Saunders if he is going to town with Corporal Goodrow and get another nagie besides, "up-and-at-em Saunders." Are the people of Straussburg too fast for him?

It might be all right for the cooks and mess sergeant to put cake in the rice pudding but they might be kind enough to take the wrapping paper off first task Corporal Fenton.)

First Cook Lester, after putting twenty-five years in the U. S. service was about to retire but changed his mind, saying, "there is no place like home."

I wonder why Corporal Gernhard is company clerk instead of gun sergeant.

Mechanic Fitzgerald is said to be the best mechanic in camp. The proof of the pudding is shown when I let you wise to the fact that he uses a crosscut saw for a ripsaw.

We're having a fine time and intend to keep on having one until we reach home later in the month.

SPEAKS ON NATION'S MOST IMPORTANT HOUR

In every crisis in the history of the world some important personality has stood out above the rest, said Rev. F. P. Campbell, of Hartford, in his sermon, A Nation's Most Important Hour, delivered Sunday evening at the Central Baptist church. Someone, he said, has always pointed out the right way, the way back to the right track. Often the suggestions have not been heeded at the time they were made, but in years afterwards they were carried out.

In the story of the children of Israel there are two outstanding characters, Caleb and Joshua, who gave their advice to the Hebrews only to have their suggestions turned down. The children of Israel had lost their great traditions, they had neglected to pass on the word of the promise of God, made to the Hebrew nation and when the time arrived to enter the promised land eight objectors, eight weak men, compelled the people to go back and wait for 38 years before they reached the promised land. These two men, I like to believe, began to teach the children of God's promise and when the Hebrews again entered the promised land they had faith in God's promise.

In church life and in many other things the failure to harness the ability of young people, to teach them the truth, has stopped progress. Preachers and men must teach the young people the true word that they may safely guide the church in future years.

A crisis faces the world today, and one faces our own country. We must rid ourselves of racial and color distinctions and learn to know each other as brothers and sisters. We must not shun immoral people, but should make it our duty to guide them back to the ways of right. We should be big enough to see brothers in every class and color and in every station in life, for no people are too little to have an important part in the promises of religion. The world should become as one brotherhood of man.

This kind of teaching in the church and at the home altar would save our children from being sacrificed on the altar of war. America has a challenge to face and that is to give to the world a generation of leaders who are pure, honest and noble. Nationalism often is pride disguised and leads to no good, for under God all nations have an essential and tremendous contribution to make to the world.

We must beware lest the power of gold makes greater slaves of us than the Egyptians ever made of the Hebrews. We must develop a generation that cannot be bought with gold, a generation that will seek to make the world a brotherhood and stand for fair play and equal rights for all mankind, regardless of race, color or station.

LOVING CUP SHOWN FOR BASEBALL PRIZE

On display in the Reid & Hughes Co., window, is a large loving cup which is to be awarded to the winner of the baseball series Norwich playground nine versus Plainfield high school, to be engraved as directed by the winning team.

Supervisor Earle E. Brigham has very kindly and with great effort gotten together his academy team of 1925, calling it for this purpose the Norwich playground nine and Ovilla Allard, manager of the Plainfield high school team has also shown great interest and given much time and trouble to getting his men lined up. Inasmuch as there is much rivalry between the teams lovers of baseball are sure to enjoy three peppy games!

Baseball is only one of the splendid features of the unique three-day garden party given for the benefit of the Congregational church organ fund in Central Village. Baseball games are daily at 2:30.

MAN NAMED BAKER MAKES SUICIDE THREAT

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 12—A man who said his name was Baker appeared at the Y. M. C. A. about 10 o'clock tonight and left two packages with the clerk with the request that they be kept for him. About an hour later Baker telephoned to the clerk requesting that the packages be kept there and not be delivered to anyone except such person as could identify them as he was going to commit suicide. The police were notified and Motorcycle Officer Augustus Ray determined that the telephone message was sent from a station at the Western Union Telegraph office, but the officer could not locate Baker. At the Y. M. C. A. Baker was unknown to any of the employes there and so far as they knew Baker had not been there before, neither could the employes give anything like an accurate description of Baker.

POETRY

THE WINGED WORSHIPERS.

Gay, guiltless pair,
What seek ye from the fields of heaven
Ye have no need of prayer,
Ye have no sins to be forgiven.

Why perch ye here,
Where mortals to their Maker bend?
Can your pure spirits fear
The God ye never could offend?

Ye never knew
The crimes for which we come to weep,
Penance is not for you,
Blessed wanderers of the upper deep.

To you 'tis given
To wake sweet nature's unjaught lays,
Beneath the arch of heaven
To chirp away a life of praise.

Then spread each wing,
Far, far above, o'er lakes and lands,
And join the choirs that sing
In yon blue dome not reared with hands.

Or, if ye stay
To note the consecrated hour,
Teach me the airy way,
And let me try your envied power.

On upward winds could I but fly,
I'd bathe in you bright cloud,
And seek the stars that gem the sky.

'T were heaven, indeed,
Through fields of trackless light to soar,
On nature's charms to feed,
And nature's own great God adore.

—Charles Sprague.

ALLAH'S REBUKE.

Why strain the sinew, fire the wit, a mad horse chafing on the bit?
The Rider only seeth it, the goal whereto He goeth, fool!

Although thou canst not see His Face, astride upon thee in the race
He draws the rein or speeds the pace whenas thy nostril gloweth, fool!

A mane of silk, a burnished hide, an eyeball milky-white and wide
But mock the steed that mocks the Guide toward the goal He knoweth, fool!

And thou, a rebel to His Hand, by gusts of the sirocco fanned,
Shalt perish nigh the drifts of sand whereon thy hot foot goeth, fool!

Thou hast been angry, and thy teeth have been as iron underneath
The flinty tongue, and all thy breath a flame whereon one bloweth, fool!

Let not thy gusty anger gain dominion over thee and strain
The grasp of Him that draws the rein to guide thee where He knoweth, fool!

—Wilfrid Thorley.

COURT STUDIES INDICTMENT IN TENN. EVOLUTION CASE

Judge Raulston Has Retired to Consider the Question of Whether the Indictment Shall Be Summarily Dismissed —Court Was Adjourned For the Night as Arguments Over the Motion to Quash Were Concluded — Half a Dozen Oral Arguments Were Presented to the Court During the Day.

DAYTON, Tenn., July 13—(A. P.)—Judge John T. Raulston, presiding at the trial of John Thomas Scopes, on a charge of violating the law of the state of Tennessee, making it a misdemeanor to teach theories of evolution in the public schools, retired to his chamber tonight to study the question of whether the indictment against the 24 year old school teacher shall be summarily quashed. The judge carried with him briefs of the half score points stressed by the contending sides in the case while ringing in his judicial ears were words from half a dozen oral arguement presented to the court during the day.

It was the first of perhaps other days to be devoted entirely to oratory.

Clarence Darrow and Attorney General Stewart concluded their arguments over the motion to quash as court was adjourned for the night. They concluded the arguments for the defense and the prosecution respectively.

Darrow termed the law one which would lead to enactments all pointing toward fanaticism and leading to a climax which would recall the days of the Spanish inquisition.

Argument by Attorney Stewart

The attorney general contended that the law was within the police powers of the state and the legislature had the right to control the curriculm of the schools it maintained and created.

The attorney general contnatted the defense motion vigorously. He maintained that the indictment against Scopes was legal; that the act was not unconstitutional and was within the right of the state legislature.

"If the state legislature is not to control the public schools, who shall?" he questioned. He read excerpts from the decission of the state supreme court in the case of Leger as the State of Tennessee in which was involved the right of the legislature to control public schools. The Leger decision was termed one which established a precedent in Tennessee for similar case.

"The power of control of the public schools must be lodged somewhere," Attorney General Stewart said, "and where is a better place than the legislature?"

The charge is made here that it is not within the power of the legislature to pass such an act; the right of the people to religious liberty," he continued.

"This is injected into this case only because the bible is mentioned. If the legislature has the right to say that no certain theory shall be taught in the public schools, it has to right to say that no theory shall be taught that denies the story of creation as taught in the bible.

"I say that the legislature has the right to pass such a law and the question of religious liberty only was brought up because the bible was mentioned."

Mr. Stewart in his argument, quoted the following from the so called Nebraska case as found in the United States supreme court reporter.

"The power of the state to compel attendance at some school and to make reasonable regulations for all schools, including a requirement that they shall give instructions in English is not questioned. Nor has challenge been made of the state's power to prescribe a curriculum for instructions which supports those matters are not within the present controversy."

Attorney Darrow's Argument

Mr. Darrow began his argument, speaking slowly with a pronounced drawl.

"Within limitations, the legislature has the right to determine what shall be taught in the public schools" he said.

"Back a number of years ago when people were free, the people of Tennessee wrote a constitution. They made it broad and said that the people should enjoy religious freedom.

"There is not a single line of any constitution that can withstand bigotry. Here we find today as brazen and bold an attempt to destroy learning as was made in the middle ages.

"If these proceedings in form and substance can prevail in this section, then any law, no matter how ignorant and foolish, can be made to prevail. All the guarantees have gone for nothing. It is absolutely absurd to think that this patent indictment or any of the proceedings in this case are legal.

"I think the sooner we get rid of it in Tennessee, the better for the state. Let us begin at the beginning. The first point we made in this statute is that it is unconstitutional on account of the difference between the caption and the act.

"All the people don't read the laws. Everything that is in an act shall be embodied in the caption. Of course the caption may be broader than the act, but the substance of the act must be in the caption."

He then read the caption, stressing the portion, "an act to prevent the teaching of the evolution theory."

"There isn't a word said in the statute in reference to the evolution theory," he continued. "The caption says nothing about the bible or the divine account of the creation.

"If a person was interested in the right to worship God as he saw fit, he would find out that chaos and riot would follow in the wake of this bill.

"The intelligent Christian citizens in this country find no conflict between religion and the theory of evolution.

"Is there anything in this caption about religion, or about science, literature and religion? They went to bed in peace, probably after reading this caption and woke up to find this work of bigotry.

"This is as plain an instance of religious bigotry as any instance of the Spanish Inquisition."

Darrow then read the act itself, stressing the words "to teach any theory of the origin of man except that contained in the Divine account as taught in the Bible.

"That was what was forced upon the people under a caption which never meant it. The state of Tennessee has no more right to assume that the Bible account of the creation is correct than it has to assume that that of the Koran or Confucianism or any one of a dozen others is the correct one.

"If the courts of Tennessee stand behind their own constitution these gentlemen will have to arrange their cohorts and go back.

"Of all the weird, impossible things, of all the bigotry and ignorance, I can't conceive of anything greater than this law.

"A statute should be comprehensible. But does this statute tell what you shall teach and what you shall not? No, no, it simply says you shall not teach any theory of the creation that is contrary to the Divine creation, no legislature in any state in the union is strong enough to say what is Divine.

"What is the Bible? In a general way I know what it is. I know that there are millions of people in the world who look on it as the Divine book. I know that there are millions of people who derive consolation in times of trouble from the Bible. God, I would be the last one in the world to take any action to take it away. I feel just exactly the same about any other religious creeds.

"Instead of fighting each other as in the past, the peoples of the different religions should help each other."

He then took up a discussion of the different theories of the origin of man which he said a man must consider before he would know what he could teach. The bill, he said, does not say what a man cannot teach.

"It only says that he must not teach anything conflicting with the Bible.'

"Who is the chief mogul?" he querled, "so man can tell us just what the Bible means? He ought to write a book and tell us all about it. Different sects have been disagreeing over it through the ages.

"Such a man must know not only everything about the Bible, but all about evolution. No criminal statute may rest that way. Every criminal statute must be plain and simple. If Mr. Scopes is to be indicted because he taught a wrong theory of the origin of life, why not tell him what he must teach.

"Nothing like that was ever known of until the fundamentalists made their brave charge upon the intelligence of the people of Tennessee.

"When we measure science by something we know just what we are measuring it by. No man could obey such an indefinite law; no court enforce it.

"Now, let's look at this indictment. If this is a good one, then I have never seen one."

With one finger through his suspenders, standing well back on his feet, Darrow then read the indictment.

"Scopes is here because the fundamentalists are after everybody who thinks. He is here because ignorance and bigotry have combined. But the state must tell him why he is here by indictment.

After the shooting is all over here and Scopes has paid his fine some one may indict him all over again. One thing I have never been able to account for is the hatred and venom of some people of very little religious convictions.

"If there is another indictment in Tennessee like this one I have never been able to find it."

"You might just as well indict a man for being no good," he said.

"This legislation and all similar legislation that human malice can concect is void because it violates Section 12, Section 13 and Section 3.

"Section 12 provides that the state shall protect science, literature and learning. I want to say that the construction the attorney general gave to that section is correct.

"The state by constitution has permitted the doctrine of education. I presume that when it is committed to education, it means the teaching of the truth. That indicates the policy of the state of Tennessee.

"But we insist that this statute is absolutely void because it conflicts with the right to worship freely.

"If this section of the constitution of Tennessee cannot be sustained in the spirit it cannot be sustained in the letter. Free minds don't think alike. . . .

"Suppose I am a pseudo-scientist and I believe in evolution. Can the legislature say that you cannot read a book or take a lesson in evolution, without first ascertaining whether it conflicts with the Bible?

"The legislature has the right to say what shall be taught in the public schools within limits," he said, "but they certainly cannot say that every one must believe in the Bible account of creation."

"Nothing turns the minds of human beings into fiends like religious hatred and bigotry," he asserted. "If today we can make it a crime to teach it in the high schools, next year you can bar it from the private schools; the next you can prohibit books to be circulated, and later you can lead to such a point that you will set man against man, and send Protestants against Catholics."

He pictured the possible consequences of such action graphically, in concluding his argument.

League For Peace and Freedom.

INNSBRUCK, Austria, July 13.—(A. P.)—In welcoming the delegates to the conference of the International League for Peace and Freedom, which opened here Saturday, the Austrian director, Mme. Hirt, declared that women, because they were naturally humane, might claim the right to supplement, even replace if necessary, men's political activity, as men apparently stray into the ways of violence and destruction. Four American women are among the thirty delegates. The conference is under the presidency of Mme. Gabrielle Duchense, of France.

CONTROVERSY IN BRITISH COAL MINING INDUSTRY

LONDON, July 13.—(A. P.)—The mining dispute assumed an entirely new phase today with the government's announcement of its intention to institute a board of inquiry into the dispute under the industrial courts act. The terms of reference are "to inquire into the causes and circumstances of the dispute in the coal mining industry."

The questions and answers following upon Premier Baldwin's announcement of this decision in the house of commons seemed to indicate that the ministers arrived at the decision without first obtaining the acquiescence of either mine owners or the miners federation. But it is believed that there will be no strong opposition to the government's plan.

The only doubt is whether the miners' conference now sitting at Scarborough will back up the federation's insistence that the Mine Owners' association shall withdraw the recent notice terminating the national agreement.

The proposed court will be entirely independent; it will consist of only three members—the Right Honorable Hugh Fattison MacMillan, lord advocate of Scotland, chairman, Sir Josiah Stamp, who was British representative on the reparation commission's (Dawes) committee on currency and finance in 1924, and W. Sherwood, trade union leader and organizing secretary of the Municipal Workers' union.

The court will hear witnesses and make recommendations, but will have no power to enforce its findings. The government's chief aim is said to be to place all the facts impartially before the public.

NINE FEET OF WATER IN EAST RIVER SUBWAY

NEW YORK, July 13.—(A. P.)—The "subway river" which threatened calamity to the city when a water main burst last night, was still flowing 9 feet deep through the Steinway tunnel under the East river tonight.

Undermining of skyscraper foundations, which was at first feared possible, but declared unlikely by engineers, the shuttle service between Grand Central station and Times square had been resumed and the probability of flooding of the East Side system had been averted but the transportation situation was still acute tonight.

Despite the herculean efforts of a small army of workmen, directed by city engineers, to repair the havoc wrought by the flood, thousands of commuters, pouring from offices this evening, found flood conditions of the morning still prevailing.

Traffic congestion at the Grand Central station during rush hour tonight was the worst in years, despite emergency measures of police and subway officials to expedite traffic movement.

Steinway tunnel probably will not be available for service for twenty-four hours, subway officials said.

All vehicular and pedestrian traffic at Fifth avenue and 42nd street, called the "busiest corner in the world," was suspended until late today, a yawning hole in the street and a depression in the Fifth avenue sidewalk attesting to the undermining effects of the flood. Only crosstown cars are permitted to pass; all other traffic is barred.

IMPORTANT DISCOVERY MADE OF CANCER GERM

LONDON, July 13.—(A. P.)—The Lancet, leading British medical journal, in its forthcoming issue, will emphasize the importance of the discovery of the cancer germ by Dr. William E. Gye, a member of the British Institute of Medical Research, and Dr. J. E. Barnard, of King's college, London.

A paper has been prepared by Dr. Gye on "The Etiology of Milignant New Growths," which the Lancet will publish. The Lancet says that Dr. Gye has succeeded in rendering the cancer virus visible, and even photographing it.

Further the Lancet says the results of Dr. Barnard's observations so closely correspond with the experimental results obtained by Dr. Gye that "the existence of a living cancer virus would appear to be established and these observations may represent the solution of the central problem of cancer."

DEMOCRATS PREPARING FOR CONGRESSIONAL CAMPAIGN

WASHINGTON, July 13—With the democrats already laying the foundation for al determined campaign to regain control of congress, the 1925 congressional elections give promise now of attracting an unusual share of national interest.

Under the leadership of Representative Oldfield, of Arkansas, the Democratic congressional committee has begun its organization work with a view to centering its efforts largely in what are generally regarded as the close districts.

At the same time, the republican organization is preparing to meet the attacks in those centers and also to carr ythe fight to the enemy in a number of democratic strongholds.

Returning today from organization meetings in Missouri and Indiana, Representative Oldfield announced that he would leave soon for a swing through the west on a similar mission.

China Has Rejected British Proposal

KELLOGG IS AWAITING THE RESULTS OF CONFERENCES

WASHINGTON, July 13—(A. P.)—Supported by specific presidential approval of the policy he has mapped out for dealing with the Chinese problem, Secretary Kellogg was back from his interrupted vacation today awaiting results of conferences in Peking and elsewhere through which the protocol powers are expected to work out ways and means of insuring the protection of their nationals in China.

There was no indication that the diplomatic conversations in various capitals has as yet reached a stage where the exact course to be followed could be forecast. As Mr. Kellogg himself pointed out after his conference with President Coolidge last week at the summer White House, the policy of the Washington government was based on the desire to give effect to the commitments into which it had entered with respect to China at the Washington arms limitation conference.

The chief features of those commitments, in view of present conditions in China relate to a resolution calling for the creation of a commission to study and report on the question of relinquishing extra territorial rights in China, on the one hand and the treaty engagement for a revision of Chinese customs rates on the other.

With relation to the extra territorial question, the Washington government has confined its suggestions to the other powers to the proposal that the commission, provided for by resolution number five adopted by the Washington conference, be appointed at an early date, so a beginning can be made on what is certain to be a long process of discussion and debate. All of the governments whose nationals are involved in the Chinese disturbances are signatory to that resolution.

PLEA FOR FINANCES BY ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE

HARTFORD, July 13.—(AP)—Its treasury greatly depleted by a campaign of propaganda it conducted in the interest of the so-called Wheeler bill to strengthen the state enforcement act, which was so overwhelmingly defeated in the legislature, the Connecticut Anti-Saloon league has broadcast a plea for immediate financial assistance.

The appeal, in the form of a letter signed by Dr. E. V. Claypool, superintendent of the Connecticut Anti-Saloon league, has been sent, according to Dr. Claypool, to the league's regular supporters. The letter reads:

"The months of July and August are our hardest financial months. The Anti-Saloon league, during the legislative night and in preparation for it, spent more than it was receiving and we face the hard summer season in poor shape. We need not only to meet ordinary fixed expenses during these months but to make some special preparation for the work of the fall and winter.

"If it is possible for you to send us a dollar or more, either as a special contribution or as advanced payment on your subscription, it would be a relief to us. We can make a special plea at this time only to those who are known to be interested in our work as you are.

"We are grateful for that which you have done for us and would not urge this beyond your own judgment as to what is right for us to do in this case."

Deluge of Applicants For the "Dry" Offices

A Considerable Number of Names Have Been Presented by Members of House and Senate.

WASHINGTON, July 13—A deluge of appeals, suggestions and demands for appointments under the re-organized federal prohibition enforcement program was waiting tonight to break over the desk of Assistant Secretary Andrews of the treasury upon his return tomorrow from a brief vacation.

With the approach of the effective date of the reorganization, August 1, the list of men advanced as "available" for the limited number of executive assignments has mounted rapidly. A considerable number of these names have been presented by members of the house and senate despite the announcement that the treasury desired, through the reorganization to eliminate to some extent the question of patronage, as one means of increasing efficiency in the service.

Mr. Andrews has said that he hoped to determine within another week the personnel of the new enforcement organization. And in the last week half a dozen members of the house and senate have called upon him to advance the claims to certain constituents. Some of them have gone away apparently convinced that their particular patronage had been cared for.

Acting Secretary Winston of the treasury objected today, however, to statements that politicians were making inroads into the new organization. It was his understanding that Mr. Andrews' policies and program had received the hearty accord of those political leaders who had talked them over at the treasury.

"But we must, of course, pay some attention to the recommendations made by senators and representatives," he said. "They are entitled to consideration. Yet it must be understood that we want the best man available."

COURT DECIDES DISMISSAL OF POLICE CAPTAIN JUSTIFIED

BRIDGEPORT, July 13.—(AP)—In a decision handed down this afternoon Judge Arthur F. Ells, of the superior court, decided that the action taken by the selectmen of the town of Westport in dismissing Walter T. Duffy as captain of police, was justified. Duffy's contention when the case was taken to the superior court was that the hearing after which he was dismissed was held behind closed doors and he was only admitted when it became time for him to appear before the selectmen. He also claimed that his dismissal came about because of political strife.

In his decision, Judge Ells advocates open hearing for such cases, but declared that the selectmen were privileged to keep it a secret if they so wished.

P.)—The challenge to the governor to debate the Bridgeport "ripper" bill which Mayor Behrens, of Bridgeport issued Saturday, was dismissed by Governor Trumbull today with the statement that it was Mayor Behrens' duty, as well as his, to execute the laws adopted by the legislature and "nothing is to be gained by post-mortems."

FRENCH GOVERNMENT HAS 33 BILLION FRANC BUDGET

Measure Had Been Before Parliament For Almost a Year— As Passed the Budget Carries a Balance of 13,000,000 Francs on the Right Side of the Ledger—Action Clears the Way to Float a Gold Coupon Refunding Loan, to Negotiate Debt Settlement and Discuss a Peace Pact With Germany.

PARIS, July 13.—(A. P.)—France finally has a budget and the government has about three months freedom from parliamentary bother in which to speed up the Moroccan war, evacuate the Ruhr, float a gold coupon refunding loan, negotiate a debt settlement and discuss a peace pact with Germany.

Premier Painleve and Finance Minister Caillaux had the budget voted in time for breakfast by threatening to resign. They forced through the 33,000,000,000 franc budget, with a balance of 13,000,000 on the right side of the ledger, but Senator Berenger reminded them that there were certain treasury expenses carried outside the budget that must be abolished in the 1926 document, which M. Caillaux introduced in skeleton form just as this year's budget was adopted. The present budget lacked eighteen days of being before the parliament for a full year.

The government at the same time parted company with a big section of the left coalition majority, which is now a minority, and accepted the votes of the former opposition, as it did on the Moroccan interpellations.

Political observers regard the negative votes of the socialists and radical socialists as a definite break with the premier. This break has been impending so long, however, that there is slight concern over it. Particularly as parliament is on vacation and many things may happen between now and fall. The government in any case seems sure of support from the right on all questions of national interest, and its previously supposed moral obligation to resign if it lost the support of the majority that put it in power is a theory apparently that does not work in practice.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE SPENT A QUIET DAY YESTERDAY

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., July 13.—(AP)—Again on vacation schedule after a week-end of conference on foreign affairs, President Coolidge spent today quietly, receiving no callers at White Court and transacting little business.

The executive apparently was content to leave in the hands of Secretary Kellogg the carrying into effect of the administration's policy toward China, announced by the secretary of state before his departure from Washington late yesterday after he had gone over both Chinese and foreign debt situations with the president.

There were no developments in either, White House officials even declining to comment on the published reports from Tokio that Great Britain, Japanese and United States have agreed on a policy toward China, both the British and American governments making concessions to reach an accord.

Turning his attention briefly to routine government matters, Mr. Coolidge made an appointment, that of Floyd R. Harrison, a native of Virginia, to succeed Frank W. Mondell whose resignation as director of the War Finance corporation becomes effective Wednesday.

Tomorrow the president will receive at White Court H. G. Harris, of Medford, who will call to pay his respects with others who served on the Massachusetts executive council, when Mr. Coolidge was governor. On Thursday, the president will have as his luncheon guest County Skrzymski, the Polish minister of foreign affairs, and later in the day will receive the new Egyptian minister who will present his credentials.

TO STOP THE LEAKAGE OF "HIGH POWER" BEER

WASHINGTON, July 13—(A. P.)—The government is preparing to launch a new campaign to stop the leakage of "high power" beer.

New regulations are being drawn looking to more drastic action against the brewer of the illicit commodity. They are intended to be so definite and positive as to assure speedy action by the United States attorneys in court procedure against violators of the beer section of the national dry law.

The program contemplates demanding that the owner of every "potential brewery" obtain a federal permit before operation of his plant will be construc das within the law, a system of intelligence by which the brewers may be kept under constant surveillance has been worked out, and the removal from such a plant of "high power" beer, or any beer containing more than one half of one per cent. of alcohol by volume, will be cause for action by the prohibition agents.

The second important phase of the regulations is desired to compel speed in the offices of United States attorneys. Provision is made that the prohibition agents who develop the evidence may keep tab on the progress of each case in court.

BOWDOIN COMPELLED TO RETURN TO HOPEDALE

WASHINGTON, July 13—(A. P.)—The Bowdoin, one of the ships of the MacMillan Arctic expedition, has been compelled to turn back to Hopedale, Labrador, to repair a propeller.

Information on the accident was sent to the National Geographic Society here by radio from the Bowdoin.

The message, not dated, but apparently sent early this morning said:

Godhaven for coal. She left at 1:30 this

"Have ordered Peary to proceed to morning and damaged propeller on the Bowdoin and before the 600 mile run to Baffin Bay have decided to return to Hopedale to beach the Bowdoin and fit our spare propeller. Must find good beach free of rocks and sheltered from strong winds.

"Hope to leave Hopedale, Tuesday July 14, weather permitting. Well and happy."

CHICAGO, July 13.—AP)—Baron Ago Von Maltzan, German ambassador to the United States, at a luncheon today at the Chicago Club, presided over by Vice President Dawes, praised the operation of the Dawes plan and thanked the people of the United States for their generous contributions to the rehabilitation of Germany after the war.

JOHN R. ALLEN IDENTIFIED BY BANK MESSENGERS

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., July 13.—(AP)—Three bank messengers today identified John R. Allen of Roslindale, captured yesterday while attending the funeral of his father in West Quincy as the leader of a band which took part in three holdups in this city in which the loot aggregated more than $35,000. Allen is held in jail in default of $100,000 on secret indictments for the September term of the Middlesex superior court.

E. MacQuarrie, the messenger in charge of an armored automobile of the American Trust company of Boston, which was stolen and robbed by an armed band last Friday in front of the Neapolitan Ice Cream company's offices, here, pointed Allen out as one of his assailants.

Later Herbert T. Hume, messenger of the Guaranty Trust company of Cambridge, indicated Allen as the man who held him up and robbed him of $15,500 as the bank car approached the West Boston bridge on the morning of May 26, 1924. The third identification was made by Thomas J. Hoban and Charles Pompey, driver and guard of an automobile delivering money for the First National bank of Boston which was held up and robbed of $22,950, at the plant of Lever Brothers here several weeks ago.

Bail for Allen, which was set at $50,000 after his arrest, was increased today to double the amount. Police officers who had been searching for the man on secret indictments returned by the Middlesex county grand jury, heard that his father's funeral was to be held yesterday and attended in the hope that Allen would appear. After interment Allen was arrested at the cemetery.

YACHTS NOW TIED IN THE SEAWANHAKA CUP RACE

ROTHESAY, Scotland, July 13.—(AP)—Both the challenger for the Seawanhaka cup, the American yacht Lanai, and the defender, the British yacht Coila, have one race to their credit, the Lanai having left its opponent becalmed today, reversing the outcome of the first race on Saturday. The time of the Lanai was 6 hours 54 minutes, 22 seconds.

The absence of a breeze again made the racing rather uninteresting and compelled its postponement until mid-afternoon, when a moderate southerly breeze began to blow.

The Lanai's time for the first round was 4 hours 28 minutes 58 seconds, while the time of the Coila was 4 hours 29 minutes 10 seconds.

The second round started in a better breeze, and the Lanai's tackling was superior to that in the first round. At the weather mark the American boat had increased her lead to 2 1-2 minutes. She got home the winner just as another calm left the Coila in the middle of the Firth.

NO CLUES IN SEARCH FOR PHILIP K. KNAPP

MINEOLA, N. Y., July 13.—(AP)—Sergeant Harold King, of the Nassau county police, returned today from northern New York, reported that no workable clues had been found in the search for Phillip K. Knapp, wanted for the slaying of Louis Penella, a taxicab driver.

The signature "E. K. Rogers," on the register of the Stanwix hotel of Albany, was the only piece of possible evidence that could be found concerning the deserter, King reported. He said the handwriting was unmistakably that in which Penella's name was signed to a bill of sale, when his automobile was sold by his supposed slayer. The description of the man known as Rogers tallied well with Knapp, he said. Rogers left the hotel hurriedly July 7, failing to pay his bill.

King visited Glens Falls, Saratoga and Alexandria Bay.

WILLIMANTIC

Wilfrid Delude, Gilbert Lewis, and Everett Sypher, charged with breach of the peace and assault and battery and John Moran, charged with breach of the peace, pleaded not guilty in the police court Monday morning. Louis Babcock, an employe at the American Thread Company plant, was the complainant. He alleged that he was suddenly assaulted by the four men, last Wednesday night. He received blows on the face and blood flowed from his nose and mouth. He was positive of the identity of the quartet. Harold Higgins, who accompanied Babcock up to a point near where the assault took place, said that he saw the young men before the attack and that Moran told him to "shake Babcock" as they wanted to give him a beating-up. The four men accused pleaded not guilty and Delude produced Joseph Nolan who testified that he gave Delude a ride home in his automobile about three-quarters of an hour before the alleged assault took place. Lewis said that he was in the company of a girl at the time and Moran said that he was home. State Policeman Keith testified to being summoned to the Babcock home and seeing the complainant with blood coming from his mouth and lips. He learned from Babcock who the assailants were and later arrested them. Judge Foss stated that although the case was a regrettable one and that he would have shown more leniency if the truth had been told, the practice of assaulting people must stop. He imposed fines of $25 on each, dividing the costs of $15.70 among the four defendants. All took an appeal to the superior court and were released, under bonds of $100 each.

Frank J. Curley, of 951 Great Plains Avenue, Needham, Mass., drove his Ford to this city, got very much intoxicated and was finally placed under arrest, early Monday morning, after cutting capers on the lawn of the James B. Fullerton home with his lizzy. When the complaint came in at police headquarters that a wild west performer was going through his stunts in a Ford on the Fullerton lawn, Officer William Higley went there and found the car half way up on the lawn with the remainder of the body balancing on the stone wall. Curley was lying in a helpless condition at the wheel. He was practically carried to headquarters and the damaged machine was driven to a garage by Lieutenant McLean. In police court later Curley pleaded not guilty to a charge of operating his motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor and asked to have his case continued for one week. The court granted this and fixed a bond of $300 for his appearance Monday, July 20.

A miscellaneous shower was tendered Miss Mabel Jenkins daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Jenkins of Holyoke, Mass., formerly of this city, at a local tea room Monday evening. The affair was in honor of Miss Jenkins approaching marriage with William E. Hughes, recently of Putnam, now of Holyoke. The hostesses for the evening were Misses Eleanor Moriarty and Alice Sweeney. Miss Jenkins was ushered into the dining hall at 6 o'clock and was suitably confronted by her friends who stood about the table amid decorations of red and white. The menu comprised fruit cocktail, chicken salad, French fried potatoes, iced tea, ice cream with fresh raspberries and two bread cake. In the cake were numerous favors predicting the finder's success in love. In keeping with the red and white color scheme the many gifts to the bride were cleverly arranged in a huge imitation firecracker, which stood in the center of the table, and from which the guest of honor scraped her presents by means of ribbons which streamed to her plate. Individual favors and small firecrackers containing verses which were read to the bride were at each place. Others present were: Mabel E. Jenkins, Mrs. Clarence A. Jenkins, Mrs. Joseph Simpson, Miss Cathleen Culgan, Mrs. George Hughes, Miss Helen and Miss Mabel Sweeney, Miss Mae Moriarty, and Miss Ray W. Downer.

(Special to the Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, July 13—Charles Haddad and David Tellage, silk weavers in this city have been working industriously in local mills with the cherished dream of some day operating a plant of their own. Although the odds appeared against them they persisted and now it appears that "it can be done" in spite of many discouragements. Haddad has resigned from his job as a weaver at the Windham Silk Company and Tellage likewise quit as a weaver at the Rossie Velvet company.

The two went to Paterson, N. J., rented a small silk plant and are now operating twenty looms, with a good number of orders on hand.

Activities at St. Peter's school Hebron, are receiving the attention of many in eastern Connecticut who are interested in the liberal and humane studies which make up the courses of the school. The social programs are not only delightful, but highly educational representing, as they do, studied interpretation of classics in music and dramatics. The members of the school had a picnic at Ocean Beach Saturday afternoon. An organ recital by Dean Warren was recently given with the following program: Processional, Guilmant. Prelude and Fugue in E minor, Bach. Andante from concerto in E minor, Mendelssohn; recessional, Dubois. Fanfare, Lemmens. Vocal solos were given by the rector, Rev. T. D. Martin. DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

A program so ambitious that, if carried out in its entirety would involve the expenditure of approximately $150,000 by the town of Killingly for improved school facilities, may be considered as outlined, but not approved, before the special committee of the town having in hand the investigation of what should be done.

An addition to Killingly high school, a general renovation of the Danielson graded school, extensive repairing and improvements at the Dayville school, better facilities for Attawaugan and for Goodyear are all under discussion and consideration at this time.

It does appear that Killingly is face to face with the need of doing certain things to increase its school facilities. Whether the town will be willing to meet the cost of doing all that it would be wonderful to do is a question that likely will not be decided until the electors have the matter before them through the committee's report at the annual town meeting in October.

At this time it is too early to anticipate, even, what the committee will recommend. At this date the committee has not decided. Following a meeting of the committee and much discussion of various plans and projects, it has been decided to have a sub-committee, made up of Messrs F. A. Jacobs, F. E. Bugbee and William Kinder make a special and detailed inspection of the properties under consideration and report back not later than August 15.

It will be news to the public to learn that the state is not too well pleased with the arrangements at the Danielson graded school where there are eight rooms on three floors. This matter has been a cause of correspondence between state and town school officials, something, in all probability, we have to do more about this, for the state is insistent.

It is hoped that the committee will present some recommendations for the enlargement of Killingly High school, when there is occasion following a steady growth in the enrollment. Dayville, Attawaugan and Goodyear, all have their claims for consideration of [illegible] of facilities at the [illegible] communities.

The people may expect a full and careful personal report from the committee [illegible] matter in charge when it is ready to act. The committee [illegible] for careful action. Members of the committee are already, in a measure, [illegible] at least considered [illegible] which cannot longer delay [illegible] certain improvements. [illegible] thought desirable may be done all for a time but will be really urgent at a not distant date.

There were no developments of special interest Monday in the Dansereau automobile cases. It is possible that other arrests may be made prior to [illegible] appearance in the town court of Danielson on Thursday but Monday it appeared that much new will come out before the hearing. Dansereau remains in Brooklyn jail, in default of bonds of $3,000.

Allen Wade of East Killingly remains a patient at Day Kimball hospital, Putnam where he was taken, seven weeks ago, after breaking his leg [illegible] from the roof of a barn at the [illegible] Sparks [illegible] of the town. It was anticipated that Mr. Wade might return to his home this week, but he has developed some new difficulty that involves the running of daily temperature.

Danielson's Chautauqua season closed Monday evening after providing a [illegible] entertaining series of offerings. [illegible] afternoon and evening the feature was the concerts by the Dunbar Hall players organized and coached by Helen Dunbar of the original organization bearing the name.

It appears that all the tooting of locomotive whistles in Danielson at all hours of the day and night may have a special purpose other than warning to give drivers and not getting killed at grade crossings. It is hinted that the engineers are practicing for a whistlers' carnival. One can imagine thirty [illegible] assembled here a morning [illegible] and putting on Taps o'clock to the Morning as a prize to that will awaken everyone.

The death of Mrs. Elmirie Tebeault, 68, occurred Monday morning at her home on the West Side. Mrs. Tebeault, a widow, had been ill for the past two years. She had made her home with her daughter, Mrs. Elmirie Boucher. Mrs. Tebeault was a native of Canada, but for years resident in this country.

Mrs. Moses Choquette returned Sunday to her home in the Mahentuck district after a period spent at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam.

Notwithstanding that it is a violation of the law, [illegible] numerous [illegible] persist in [illegible] automobile [illegible] to depend on a flash [illegible] carried in the hand, which [illegible] Police [illegible] to [illegible] do not answer [illegible] of the law.

PUTNAM

For some weeks past pieces of metal, mostly brass, copper and lead, the property of E. C. Rogers of the Putnam Inn, have been disappearing from the rear of the hotel. The thefts were annoying and the value of the property missing was steadily mounting, until at least $50 worth of supplies, such as elbows, couplings, pipe and fixtures, had disappeared.

The police, after working on the case traced the missing property through six young boys to a local junk man. The boys were presented at a juvenile session of the city court and were given a severe reprimand by the judge, and a warning as to their punishment, if they appeared before him again. The junk man told the police that he thought the boys were selling things they had found, and denied that he even suspected they were stolen. No action has been taken against him. Most of the metal was recovered.

In the following communication of the secretary of Thompson school committee, the state supervisor of secondary education approves and passes the Tourtelotte Memorial high school:

Miss Sarah C. Crosby, Secretary, School Committee, Thompson, Conn. My dear Miss Crosby: On June 8th I visited the Tourtelotte High school at North Grosvenordale, and was shown about the building by the assistant headmaster, who explained to me the organization of the school, and I was also privileged to visit for some time with the headmaster, Mr. Kimball, who told me something of the history and working of the school organization.

I was impressed with the fact that you have a very modern plant, with very comfortable class rooms, a good auditorium, and with many of the features found in our very best modern high schools. The pupils were in their final examinations and I, therefore, had no opportunity to observe the actual classroom work. However, I was shown about the building, looked in on the examinations and visited all the rooms. I was impressed with the atmosphere of quiet about the building, and know that the pupils were much interested. The teachers appeared to be cheerful and taking their school problems seriously. Considering the type of work that doing this work well and that the pupils go out from the Tourtelotte school to higher institutions of learning have made splendid records for themselves and for the institution.

I know the school is well organized and well supervised, and I shall recommend its approval for the school year 1924-25.

Sincerely yours
FRANKLIN H. PIERCE.
Supervisor of Secondary Education.

COLCHESTER

The fire company was called to a fire in what is known as the Palmer house on Broadway, Friday about 11.30 a. m. FERNS SUFFER FROM INSECTS AND IMPROPER WATERING

Potted ferns do not seem to be always well treated in their environment, of radiators and electric fans. Judging from the numerous requests for information concerning them received by the United States department of agriculture. In answer to inquiries, the department says that improper watering is the foundation of most fern difficulties, especially such liberal watering as that which keeps the plant soaked, or such lack of water as permits the soil in the pot to become dry and hard. Fumes of burning gas, whether from a gas range or gas jets, are extremely injurious.

Great care should be taken not to overwater the fern when it is in a jardiniere, where the drainage is necessarily very poor. The time of year should be considered, too. In the spring and summer ferns will require three times the water necessary in autumn and winter. They should always be watered sparingly—just enough to keep the soil moist at all times.

It is well, also, occasionally to put them in the bathtub and wash them with weak soap suds made from a good grade of soap. The soap must be thoroughly rinsed off immediately. Great care must be exercised not to injure the fronds, as they are very tender. Mealy bug, a white wooly insect that works close to the bottom of the fronds, is one of the worst enemies of house ferns. If found, the plant should be examined every day and all insects removed by a splint or toothpick. If badly infested, all the top of the fern should be cut off within an inch of the ground and then thoroughly treated each day until all insects are exterminated, when a new top can be grown. Red spider is a minute sucking insect that thrives in a dry atmosphere. It can be kept in check by washing or by spraying the top with clear water. The aphis or green fly is also eradicated by washing.

Apply once in two to four weeks a dilute solution of nitrate of soda—one teaspoonful to a quart of water, very dilute ammonia water—two teaspoonfuls of household ammonia to a quart of water, or manure leachings as fertilizers.

—"they're the safest, purest, 'year-'round' candy for little folks."

"I like the Violet ones, Mother"

He had come in from play to ask for some Life Savers, his favorite candy.

"I like those new Violet ones best," the little fellow said. And thousands of youngsters agree with him. Vi-o-let Life Savers are selling just like hot-cakes.

• • •

Every growing child craves sweets. Active little bodies demand sugar. But children's candy must be pure—and they should not overeat.

Life Savers, the little candy mints with the hole (life saver shape), answer this problem in just the right way. They are china-hard and deliciously flavored.

This means that Life Savers are eaten slowly. Children suck them to make those wonderful flavors last longer. Little tummies are not upset. And Life Savers are kind to tiny teeth.

They're safe and wholesome. You may conscientiously be generous with Life Savers for they are the ideal candy for little folks.

Six flavors are displayed at all good stores so you may help yourself: Pep-o-mint, Wint-o-green, Cinn-o-mon, Lic-o-rice, Cl-o-ve and Vi-o-let. Five cents a package.—Life Savers, Inc., Port Chester, N. Y.

THE POSTAL DEFICIT

[illegible]s are not new in the post-office department. It is one of the branches of government where they have been expected and where they have prevailed. As much as it might be desired that that department would be self sustaining, it is a case where if the nature of the postal service do not furnish enough revenue to offset [illegible] they must make up the [illegible] from treasury funds.

OUR MONEY ABROAD

[illegible] connection with a loan which it [illegible] is stated that Aus- [illegible] does not want to come to the [illegible] United States to borrow money. It has [illegible] been a the habit of doing so and [illegible] like to deviate from old [illegible]. But Australia is not the one [illegible] which has found it neces- [illegible] in this direction for loans. [illegible] the war it was to Europe [illegible] which most of the countries looked [illegible] for their funds when needed. Even South American countries and some in North America outside of Canada were disposed to borrow across the water. We even borrowed ourselves. But times have changed. The war has created a new situation and today those who were in a position to do the loaning are borrowing themselves.

In this change of conditions from borrower to lender we have reached the point where the investments of private American capital in other countries reach the total of over $9,000,000,000 which of course is in addition to the war debts of a larger amount by about two billion.

Countries which formerly looked to Europe for capital have turned in this direction so that more than 44 per cent. of our foreign investments are placed in Latin American countries. This doesn't mean government loans but capital investment. But in addition American money has gone to Canada, to the far east to Africa and in fact in all directions, the government loans frequently being much smaller than our capital investments.

Thus if Australia found it actually necessary to look here for its funds it would be doing no different than others have done and others will continue to do. Naturally Australia might be expected to borrow from the mother country when possible but it has to be governed by conditions the same as others, and it must realize that it would be in good company if it was obliged to float a loan in the good old U. S. A.

DISCUSSING COAL AGREEMENTS

This week the coal miners and the operators are expected to get together in an effort to reach an agreement that will govern after the first of September. The miners have set forth their demands and the operators have disclosed what their position is. As is invariably the case they are some distance apart with each side firmly maintaining that justice is on their side.

At the last gathering of the representatives of the two sides we have been told that the department of labor had two representatives in attendance as observers, acting in the interest of the public. The public or at least that part of it which uses coal, has much at stake in the outcome. It knows from past experience that whatever the outcome it must foot the bill and it is therefore much concerned to see that it gets some consideration.

From the emphatic declarations of the respective sides it seems highly improbable that there will be a quick decision reached. Where the miners seek more pay the operators are urging a reduction, while the latter are opposing certain conditions sought by the men which would add further expense to the production of coal. There is the probability of a strike resulting in the curtailment in production and a threatened shortage of anthracite. That in itself would mean a boost in the price before an agreement was reached. Without such a test there could be a compromise, a continuance of existing conditions and no stoppage in the production. It is a matter of about seven weeks before the present agreement ends but whether the most will be made of the time to reach a compromise or an agreement can best be told as time goes along. It has not always been so.

THE WEEK END TOLL

From such figures as have been complied concerning the Fourth of July fatalities one is impressed by the great waste of life over that week end. There was a time when the fatalities were the result of explosives. Those haven't been entirely eliminated but they are happily reduced. There continue, however, to be those from drownings and automobile accidents and these two causes seem to be making up effectively for the let up in deaths from fireworks.

But it is not solely the holidays that collect such a large toll. It is being exacted almost every week end, especially if the weather is conducive to large numbers getting to the shore, ponds and on the highways.

The list of deaths by accident each Monday morning is appalling. It is getting to be the usual rather than the unusual. The week end without several such cases within the state is conspicuous, and the strange part of it all is that even though the timber grows the efforts to prevent just such results fail to measure up to the requirements.

Just what is necessary in the way of warning or lesson to cause young and old to observe the proper safeguards for the protection of themselves? It would seem that most every conceivable type of accident and all degrees of carelessness were set forth most thoroughly. Has't the individual today the same regard for his life, or the lives of others, that formerly prevailed? From the frequent impression of lack of care and the absence of caution resulting in death, the impression is given that too little attention is given individually to the importance of safety measures.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Every baseball team has its ups and downs. Such variety relieves the monotony.

The hardest part of a vacation is the realization that there are 52 weeks to the next one.

With airplanes carrying a half million in money there's a new field for the holdup men to tackle.

The man on the corner says: Even if evolution wins it shows no disposition to break the speed laws.

Those who pay no attention to the automobile laws would certainly pay no more to a code of motoring ethics.

It is getting to the point where some mechanical device is needed to keep tabs on the automobile accidents.

From the number of nations seeking to find their debts the impression is gained that where there's so much talk there must be some cash.

Most of the crossing accidents are due to the fact that highway users are not sufficiently impressed by the fact that they may be the next victims.

When it is said that the granting of the miners' demands would increase the price of coal $3 a ton, it is easy to figure who would have to pay it.

RIGHT IN STYLE

"What made me particularly notice the girl" explained the quite terrible old lady, "was that she was so extremely kind to her mother. To be sure, the maternal person was respectfully three steps in the rear as they progressed through the dress section, but every once in a while the girl spoke to her and sort of included her in the trip, as it were.

"You know that is unusual. To be sure, most of this girl's remarks were devoted to quelling insubordination on the part of her parent, but almost any sort of notice is preferable to being ignored.

" 'See!' cried her mother, pausing before a rack of simple little black satin frocks, 'these are neat, quiet little affairs—'

" 'Oh, mother!' the daughter threw over her shoulder in kindly pity, 'now I know just exactly what I want and for heaven's sake don't drag in something that looks as though it came over with the Pilgrims! Those things may be dresses, but if they ever caused a riot it was back in 1625! Oh, look! There!'

"Perfectly beatific happiness overspread her countenance and she stood entranced while her mother turned pale and sat down hastily in the chair. What the girl was looking at was one of the models they always send out in spring exhibition sales, just to cause crowds to gather and gasp.

"I have never in the world seen any human woman brave enough to wear one of these opium nightmares—why, the manufacturers must have a museum somewhere to inter them after the season is over. This garment had explosive batik scarf things around the neck and floating in the breeze, stripes at the bottom, figured goods in the middle and dots all over the rest. It started out one color and ended in sixteen different shades. It was without doubt the most criminal thing in the way of feminine apparel that ever had greeted the eyes of women, but it hit the mark with this girl.

" 'How much is it?' she begged of the salesgirl. The question nerved her despairing parent to one mechanically heroic effort to avert the worst. 'Now, Edna!' she cried, 'you're never going to get a thing like that! Why, it's—'

"The young person drew a long breath and addressed her mother carefully, almost in words of one syllable. 'Mother,' she said patiently, 'for heaven's sake, let me alone! What on earth do you know about style these days? I guess when I appear in that thing some of those girls who have been so snippy lately will think twice and take a little notice! Why, even Elsie Listerine didn't bring back a thing from Paris to compare! It's marvelous! It's only $98, and I'm going to try it on!'

" 'But,' wailed her parent 'that's $30 more than your father gave you—'

" 'Oh,' groaned the daughter, 'haven't you learned that the way to get what you want is to get it? Father'll just have to hand it over—I guess I've got to have clothes! Why, if I don't take this on the spot I'll never see it again, and I'm only surprised it didn't go before 9 o'clock this morning! Wait till Bob sees me in this, just wait!'

"She disappeared into the fitting room, while her parent turned paler, sighed hard and recrossed her feet several times. "There" cried daughter after awhile, sailing out into view. Crowds gathered at once as though expecting most anything to happen and her mother tried to shrink behind a pillar. The young person surveyed the onlookers with a haughty and condescending stare, entirely pleased with the attention she was receiving. She looked like something from King Tut's tomb, combined with the contents of a fat and comprehensive scrapbag, and she said indolently to the clerk to send it, please, c. o. d., and mark it special.? She was so happy about her purchase that she even smiled tenderly when her mother paused on the way out to finger the little black satin frocks on the rack.

" 'When you get your dress,' she told her parent, 'I'm coming with you, because if I don't you'll be buying one of those dumb things!'

"The only sartorial hope for that poor woman is that her daughter may break a leg and be confined to the house for the next two months!"—Chicago News.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Mr. Montgomery's Repetition.

Mr. Editor: For one—Mr. Montgomery and your many readers may be assured that Mr. Troland has no desire to misunderstand nor to misrepresent anyone intentionally. But if Mr. Montgomery dislikes a discussion in your letter column, then I plead guilty to having been mistaken about him.

In regard to the dispute and the disputants which he is so determined to put down, he says "None of the letters of Panizzoli, Poreda or Quimet get us anywhere." If he means the editorial "us" and by this himself only, he may be correct for he forgets that Mr. Troland admitted to having benefited from the letters already.

Leaving out his arraignment of Mr. Boardman's point, which is well taken, I, however, fail to fathom his definition of 100 per cent. Americanism. He holds that an American may be a Baptist, Presbyterian, Methodist, Roman Catholic and even an infidel, but by his criticism he seems to hold that if any of these enter into a discussion relative to past history, pro or con, this disqualified, to a big percentage, from being at par, an American.

Isn't this his contention? Let us keep him to the point. We confess to mistaking this for a flaw in Mr. Montgomery's theory. He also assumes to be a "mind reader," when he writes such a line as this over his name, "I can truly say, and John Troland knows it, there is no evidence whatever of search or research, that is, in the letters of the above named disputants." Notwithstanding I had already declared, that I had profited some from the discussion. Even Mr. Montgomery's letter, which is in reality a discussion of the subject as much as that of Mr. Panizzoli's, affords information for we learn that Charles Carrol of Carrolltown was an Irish Roman Catholic and that William Jennings Bryan is the "monarch of all American Presbyterians," and that he is a persecutor of a teacher who desires to teach evolution without which there would be no Americanism. Here we see that the question is settled, and that the Tennessee trial with all its great expense is useless.

JOHN TROLAND

Norwich, July 13, 1925.

History Settled Question About Dr. Luther.

Mr. Editor: When I came home from my vacation I found, piled upon my desk the correspondence of more than three weeks, of which I had to dispose in a hurry. Besides urgent congregational work was calling me, so I could devote little or no time to a careful daily reading of your paper. A few days ago a friend called on me and directed my attention to the present historical-religious dispute appearing in your paper for some time. I cannot help but give Rev. Mr. Panizzoli my full intellectual and moral support, thanking God that in our easy going time of "nice people" we find men who put up a noble fight for those eternal principles of personal right and freedom of conscience without whom humanity cannot exist against that one sinister power, which always has denied those principles—men who call right things right and evil things evil with no regard to the consequences. People of that calibre only deserve the honor to be called 100 per cent. Americans, no matter where their cradle once has stood.

Mr. Editor, I have before me the issue of your paper of July 9th. In its columns appears a letter signed John M. Hogan, which is a typical sample of the Romish educational methods from the beginning to the end. But the intelligence of the writer reaches its climax when he accuses Dr. Luther, the great reformer, of hypocrisy, unholy desire for power, sexual perversity and other nice things. Mr. Hogan cannot prove a single one of his accusations. I pretend that he doesn't even know what he is talking about. I am quite sure that he didn't read a single one of Dr. Luther's books, for to do so is forbidden to him by his church. He does not see the man and how he really is; he looks at him through the darkened eyeglasses of his most bitter adversaries. Therefore he cannot be fairminded himself. Nevertheless he makes the astonishing remark that "fair-minded Protestants abhor the name of Luther." This is a contradiction in adjectu: A man who abhors the name of Luther is surely not a good Protestant at all; he is either exceedingly evil-minded or a simpleton or a Catholic. The question if Dr. Luther was a great and good man, or if he was a devil, was settled long long ago, not, by the ancestors of Mr. Hogan, but by world history which has given Dr. Luthers' name an undisputed place beside the names of those who have enlightened the hearts and minds of their fellowmen with the light, that comes from above.

Getting at the Truth,

Mr. Editor: "You cannot fool all the people all the time;" but when you cannot fool him hang him (stand out from under Mr. Boardman). A Catholic will tell the truth if you let him run long enough. Listen, now to Cardinal Gibbons, a'Fith of our Fathers, Page 63: "The church has authority from God to teach regarding faith and morals, and in her teaching she is preserved from error by the special guidance of the Holy Ghost." Page 121: "When a dispute arises in the church regarding the sense of Scripture the subject is referred to the pope for final adjudication. The sovereign pontiff, before deciding the case, gathers around him his venerable colleagues, the cardinals of the church; or he calls a council of his associate judges of faith, the bishops of christendoms; or he has recourse to other lights which the Holy Ghost may suggest to him. Then, after mature and prayerful deliberation, he pronounces judgment and his sentence is final, irrevocable and infallible." (Emphasis mine) Page 355: "But if to love their priest, to reverence his sacred character, to obey his voice as the voice of God; if to be willing to make any sacrifice for their spiritual father; if, I say, you call this slavery, then our Catholic people are slaves, indeed, and, what is more, they are content with their chains." (Emphasis mine)

But never mind, we have learned that there are "fair minded" Protestans; perhaps they are the ones that sit and take a pat on the back for being tolerant of intolerance; but being forbidden to have any insight of my own, how can I tell but what they mean Thomas Jefferson, Mr. Panizzoli and G. Warren Davis?

Take care of your neck, Mr. Boardman!

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Owen Wister, who reaches his sixty-fifth milestone today, has long been numbered among the successful American novelists. Like many other successful writers he got into literature by accident. A native of Philadelphia, he received his elementary schooling in Europe and later was graduated from Harvard. After leaving the university in 1882 he again went abroad, this time with the intention of preparing himself for the profession of musical critic. Poor health brought about a change in his plans and after a year or two spent in the far west he returned to Harvard, took a course in law and after receiving his degree began the practice of his profession in his native city. But he soon found that the law was not his career and it was then that he turned to literature. His first effort consisted of a series of stories and sketches of the west, contributed to one of the leading magazines. With the publication of The Virginian and Lady Baltimore his reputation as a novelist was established.

From Small Beginnings

Thomas Blacklock, the Bricklayer's Blind Son—Friend of Burns

It would extremely oblige me were it but half a line, to let me know how you are, and where you are. Can I be indifferent to the fate of a man to whom I owe so much—a man whom I not only esteem, but venerate?"

So wrote Robert Burns in 1788 to Thomas Blacklock, a blind minister, 67 years old. Well, indeed, might Burns write in those words to Dr. Blacklock, for the poet, a poor Scotch farmer without means and without advantages, went up to Edinburgh, and it was Thomas Blacklock, blind as he was, who saw in the Scotch cotter the fire of genius. So he became his friend and recommended him and his work.

The story of Blacklock is even stranger than the story of Burns. Those who saw the Blacklock in Edinburgh saw an elderly man with gray hair, a face pitted with marks of smallpox and sightless staring eyes. His face was almost repulsive, and yet it was a face that people loved. Some miracle had taken the son of an ignorant bricklayer, a child blinded by smallpox, and made him into one of the most learned men in Edinburgh—one of the kindest at heart and one of the most influential. "Sure, it's better the babe died!" a woman had cried out when Thomas Blacklock, then a baby less than a year old, recovered from the gruesome disease, marked deeply and hideously blinded.

"He'll be no good to himself and a burden to others!" the poor bricklayer, the father sighed deeply and despondently about his work. The blind child grew up with nothing to do but sit about the house. His companions read to him, now from the Bible, now from various books. sometimes they sang the high pitched Scotch songs. After a time the blind child joined in the singing. Then, wonder of wonders, he began to write songs. His companions asked for copies and passed them on in admiration. The bricklayer's son had rare ability, a singing heart. The friends took from their little money and sent the blind boy to school and university. He continued to make songs, and at 25 was the author of a published book of poems. Now friends helped him to a place where he could study, and he became a preacher, a leader of thought, a doctor of divinity, and at last a warm friend and helper of the new poet, Robert Burns. No life is useless and even the blind have golden opportunities.

Stories That Recall Others

Adam and Eve

Two little turtles live all alone in a private aquarium. Their mistress calls them Adam and Eve because they are the only inhabitants of their watery world.

The mistress is much interested in occult science. One day she was quietly reading her favorite subject. The house was very still. She had come to the most creepy hair raising part, when all at once she heard a peculiar noise. Together with the text the situation was uncanny. She was afraid to move but she looked in the direction of the noise. On the floor, moving, was an indistinguishable mass. "Could it be a demonstration of occult powers," she thought. She mustered courage and went to investigate. What was her surprise to find that it was Eve enmeshed in a hair net.

Adam had probably commanded her to get him an apple for an appetizer and health tonic, and she, on the way to the grocery had, to her mortification, suddenly realized that modern ladies were wearing somewhat more than the fig leaf of the prehistoric times: so in her anxiety to be up to date had donned her mistress' hair net completely enveloping herself.

It took considerable shipping with the scissors in various parts of the garment before Eve was finally disrobed and put back in the aquarium, whereupon she with wide open mouth, dived after Adam, blaming him, no doubt, for all that had happened.

A New Rule

A teacher in one of the schools attempted one day to instruct her class in the art of punctuation. One boy appeared unusually perplexed. Thinking to encourage the lad the teacher asked him a very easy question: "John, when should I use a period?"

John meditated a few moments, then, after he had rolled his eyes about helplessly and had shifted his feet in some desperation, he managed to stammer out, "Well, you can dot your I's with 'em."

Two Clever Hunters

The task impossible for one
By two quite often may be done.
—Digger the Badger.

Peter Rabbit had seen teasing Digger the Badger to tell him how two Coyotes hunted together in a Prairie Dog town, and Digger the Badger had teased Peter by putting him off. But at last he took pity on Peter.

"You know, Peter," said he, "two heads are better than one."

"So I have heard," said Peter.

"It's so," continued Digger. "Two heads are better than one, and eight legs are better than four. Anyway, that is the way those Coyotes out there in Prairie Dog town used to think, and they pretty nearly proved it. Yes, sir, they did so. When they wanted a Prairie Dog dinner they started out together to get it. One Coyote would hide by living down flat in the grass outside the Prairie Dog town. Of course as soon as he started warning would be given, and down into their holes would dive all the Prairie Dogs near at hand.

Then the Coyote hidden in the grass would run forward and lie down flat behind the nearest mound in which a Prairie Dog disappeared. Now you must know that Prairie Dogs always feel safe the moment they have reached their homes. Just a little way down from the entrance they have a little place dug to give them room to turn around without going clear to the bottom. So when they have dived head first into their homes they go no farther than these little places and there they turn around and in a moment or two pop their heads out to see what has become of the danger that frightened them."

"That is foolish," said Peter.

"People full of curiosity usually are foolish," replied Digger drily.

Peter grinned. He knew that Digger meant that for him. "I guess that's so. Please go on, Mr. Badger," said he.

"Well," continued Mr. Badger, "the Coyote who had walked into town would pretend to pay no attention to those Prairie Dogs. He would pretend that he wasn't interested in them in the least. He would just keep on his way. Of course the Prairie Dog in the mound behind which the other Coyote was hiding would see the first Coyote and would see that he was beyond the danger point. Right away that Prairie Dog would come wholly out and sit up to bark his head off at the Coyote who had created all this disturbance."

The other Dog would walk into the town

"What happened then?" asked Peter excitedly.

"Sometimes one thing, and sometimes another," replied Digerg. "Sometimes that Prairie Dog never barked any more and those Coyotes had a Prairie Dog dinner. Sometimes that hidden Coyote would not be quite quick enough. When this happened, those two Coyotes would go off and try it again somewhere else. Sooner or later there was sure to be one less Prairie Dog in town. One Coyote working alone couldn't have done it, but two working together that way were pretty sure to be successful."

"Peter thought it all over. Then he gave a little sigh of thankfulness. "Well," said he, "all I can say is that I am glad Old Man Coyote hasn't any one to hunt with him here. What you've seen those Coyotes do out there in Prairie Dog town I have seen Reddy and Mrs. Fox do when trying to catch one of Johnny Chuck's children. Are Prairie Dogs the only folks you hunted out there, Mr. Badger?"

Digger shook his head. "Goodness no," said he. "I guess I would have gone hungry a large part of the time if I had to depend wholly on Prairie Dogs."

SMALL PART OF ROADS CARRY MOST OF TRAFFIC

A very large portion of the highway traffic of the country is carried by a rather small percentage of the roads according to the bureau of public roads of the U. S. department of agriculture. A detailed traffic survey in Maine, conducted by the bureau in cooperation with the Maine state highway commission, shows that the primary system of the state, consisting of only 7.1 per cent of the total mileage, carries 23.4 per cent of the traffic in the state. Furthermore, 18.4 per cent of the primary system carries 38.7 per cent of life traffic on the system. From this it follows that, with respect to the entire highway system of the state, 1.3 per cent of the total mileage serves more than a fifth of the traffic as measured to vehicle miles.

The important roads of the country are embraced in the Federal aid highway system and the state systems upon which it has been laid down and it is the improvement of these roads for which the country has the greatest need.

Milk consumption in the United States has increased 25 per cent since 1920, but per capita consumption is still lower than that of the principal countries of Europe.

DROVE 3,100 MILES FROM ALBERTA TO VISIT HIS NORWICH RELATIVES

Ending a trip of 3,106 miles by automobile to revisit his old home town, John E. Bresnahan, with his wife and daughter, rolled into Norwich Monday afternoon in his Hupmobile touring car that had made the trip from Alberta, Canada, without delay for engine trouble and with only one change of tire, this due to a puncture because of picking up a piece of wire in Wisconsin.

Mr. Bresnahan and his family are guests at the home of his brother, William H. Bresnahan, of 617 Main street, intending to stay several weeks.

They left Blackie, Alberta, at 11:20 on the morning of Sunday, June 28, and came along by comparatively easy stages, making two stops, and all their driving was by daylight, except the night before they reached Norwich. That was the only time their lights were lighted on the whole trip.

The speedometer readings were as follows:

		Miles
June	28, Blackie, Alberta	17,244
	29, Peskan, Mont.	17,426
	30, Windham, Mont.	17,670
July	1, Forsyth, Mont.	17,905
	2, Villield, N. Dak.	18,129
	3, Jamestown, N. Dak.	18,377
	4, Little Falls, Minn.	18,641
	5, Humbird, Wis.	18,883
	6, Janesville, Wis.	19,120
	7, Zion City, Ill.	19,206
	8, Bryan, Ohio	19,447
	9, Girard, Pa.	19,701
	10, Hornell, N. Y.	19,922
	Starlight, Pa.	20,103
	Hillsdale, Mass.	20,246
	13, Norwich	20,350

About half of the driving was divided between Mr. Bresnahan and his fifteen year old daughter, Agnes, who is making her first visit to the east. This is Mrs. Bresnahan's first visit to Norwich, but she has been east before to visit relatives in Boston whom she will see again on this trip before returning to Alberta.

The party arrveled with a camping outfit, a 9x9 umbrella tent, collapsible chairs, a gasoline stove, and the other necessary paraphernalia, which made it possible for them to have but one hotel bill for the entire trip. That time they were driven to stop at a hotel by a blinding storm of rain that hid the road so that the only safe course was to come to a halt as soon as possible.

Leaving Blackie, Alberta, on Sunday morning, June 28, their first day's drive brought them to the custom house station at Peskan, Montana, where they entered the United States and had to deposit $70 for taking their car across the border. The custom house official was so glad to see them that he insisted upon entertaining them over night and Agnes won her way to his heart by the way she played the ancient piano that the place boasted.

Through Montana, their route struck fair roads of gravel, but they found the state a desolate looking region because of the many abandoned houses on homestead claims.

The drive through Montana was about 600 miles, which brought them to North Dakota, which was crossed in two days, touching at Bismark and Fargo. At Little Falls, Minnesota, which was 1,397 miles from their starting point, they came to their first macadam road and from there to Norwich they traveled for 1,700 miles on fine roads of macadam or cement all the time. They made a stop at Zion City, Illinois, and another at Starlight, Pa.

From Chicago their route led through South Bend, Toledo, Cleveland, Erie, Jamestown, Elmira, Binghamton, Catskill, Athens, Hudson, Hillsdale, Great Barrington, Canaan, Hartford and Willimantic to Norwich.

Mr. Bresnahan located in Alberta, Sept. 24, 1903, taking up a homestead of 160 acres of wheat land, to which he has since added 320 acres by purchase.

He last visited Norwich in 1913.

SUIT AGAINST CITY AND STATE BY AUTO OWNER

Judge Charles B. Waller took the papers and reserved his decision in the $1,000 damage suit brought by George A. Davis of Stafford Springs against the city of Norwich and John A. MacDonald, state highway commissioner, following the close of arguments made by counsel in the matter in the court of common pleas Monday.

Attorney C. V. James represented the plaintiff, while Corporation Counsel William H. Shields, Jr., appeared for the city, with Attorney Lee Roy Robbins for the state.

The plaintiff, Davis, bases his suit on June 29, 1923, when he was operating his auto between Westerly and Norwich. He had reached a point at the foot of Fox Hill, near the Reliance Yarn Co., when the auto struck a manhole, the cover of which was alleged to have been in a loose condition or that it flew off, doing much damage to the auto, it is alleged.

Most of the plaintiff's evidence was presented two weeks ago, and the evidence was resumed Monday.

Mr. Bennett, a milkman of Preston City, was the first witness to testify. He told of delivering milk in a house opposite to the manhole and was about to go back to his milk wagon, which was parked near the manhole, when he observed the Davis car whirl around several times, of hearing some noise and afterward of seeing the manhole cover off.

Mr. Bushnell, a state engineer, now at New Haven, formerly stationed at this city, testified, as did John H. Smith, division engineer of the state highway department, located in this city, and Henry T. Gorman, located in this city for the past year and superintendent of repairs of state highway department. Each told of having examined the manhole, cover, etc., and that there were no defects as far as they knew, having examined the hole several times.

Court adjourned about 1 o'clock without date.

THREATENED SUICIDE, REPULSED BY GIRL

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 13.—It developed today that L. F. Baker, who informed the clerk at the Y. M. C. A., late last night by telephone that Baker intended to end his life, is a resident of New York and that he has been paying attention to a local young woman. The latter's refusal to countenance the attention of Baker is the cause for the man's threat to end his life.

The packages, two in number, that Baker had deposited with the clerk earlier in the evening, and which Baker requested, when he sent the telephone message, should be opend only upon "identification," were opened this afternoon by Sergeant John Cavanaugh and contained only articles of wearing apparel. An effort to locate Baker today was not successful and whether he has carried out his threat to commit suicide will only be determined by time.

NORWICH BRIDGE TOO DANGEROUS TO USE

It was discovered Monday that two steel spans that hold up the Norwich Town bridge on the New London turnpike had been broken off, leaving practically nothing but the wooden stringers and planking to hold up the bridge.

Selectman William S. Murray, Charles P. Bushnell and Patrick T. Connell at once ordered the bridge closed to vehicular traffic until further notice, and engineers have been summoned to look the bridge over in order to make the necessary repairs.

The bridge is an 8-ton bridge, and the selectmen believe that some 5-ton motor trucks that have been carting gravel over the bridge have snapped the steel work as the trucks and their load would weigh about ten tons.

When an automobile passed over the bridge Monday it sagged badly but fortunately the woodwork held and the car got across. After that the bridge was closed.

An announcement from Stonington Monday disclosed changes contemplated at Christ Episcopal church, Norwich.

Arthur E. Hall, who has been the very efficient organist at Christ church, has presented his resignation. It has also become known although no formal announcement of the fact has been made yet.

It was said Monday evening that Mr. Hall's plans include removal from Norwich to, Simsbury, Conn., where he is to teach music as well as play.

Mr. Hall has been especially successful in his work with the boys at Christ church vested choir.

ZONING COMMISSIONERS TO LEARN ITS DUTIES

The new zoning commission appointed by Mayor Milo R. Waters, of which Alderman Patrick F. Sweeney is chairman, is soon to meet to discuss and become acquainted with its duties. It is considered probable that the commission will make some trips to cities where zoning ordinances are in operation in order to learn of the practical application of the plan.

GOES TO JAIL FOR TAKING DEALER'S CAR

Leo Barr, 21, of Montville was given a sentence of 30 days in jail by Judge A. F. Libby in the city court Monday morning when Barr pleaded guilty to taking an automobile without permission of the owner, C. V. Pendleton of this city. Barr is a cripple who uses crutches, but he is able to drive an automobile.

This was not Barr's first appearance in court as not long ago he was arrested on the charge of passing a worthless check, or forgery. Judge Libby stated in passing sentence that Barr's crippled condition had won him leniency in the past when he was before the court but his condition would not be taken into consideration this time.

Barr represented to Mr. Pendleton early last week that he had a customer for a car and the dealer agreed to pay him a commission if he made the sale. Later Barr reported that the customer would be around the next day to pay cash for a machine, but he has not been seen yet. On Wednesday Barr told an employe of Mr. Pendleton that the garage man had said he could take a Hudson touring car to show it to a customer. The employe let the man have the machine and that was the last seen of it until it was found in Plainfield by a state policeman. Barr was arrested in Plainfield as he was about to get aboard a trolley car.

While Barr has had the car in his possession, it has been learned by Mr. Pendleton that he bought tires, gasoline and other supplies which he had charged to Mr. Pendleton.

Ernest C. Borst of 95 Oak street, South Manchester, paid a fine of $20 flat for violation of the motor laws, or failure to grant the right of way. He was arrested Sunday at Tantic by State Policeman Whitmarsh.

The case of John Houle, 45, of Norwich was continued for six months by Judge Libby. Houle testified that he was not drunk when found sleeping in a lot on Roosevelt avenue early Monday morning, but that he had worked hard the previous day and had laid down and fallen asleep in the lot near his home. Judge Libby warned him that his appearance in court within six months would bring two fines and also told him not to fall asleep in the lot again.

Two local men, one charged with violation of the city traffic ordinance and another charged with breach of the peace and intoxication, were also given hearings. In the first case mentioned a fine of $5 flat was given by the court, and in the second case a continuance until August 1st was granted, with the understanding that the case would then be nolled on payment of $10 to the court.

MONTVILLE WILL NOT REBUILD ITS POORHOUSE

At a special meeting of the voters of the town of Montville, held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, it was voted to accept the report of the town school committee on the cost of building an addition to the Uncasville school house the matter to be left in the hands of the town building committee.

The meeting was in charge of First Selectman Jerome W. House and about 50 voters were present, the school project going over without a question.

It was voted not to construct a new building on the town farm to replace the building burned about two months ago. There has been no use for the poorhouse for about 5 years and as no one had occupied the old building the voters decided it was unnecessary to spend money to build a new one.

On the matter of the discontinuance of the public highway known as Derry Hill road, beginning at the easterly end of the highway near the house of the late Jerome W. Williams and continuing to the west to within 200 feet of the dwelling of Samuel Bosko, the vote was for indefinite postponement.

Work on the addition to the Uncasville school is expected to be started shortly, in hopes of having the addition completed shortly after the school opens for the fall term. At first it was voted to build two additions to the school and the cost was estimated at $40,000. It was voted finally to build one addition and the cost is estimated at slightly above $20,000. The addition will be of brick, the same material as was used to build the main building, and will contain two large assembly halls, making the school ten rooms instead of eight and thus settle the school problem at that school for a number of years to come.

ABANDONS HER BABY WITH SUICIDE THREAT

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 13.—Anna Cook, a young girl, of whom the police have little knowledge as to her relatives or former home, undoubtedly abandoned her infant this afternoon and in doing so the girl has attempted to make it appear that she caused her self-destruction, in order to cover up the act of abandonment.

The Cook girl, who became a mother several months ago, was taken in charge by the New London Diocesan bureau, Jay street. Miss. Delia Marooney, who has charge of the bureau, caused the mother and baby to be given shelter in the home of James T. L. Allen, 36 Franklin street. This afternoon about 1:45 o'clock, the girl left the Allen house and two hours later Mrs. Allen received a special delivery letter from the girl stating that her body "would be at the bottom of the ocean," by the time that the missive was delivered and continued a rambling story as to not to blame the baby for her rash act.

As soon as Mrs. Allen received the letter she made known its contents to Miss Marooney, and the latter informed the police. As little is known of the Cook girl it is believed that she will accomplish her plan to leave the city and abandon the infant.

Had Picnics at Ocean Beach

Three Sunday schools of Eastern Connecticut held picnics at Ocean Beach Saturday, two from Norwich being St. Andrew's Episcopal church and the Taftville Congregational church, while the third was the Congregational church at Moosup. Four trolleys left Norwich and one left Central Village early in the morning.

Basket luncheons were enjoyed at noon and the Taftville program included sports and games in charge of Rev. Edwin G. Crowdis. The arrangements for the St. Andrew's picnic were made by the rector, Rev. L. E. W. Mitchell and Arthur Fitch, while Rev. Mr. Crowdis, Allan Bogle and Miss Elsie Heap were in charge of the Taftville Congregational church program.

All three Sunday schools returned home shortly after six o'clock, many members carrying the usual "lobster hue" which comes from a day spent at the seashore, for the most part in a bathing suit.

ARRIVED IN WILLIMANTIC WITHOUT NUMBER PLATES

(Special to the Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, July 13—A Norwich garageman, who gave his name as Barry, came to this city in a Cadillac sedan tonight with a man friend from Providence and wanted to see evidences of the big strike in Willimantic. The two drove contentedly about Main street until halted by Officer Lariviere who inquired as to the whereabouts of their front number plates. About this time the officer looked at the rear of the machine and saw that that also was devoid of a plate, so Barry was taken to police headquarters. The man was much surprised and explained to Capt. Grady that he had ordered a repair man to put the plates on the car while he prepared to go but by all indications the job was not done. He had the proper registration card with him. Barry was dismissed and told to go home before his predicament became more complicated.

GOODRICH WINS LIGHTWEIGHT TITLE ON TECHNICAL KNOCKOUT IN SECOND

NEW YORK, July 13—Jimmy Goodrich, of Buffalo, N. Y., won the lightweight elimination tournament staged under the auspices of the New York state athletic commission when he scored a technical knockout over Stanislaus Loayza of Chile in the second round of a 15-round match at the Queensboro A. C. tonight. Loayza fractured his right ankle in a fall to the ring in the first round but pluckily remained in the contest until the white towel of defeat was tossed into the ring after 35 seconds of the second round.

By this victory Goodrich will assume the world's lightweight championship, left vacant by the retirement of Benny Leonard.

Five times in the first round Goodrich knocked the Chilean to the floor of the ring.

Goodrich is a native of the coal mining regions of Pennsylvania, having been born and brought up in Scranton, Pa., taking up his residence in Buffalo, N. Y., six years ago.

After the fight Dr. St. John, one of the official physicians of the state athletic commission, examined Loayza's ankle and pronounced it fractured.

Round one:

The fight started at 8:39 eastern standard time.

The Chilean took the aggressive right at the start and drove Goodrich to cover. A right to head forced Goodrich to clinch. Goodrich got over a pretty left to the head. Loayza landed to the head with both hands but no damage was done. A right knocked Loayza down but he was up immediately. Another right sent him down again for a count of two. He went down for the third time for the count of seven. Goodrich rushed in furiously and bore Loayza to the floor again by his great rush. He was up again at the count of seven. Another right dropped him for a count of seven. The bell found them fighting furiously in the corner.

Round two:

Loayza's handlers worked on him desperately and he came up fairly fresh. Goodrich rushed in and landed heavily to the body and head. Loayza appeared to hobble on his left foot, holding his right foot off the floor. Goodrich rushed in again but a towel fluttered from Loayza's corner and the fight was over.

The Preliminaries

In the preliminaries Joe Pincus of Brooklyn outpointed Rudolph Ott of Germany in a four rounder. The two are bantams. In a six rounder Al Gordon of Philadelphia won a judges' verdict over Jack Hausner of New York. Gordon weighted 128 1-2 while Hausner scaled 125 3-4.

Eddie "Cannonball" Martin of New York, former world's bantamweight champion, scored a technical knockout over Irish Johnny Curtin of Jersey City when Curtin was unable to answer the bell for the seventh round. Commissioner William Muldoon ordered the fight stopped. His jaw was fractured from a stiff right hand punch in the first round.

PATTERSON MEETS STRONG OPPOSITION IN GARDNER

BROOKLINE, Mass., July 13—Sturdy opposition was encountered by Gerald L. Patterson, Australian Davis cup star, in a third round match of the 23rd annual Longwood bowl singles tournament which began at the Longwood Cricket club in Chestnut Hill today. Patterson won in straight sets, subduing G. Peabody Gardner, Jr., of Brookline, former intercollegiate champion 10-8, 6-2, 9-7. By his victory Patterson moved a round ahead of the field.

The day's feature was the outstanding of the fourth seeded American, Cranston Holman of Stanford University, runner up for the intercollegiate singles title this year. Facing a battery of volleys from the racquet of Karl Pfaffman, former Harvard tennis captain, Holman started a wild streak in the deciding set of which Pfaffman was quick to take advantage. The scores were 6-1, 3-6, 6-3.

Those who reached the third round were Patterson and John B. Hawks of Australia, T. Harada and M. Fukuda of Japan, and the seeded Americans Alden H. Smith, Frits Mercur, present title holder, Arnold W. Jones and M. W. Niles.

When darkness fell the field of 85 entrants had been reduced to 31.

The men's doubles will start Tuesday, and Miss Helen Wills, American champion, will compete Wednesday in the women's invitation singles.

QUINN PITCHES ATHLETICS TO VICTORY OVER TIGERS

DETROIT, July 13—Quinn held Detroit to five hits today and Philadelphia defeated the Tigers 4 to 1 in a fast game. The former Boston hurler, claimed by Philadelphia via the waiver route, held the Tigers well in check except in the first inning, when the home team scored its only run.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., July 13—The Pirates rallied in the ninth inning today and scored three runs to defeat Brooklyn, 4 to 2. ERRORS PROVE COSTLY AND BRAVES LOSE

BOSTON, July 13—Bases on balls and errors were chiefly responsible for the defeat of Boston by the Cincinnati Reds today, 4 to 1. In the seventh inning two outs and three bases on balls, one of the latter forcing in a run, gave the visitors two runs. Bancroft had a good day at shortstop while Pinelli excelled at third for the Reds. Hood, a newcomer from the Virginia league, made his first appearance for the Braves at second base. Score:

A. R. Stevens, of New Haven commandery, was second low gross with cards of 79 and 76 for a total of 155.

One hundred and twenty-eight members of commanderies in Bridgeport, New Haven, Hartford, Waterbury, Middletown, Norwich, Stamford, Danbury and Meriden, took part in the tournament and this large field was admirably handled by Robert D. Pryde, professional at the Race Brook Country club in New Haven.

HALLVILLE BEATS PALACE TEAM IN LOOSELY PLAYED ENCOUNTER

In a game featured by heavy hitting and loose fielding, Hallville easily defeated the Palace nine, Monday evening, 13 to 5. As a result of last night's game, Hallville went into a tie for first place with the Centrals, each having four victories and one defeat.

Hallville, with the exception of their battery, presented the same lineup as that which sent the Centrals down to their first defeat of the season, last Friday night. For a battery, Manager Taylor secured the McInnis brothers from New London, both of whom performed creditably in the game last night. Hallville, as now composed, looks like a team of heavy stickers, and one that is going to give the Centrals a good fight for the league lead.

Joe McInnis was in the box for Hallville and twirled in fine style. He allowed seven hits and five runs, two of the latter coming in the final inning with Hallville in command of a nine run lead. Joe walked four, while six went back to the bench via the strikeout route. "Bugs" Shahan started on the mound for the Palace but after four consecutive hits in the first inning, retired in favor of Mike Morin who twirled for the remainder of the game. Morin was also hit hard and was touched up for eight hits during his stay on the mound.

The Palace got off to a one run lead in the first inning on a double by Simcox, a single by Mulcahy, and a sacrifice fly by Chip Dugas.

Their lead was short-lived, however, as Hallville bunched four hits in their half of the inning and drove Shahan to the showers. H. Smith was safe when Mike Morin booted his grounder, and when Morin threw wild to first, Smith went down to second, Red Charon singled to left, and Smith took third, Charon stole second, and both he and Smith scored on Sullivan's double to right. Bill Smith then walked, Sullivan stole third and Smith took second, and both counted on John McInniss' double to right. Fuller kept up the bombardment on Shahan with another double to right, and McInniss scored with the fifth run of the inning. At this juncture, Shahan vacated the mound, and Mike Morin took up the pitching burden. Morin then retired the side without further scoring.

In the second, however, Hallville proved that all pitchers looked alike to them, when they counted twice on a double, a single and a sacrifice fly. After 2 scoreless innings, ten men went to bat for Hallville in the fifth, and after the smoke had cleared, five more runs had crossed the plate.

In addition to their run in the first, the Palace tallied once in the third and again in the sixth, while in the final inning, they managed to count twice.

As in last week's game, Bill Smith featured with his fielding, dragging down five long flys in the outfield. Red Charon, also played a star game, both in the field and at the bat. He garnered three hits out of five attempts, one of which was a double, and played first like a veteran. The score:

Tonight's Game

The fans received quite a disappointment last night for the first time in quite a while when the Palace and Hallville game proved to be very one sided. The fact that the Palace were short a catcher which caused Chip Dugas to have to leave third base in order to catch ruined the whole team as all during the game third base was a weak spot which helped Hallville pile up a big score. As a matter of fact, the Palace usually plays good ball and had Hamil been left in the bat and Dugas on third perhaps things would have been different, but everything goes in baseball and the fans must expect a poor game once in a while.

Tonight the fans should be well repaid when the Nuggetts and Centrals come together as both of these two teams are composed of youngsters, most of them under twenty and they play real ball. The Centrals have been setting the pace during the season and it sure has been a hot one which only Hallville has been able to keep up, they have met the best in the league and turned them back and until last Friday night kept a clean slate.

On the other hand the Nuggetts haven't had such good luck as the breaks have been against them and they have lost some hard games. Win or lose every time they have played the fans always have the field well satisfied with the exhibition that they put up.

Tonight they will lineup in the following order: Hindrichs, catch, Warvis, pitch; Burke on first; Carlin on second; Guillette on short and Leo Jarvis at third; in the outfield will be Ken Fox, Johnny Greene, and Red Lesserman.

For the Centrals Gaudette will pitch, Eccleson catch, Dugas will play first, Tombarl, second, Gauthier short, and Yerrington third, in the outfield will be Courbois, Eddie Murphy and either Cardle or Lefty Dugas.

Crescents Down Falls' Rovers

'Neath the last scorching rays of a mid-summer sun, the hard-hitting Crescents battled their way to a 4 to 1 victory over the Falls Rovers, Monday evening at the N. F. A. Campus.

The entire six-inning contest was remarkable for its clever fielding and hard hitting. Members of both local aggregations must have had their "Pep" for supper as the game was one of the fastest, seen in Junior Twi ball.

To "Gil" Kampff, the Crescent's speed ball artist, hurling for the first time this season, should go great praise for his steady pitching at all times during the game. Handicapped by the absence of most of their regular players, his teammates however succeeded in delivering the goods.

The Rovers played a much better game than the score would show. Couture's wildness in early sessions of the game was the main cause of the Falls' boys defeat.

The Rovers staged a thrilling sixth inning rally but a trifle too late, their tardiness cost them the game.

FAMILY RUM SELLERS PENALIZED IN NEW LONDON COURT MONDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 13—The spectacle of a mother and daughter and a husband and wife, accused and convicted of violation of the liquor law was presented in the police court this morning when William Morgan and his wife were arraigned for selling to a spotter, Philip LeClair, said to have been picked out for his task in Willimantic. He accused the Morgans and had the liquor in a bottle which he claimed he bought from them. Morgan and wife were presented in court Saturday when they pleaded not guilty as accused and presented an air of innocence that was really impressive to those without knowledge of the evidence which the state possessed. They furnished a bond each for appearance today at which time they had experienced a change of attitude toward the matter. Morgan pleaded guilty today and asked for the leniency of the court. It was represented that he was the father of five children, the youngest being but eight months old. He said he had never before sold liquor, though he said this with some evidence of faltering. Whether he was nabbed by a spotter the first time he ever sold any liquor may be doubted by those who have had experience with the class of offenders which Morgan has now joined. He was fined $200 and sentenced to jail for thirty days, but the sympathy of the court for the children led to suspension of the judgment as to the jail term. Morgan paid some $225 into court.

Mrs. Morgan settled by paying the costs of her arrest and arraignment in court.

The mother and daughter presented are Stella De Valaqua, and Zenia de Lezzi, both residing in Smith street. The daughter, who sold the liquor to LeClair, a half-pint bottle, for $1.25, was fined $200, while the mother was allowed to settle by paying the costs attaching to her apprehension, arrest and arraignment. The spotter is said to have gone to other fields to work his expense now for once he became known it was not likely he could get any booze anywhere in this city.

Edward R. Klose, a sailor, aged 20, was at a dance at Ocean beach, but he will not attend any other dances for some time unless he dances in his cell at the county jail. Klose was drunk and was handed over to a provost guard at the beach by Policeman James C. Sullivan. The provost did not consider Klose so that he would not create further disturbance, but allowed him to get upon a trolley car and come for the city proper. On the way up Klose became abusive and ugly and got into a fight with the conductor of the car. He was finally lying in the aisle of the car and when State street was reached he was given over to a policeman, and was locked up. In the police court this morning he was charged with a breach of the peace and intoxication and pleading guilty to both complaints, was fined $20. Klose made an effort to raise the money he needed to settle, but he was unsuccessful so he will receive his mail at the county jail until such time as he settles or works out his fine and costs, at the rate of a dollar a day. Klose was released in the custody of a lieutenant from the base that he might try to raise, but he could not raise the money.

Mrs. Frieda Wallace, wife of a chief petty officer at the New London station, is having an experience with automobiles that is very humiliating to her. She was fined $10 in court Saturday for operating a car without possessing a license, and now she is to answer for reckless driving, for her car crashed into the automobile of Henry S. Lee corner of Montauk avenue and Howard street Saturday evening at sundown. That Mrs. Wallace was not prosecuted on the more serious charge Saturday was due to the statement she made to the police officer and which was to the effect that Mr. Lee did not desire to prosecute her provided she would pay for the damage occasioned to his car by the collision. That story proved to be untrue. Mr. Lee did want the woman prosecuted and he was in court this morning to see that his wishes were complied with. Mrs. Wallace was not there. She was reported to have a certificate from a physician. She will appear Wednesday next, to which date the case has been continued.

Edward McDonald, a stranger, picked up on Potter street where he had fallen helpless from indulgence in liquor, was given a chance to get out of town or get into jail. He chose the former alternative.

Frank Silva and his wife, Mary, have settled trouble that began weeks ago, on a breach of the peace charge against Mary was nolled today.

William McCarthy was charged with embezzlement some weeks ago, the amount involved being $200. The court was informed today that restitution had been made, so that case, too, was nolled.

A team owned by P. Schwartz and driven by Ted Sullivan, 10 Hempstead court, and an automobile, owned and operated by Walter Runke, 7 Brown place, Elmhurst, N. Y., were in collision this morning on Bank street. Neither vehicle was damaged of consequence.

An automobile owned by Edward S. May, of Wallingford, while parked beside the curb on State street, near Union street, was struck by an automobile bearing registration, N-4209. The May machine was disfigured.

MANUFACTURERS PROTEST AGAINST HIGH WATER RATES

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 13—The New London Manufacturers' association received a protest this evening at the meeting of the city council against a change in the water rates to be charged manufacturers for water. The protest was so vigorous and the facts presented seemed to have such merit that the communication of the manufacturers was referred to the committee of public works for consideration and report to the council. Harry Hastings, president of the Robert Gair company spoke to the members of the council, briefly but to the point. He represented that the manufacturers were providing facilities for fighting fires that the city would otherwise have to provide, or in other words that did the manufacturers fail to provide the modern facilities for protecting their property and thus the property that surrounded the factories, the city fire department would be compelled to do service that does not now have to do. It was declared that the city desired to have manufacturers locate here yet the city was not proceeding in a way in the matter of water supply that would encourage anyone to locate here. That the manufacturers, large users of water, were paying the same rate that the owner of the smallest house was paying. Mr. Hastings did not think the action taken by the city in establishing the water rates was based on economic principles and that there was any defense for it in sound reasoning.

Councilor Streeter said that the bills of certain manufacturers would run into money to the extent of 11,000 and that they were averse to paying such a charge. He said the water bills must be made out within a week or so, and advised that this matter be tackled and disposed of with as little delay as possible.

Councilor Fox believed the city engineer and the head of the water department should be called in, that the rate might be explained before anything was done with a definite purpose, that the policy of the city might be fixed for good. The result of the protest was that the matter was referred to the public works committee with the understanding that it should have the consideration to which it was entitled as soon as convenient.

The city council this evening voted the sum of $200 for the payment of the life guard at Ocean beach during the season. The cost of maintenance is $700 of which sum the Red Cross pays $200, the city now agrees to pay $200 and the balance is to be raised by subscription. It was pointed out that the guard did a good work and that his services were the means of the saving of life.

An increase was made in the sum the city will pay for the erection of the Jennings school because of a change in the material to be used, in order to give the structure greater strength in carrying the load that may be put upon it. Eye bolts instead of lintels are to be used in stated work. The increase in the cost of the building by this change will be $1,005, and this sum was voted for the purpose. It was voted to lay a sewer in Pierce street at a cost of $638, the persons whose property is benefitted to pay the entire cost.

The matter of refunding to Antone Avellar the sum of $12.57 which sum was wrongfully collected from him for taxes on property which he did not own, but which was in the possession of George M. Burgess came to the council on recommendation of F. C. Burrows, the assessor. The council would not comply with the request of the assessor but referred the matter to the city manager, that he may consult with and get the opinion of the director of law. Somebody should have known of the transfer of the title to the estate and the property should have been properly taxed. The person filing the list was the owner of the property and to him the city will look for the payment of the tax. The assessor held that the tax could not be collected from Burgess because it was not originally assessed against him.

AUTOS AS BATH-HOUSES SCHEME OF STINGY VISITORS

(Special to the Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 13—At the city council meeting tonight Councilor Fox asked that means be taken to prevent visitors to the beach from making dressing and disrobing places under the bathhouses. He said that people went to the beach and did not spend a nickel while they were there, while the city provided police protection, parking places and life saving guards. He said that automobiles were used by bathers for disrobing and for dressing because those who used their machines for this purpose did it to save the cost of bath-houses. The matter is to be taken up by the city manager, who is the city's business agent and he will order what police service is necessary to see that the laws are conformed to. Beyond that he cannot go to force visitors at the beach to spend money.

WESTERLY

High Sheriff Fred T. Mitchell of Washington county, returned to his home in Westerly Monday from South Kingstown, where he visited a number of reported dives in Wakefield and Narragansett, having made a thorough and personal search and examination of the places complained of and the adjoining districts. The majority of places visited were fish shacks, where the proprietors were warned and in one case in which a fish cart was run in connection, the sheriff found a fluid extract was handled which the proprietor stated that he gave away.

Progress is being made with the drive begun by the New Haven railroad on the west side of the west bound train shelter for passengers at the Westerly station. The driveway has been excavated to a sub-grade and tons of trap rock have already been spread about the oval center of the drive, where a flower garden is to be located. The surface of the driveway is to be covered with a binder. Under direction of Foreman Maurice E. Kent, 100 yards of cement curbing is being placed in position which will be the platform edge on the driveway. When the work is completed automobiles can take their passengers to west-bound trains without the present necessity of passengers walking through the subway or up the Canal street stairway. The next step for improvement would be to construct a shed shelter, that baggage would not be soaked in stormy weather.

For the purpose of hearing and acting upon Zoning Ordinances, and proposed rules and regulations, a special meeting of the Pawcatuck Fire district was called to order at 8 o'clock Monday evening at the P. S. Barber Hose House, Pawcatuck, by Moderator Albert G. Martin, with Dr. William A. Hillard, clerk.

The zoning ordinance for the Pawcatuck fire district, was prepared by the zoning committee, George R. McKenna, John N. Gallagher and William S. Crandall.

Under zoning the ordinance creates residential and business districts.

It provides that garages shall not store more than three motor vehicles, except that there may be an additional motor vehicle for each 3,000 square feet of area of the lot. Pawtucket has had a number of these public garages constructed in the residential section, and it is hoped to be able to control many property valuations.

Front yards will be established on the zoning map, and where is no well defined, established building line, the zoning commission will establish such line.

The ordinance is to be enforced by the zoning commission, and this commission also will have control of the other things which were included in the zoning law.

It is proposed to pass regulations which will prevent the hindering of fire trucks. All electric light, telephone or any other kind of poles will come under the control of the zoning commission. The height of awnings, as well as the over-hanging signs, will be prescribed.

In case any building on West Broad street is burned or torn down from the river bridge to the railroad bridge it is provided that only a building of fireproof construction shall take its place.

The commission wak also given authority to see that buildings which have been damaged by fire are removed, taken down or repaired immediately.

A control of all the sidewalks and the location of them is in the hands of this commission.

Burdick, the newly elected moderator, read and explained the amendments to the district charter as passed by the Rhode Island legislature in accordance with 12 recommendations made by a legislative committee comprising himself, A. T. Wall and Daniel F. Larkin, and authorized by the district at an adjourned meeting held at Norman Hall last fall.

The moderator was empowered to appoint a committee of three to draft a set of by-laws based upon the new powers granted the fire district by the legislature. This committee, which is to be named later, will report at the adjourned meeting of August 24.

The moderator was also empowered to appoint committee to arrange a budget and investigate the garbage situation before August 24.

Commander A. H. Davis, Dr. John Champlin and Frank W. Coy were named to confer with the harbor masters regarding sewage disposal and other problems pertaining to Little Narragansett bay and the Pawcatuck river.

In lieu of a definite appropriation prior to the levying of a tax the park commission was authorized to make any necessary expenditures. J. Frank Champlin gave an informal report on what the commission has done during the past year with its limited funds. His report was supplemented by remarks by Daniel F. Larkin, who described the repairs that had been made on a bad stretch of sidewalk along Bay street also explained the reasons for increasing wharfage rates at the Watch Hill dock.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

During the past week building activities in Norwich held up to the seasonal average of previous years, there being eleven permits for new building granted by Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton. Among these permits were two for new dwellings and one for a large five-car garage.

The work on local projects under construction was brought well along during the past week. At the old Y. M. C. A. building on Broadway which is being remodeled for N. S. Gilbert and Sons the top floor of the building was finished off and is now ready for the painters. The fourth floor is almost complete with the exception of the metal ceilings which will be put in this week. The work on the other floors is also well along. Archibald Torrance has the contract.

Other buildings have also been brought along at a good rate of speed during the past few weeks. At East Great Plain there is a garage going up and several houses are in the various stages of construction. In this section there has been a very marked increase in the amount of new building done. Within the past year at least 15 new dwellings have been erected and one store and other buildings.

The permits issued by Fire Marshal Stanton during the past week are as follows:

To Healy and Washburn to erect a frame cottage on Goldberg avenue for M. Donovan. The house will be 26x26 feet with stone and concrete foundation. The exterior will be finished in clapboards and shingles and the interior in hardwood and plaster.

To Mrs. Cordelia Charbotte to add a roof to the present open veranda at her house at 98 High street.

To Antonfe Delema to erect a frame house on Everett street. The house will be one story, 24x26 feet, with concrete foundation. The sides will be finished in cedar shingles and the roof will be covered in slate-surfaced shingles. The interior will be finished in hardwood and hard finish plaster.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

In Norwich during the past week there were 25 sales of real estate, five more than for the corresponding week in 1924. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $192,100 and $66,310.

There were 10 sales of real estate in New London during the past week as compared to 6 sales for the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $61,269 and $28,815.

State Building Permits

Building permits for the week in the towns of the state reported in The Comercimal Record, numbered 317, comparing with 304 in the same week of last year, and 303 in 1923. The cost of new construction for this week was $1,558,682. A year ago new construction work to cost $836,805 was started, and in 1923 the cost of new buildings amounted to $1,183,150.

Building Construction

A continuance well into June of the high powered building drive which had been under way nationally since the first of the year is indicated in the monthly review for July of the Federal Bank of Boston. The Review says: "Contracts awarded in New England during the first three weeks of June were approximately eight per cent greater than in the corresponding period of last year. The value of contracts in May was 15 per cent greater than in the previous month and May, 1924, and was one of the highest monthly totals on record. A large part of this increase was found in the so-called 'commercial' building, which constituted about one-fourth of the total. This proportion is considerably larger than the average, during the past two years, of this type of construction. Activity in residential building continued at a high rate in May.

"Costs in the building industry continue to decline, due to decreases in prices of some materials. The local labor situation has recently been unsettled by strikes in some of the building trades."

New London.

Plans have been drawn for two cottages at Clinton for Frank Arrigoni & Son, of Middletown. The dwellings will be one and a half stories, of frame construction, arranged for six rooms each. Hot air heat and other improvements will be provided.

The contract has been awarded for a new store front in the Grippo block at the corner of Bank and Belden streets, for M. H. Hollandersky.

A local builder has the contract for alterations and a brick addition at the corner of North Bank and John streets, for Peter Moos. The front of the building will be carried out of the building line and the first floor arranged for a store, with a tenement on the second floor. The cost of the work will be about $4,000.

The frame is up for one house and the cellar is in for another which a local contractor are building on Vauxhall street. The sub-contracts will be awarded shortly by the owners. The houses as reported before in these columns, will be of cottage type, each arranged for one family. The frame is also up for a house which the same contractors are building on Marshall place.

The city council has approved the proposal of Freeman Kennerson to erect a service pavilion for campers at Riverside Park. The structure will contain a kitchen for stores and concessions. The building will revert to the city in 10 years under the agreement entered into with Mr. Kennerson.

The Wetherell property on State and Green streets, has been sold by Arnold B. Hubbard of Detroit, and others, to Meyer H. Hollandersky, 102 State streeet. The property consists of a two and a half story building on Green street. Both are occupied by stores and offices.

Low-Air Pressure is the Answer

These were the things that car owners wanted.

The things that made them demand balloon tires.

Read them and then ask yourself how you can get them except in a tire that can be run at low enough air pressure to provide a soft air cushion between the car and the road.

Some car owners have been sold the balloon principle and then handed the name only.

Just a big, round, fat tire with the name "Balloon" on it will not necessarily give low-air pressure riding comfort.

The original ideal of the industry was a flexible side wall, low-pressure tire.

Yet today some "balloon" tires must be run at too high pressure for ideal cushioning, as they wear out too fast when they are run soft.

It is important to you as a car owner to remember this fact.

The United States Royal Balloon is spoken of as the "Balloon Tire Principle at its Best", because it can be run at low-air pressure without injury.

It is built of Latex-treated Web Cord which provides the necessary strength and flexibility.

It has the U. S. Low-Pressure Tread which wears slowly and evenly and eliminates early, uneven and unsightly wear.

Specify U. S. Royal Balloon Cords and be sure of true low-pressure cushioning.

HOW TO GET THIN

French Specialist Tells How to Lose Excess Fat Without Exercise, Habit Forming Drugs or Worthless Reducing Creams.

"If you are 10 to 100 pounds overweight, you can easily and safely lose all that fat," says a French specialist. "For years I suffered due to 30 pounds of excess fat. I was weak, short of breath, and 'all in.' I could not find any clothes to fit me, and I was thoroughly disgusted with life until I found out about SAN-GRI-NA, a marvelous discovery. I know that a great many fat men and women are going through these same troubles to-day. And for their benefit, I am glad to explain what I did to reduce and how they can easily and gradually lose a few pounds each week without any danger. Go to any good drug store and get a package of SAN-GRI-NA—(remember the name, and do not accept anything else, as nothing like this has ever before been offered to the American public).

SAN-GRI-NA, the formula of a French physician, has been used in Europe in private practice, where enormous prices have been paid for it. Simply take two tablets before each meal and watch your fat disappear. Once you have started to take SAN-GRI-NA, you should feel greater pep and energy. No more tired feeling. SAN-GRI-NA is guaranteed absolutely harmless and positive to relieve you or your money is refunded. Remember, that is all I did to get rid of 50 pounds of unhealthy, ugly rolls of fat. I have not regained one pound since I stopped using SAN-GRI-NA. I look and feel years younger, and I can sincerely recommend it to any fat man or woman."

On sale at any good drug or department store. If your druggist does not carry San-Gri-Na in stock he can get it from his wholesaler or you can send a money order or check for $1.50 direct to the Scientific Research Laboratories, 1841 Broadway, N. Y. City.

POETRY

EXPERIENCE.

Like Crusoe with the footless gold we stand
Upon the desert verge of death and say:
"What shall avail the woes of yesterday
To buy tomorrow's wisdom, in the land
Whose currency is strange unto our hand?
In life's small market they had served to pay
Some late-found rapture, could we but delay
Till time hath matched our means to our demand."
But otherwise Fate wills it, for, behold,
Our gathered strength of individual pain,
When Time's long alchemy hath made it gold,
Dies with us—hoarded all these years in vain,
Since those that might be heir to it the mould
Renew, and coin themselves new griefs again.

II.

O Death, we come full-handed to thy gate,
Rich with strange burden of the mingled years,
Gains and renunciations, mirth and tears,
And love's oblivion, and remembering hate,
Nor know we what compulsion laid such freight
Upon our souls—and shall our hopes and fears
Buy nothing of thee, Death? Behold our wares,
And sell us the one joy for which we wait.
Had we lived longer, life had such for sale,
With the last coin of sorrow purchased cheap,
But now we stand before thy shadowy pale,
And all our longings lie within thy keep—
Death, can it be the years shall naught avail?
"Not so," Death answered, "they shall purchase sleep."
—Edith Wharton.

EVENING.

Softly now the light of day
Fades upon my sight away;
Free from care, from labor free,
Lord, I would commune with Thee:

Thou, whose all-pervading eye,
Naught escapes, without, within,
Pardon each infirmity,
Open fault and secret sin.

Soon, for me, the light of day
Shall forever pass away;
Then, from sin and sorrow free,
Take me, Lord, to dwell with Thee!

Thou, who, sinless, yet hast known
All of man's infirmity;
Then from Thine eternal throne,
Jesus, look with pitying eye.
—George Washington Doane.

The social affairs bureau of the Tokio municipality is planning the construction of sixteen public eating houses in different parts of the city. Each building will cost about $6,000 yen. These dining halls, when completed, will be under the direct control of the bureau. The meals will be extremely simple, but well cooked, and will be offered at cost price. The bureau has been operating a number of these dining rooms successfully, the patrons being mostly office clerks and workmen.

A brook near Schifferstadt, Germany, charged with electricity, proved fatal to one of the team of horses recently when the owner drove into the stream to wash the wheels of his carriage. As soon as the horses touched the water one of them fell dead, while the other after frantic efforts managed to break loose from the harness and galloped out of the water. Investigation showed that the brook was charged with electricity, transmitted from a subterranean installation of power plant.

MARKET WAS IRREGULAR.

NEW YORK, July 13.—(AP)—Marking up of call money rates cast a damper on bullish enthusiasm in today's stock market and prices moved irregularly lower after a firm opening. The absence of many traders was reflected in the volume of trading, which fell below one million shares for the first full session since the end of April.

Although most of the week-end business and mercantile reviews were hopeful regarding the outlook for the immediate future, there was little in the day's news to influence the course of prices. Operators on the long side derived encouragement from the recent stiffening of commodity prices, particularly for such basic products as steel, copper and oil, but they found it difficult to attract a public following in their favorites. Bear traders were equally unsuccessful in forcing the liquidation of long stock by their hammering tactics, although they did succeed in uncovering a few weak spots.

While higher money rates are ordinarily looked for at this time of the year as surplus funds move to the interior to help finance crop movements, it is still believed to be a little early for the transfer of large sums for this purpose. The weekly bank statements indicated that local institutions have allowed their reserves to run down close to the legal minimum during the latter part of last week, and the calling of loans today was regarded, in some quarters as a correction of that condition. Time money rates were on a 6 to 6 1-4 per cent. basis, with practically no funds obtainable at 5 3-4, which was quoted for some of the shorter maturities last week. Prime commercial paper held steady at 3 3-4 to 4 per cent.

The uneven character of the day's price movement is illustrated by the fact that sixteen issues mounted to new high levels for the year, while seven others sank to new low prices for the year. The day's highs in the industrial group included Dodge Brothers common and preferred, Household Products, Phoenix Hosiery, Continental Can, Kansas City Power & Light first preferred, Underwood Typewriter, Owens Bottle, Goodrich Rubber, Weston Electrical Instrument common and class A, Artloom, Sterling Products and General Railway Signal, the last named soaring ten points to 195 and then easing to 192 1-4.

Savage Arms broke nearly three points to a new bottom price at 50 1-2 on selling apparently inspired by the delay in the marketing of its electrical refrigeration machine. Producers and Refiners preferred broken seven points to 94 in further reflection of the passing of the dividend, and the common broke 5 1-2 points to 18 and then rallied to 19 3-8. Chrysler Motors, Century Ribbon, Phillip Jones and Hanna first preferred A also broke below their previous resistance point.

The continued heavy demand for Rock Island, which was widely attributed to expectations of increased earnings and its eventual merger with the Southern Pacific, sent that stock up over one point to 48 3-4, and provided one of the few features of the railroad group. Wheeling and Lake Erie preferred, and Chicago and Eastern Illinois reached new high territory for the year. Delaware and Hudson crossed 147 for a gain of more than three points.

Rubbers started high on rumors of another early advance in tire prices, but the buying movement was checked when selling cropped out in other parts of the list. Standard industrials were mixed. American Can and Baldwin each closed about a point higher at 185 1-4 and 114 3-4, respectively, but U. S. Steel common closed fractionally lower at 115 1-2, after having sold a point above that figure.

Strength of the Scandinavian rates featured the irregular foreign exchange market. Norwegian kroner rallied about 1-4 of a cent to around 17.75 cents and Danish kroner moved up about 1-8 of a cent to around 20.63 cents. Demand sterling held steady around $4.85 3-4 and French francs at 4.79 cents.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

CHICAGO, July 13.—(AP)—Rapid new upturns in the price of wheat, 5 3-4c a bushel at the outside, went hand in hand today with enlarged general buying and reports that hot humid weather was heightening the danger of severe crop damage from black rust. According to one authority, indications are that the wheat crop in the Dakotas this season will be reduced forty per cent. from the government estimate of July 1. Closing quotations on wheat were strong, 2 1-2c to 5 1-4c net higher, September 1.53 3-4 to 1.54 and December 1.54 1-2 to 1.54 3-4. Corn finished at 1 1-2c to 2 3-4c up, oats at 7-8c decline to 1 5-8c advance, and provisions varying from 15c off to a rise of 7c.

It was deemed especially significant that much of the increased buying of wheat today came from the northwest, where the black rust fungus has been threatening the spring crop and where a crisis has apparently about been reached. From the outset, the trade here was bombarded with damage reports from the spring crop states and also with advices of deterioration in the Canadian spring crop promise.

Scarcity of sellers became more and more evident as the day neared an end, and this circumstance was emphasized by reports that receipts of winter wheat in the southwest were smaller, with millers eager to purchase. Meanwhile, a decrease of 794,000 bushels in the United States' available supply total was announced.

Corn and oats derived strength from wheat. County offerings of corn to arrive were small, and the corn visible supply fell off 2,448,000 bushels.

Provisions averaged lower, influenced by the action of hog values.

PAID $200 FINES FOR BEATING STATE POLICEMAN

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 13—Charles Stevens and Edward McDougal, Astoria, N. Y., were arraigned on continuance, in the Waterford town court, late this afternoon, charged with assault and battery on State Policeman Joseph Bobnick of Groton barracks. Stevens and McDougal were represented by counsel and entered a demurrer, which was overruled by Judge Frederick N. Dimmock and a fine of $200 and costs was imposed in each case. Relatives of the accused were in court and paid the penalty imposed by the court.

Stevens and McDougal were occupants of a Cadillac machine in Waterford two weeks ago. Officer Bobnick had been complained to by autoists because of the alleged reckless manner in which Stevens was operating the car. When Bobnick halted the machine, Stevens was ordered out of the car to determine whether he was sober and when the officer started to search the car to ascertain if liquor was being carried, McDougal and Stevens attacked the officer, beating Bobnick badly and leaving him in a semi-conscious condition in the highway. Bobnick was taken to Lawrence Memorial associated hospital, where he was under treatment several days and Stevens and McDougal were apprehended the day following the assault in Packerville, near Moosup. Since their arrest Stevens and McDougal have been in jail here.

Charles Park, Poquonoc, operator of a public service machine was arraigned on a charge of reckless driving, he having been arrested several days ago by State Police Officer Henry Albright. He pleaded not guilty, but was adjudged guilty and a fine of $25 and costs was made. Judge Dimmock ordered $15 of the fine remitted.

Byron E. Ames, Colchester, pleaded guilty to a charge of speeding and drew a fine of $10 and costs. The fine was ordered remitted. Ames was arrested Sunday by Waterford authorities.

Genaro Martino, Hartford, was fined $25 and costs for reckless driving on the Hartford turnpike Sunday. He was arrested by State Police Officer Henry Albright.

Samuel Snitkin, New London, was fined $25 and costs on a charge of reckless driving after having pleaded guilty of the offense, which was committed Sunday. Judge Dimmock ordered the entire fine remitted, so that Snitkin only paid the costs of the court, about $10.

B. P. Perry, Hartford, arrested by Waterford constables, Sunday on a charge of speeding, escaped severe penalty, for the charge was nolled upon Perry paying the costs of the court, approximately $10.

WILL DISTRIBUTE TROUT FINGERLINGS IN STREAMS

Supt. John W. Titcomb will begin Wednesday to distribute trout fingerlings in the streams throughout the state. He has received a large number of applications for these fish to be placed in waters which will be open to the general public for fishing. The fingerlings were hatched at the Windsor Locks and Burlington hatcheries. Last year Superintendent Titcomb distributed 600,000 fingerlings and it is expected that about as many will be distributed this year.

Superintendent Titcomb is negotiating for the sale of the state game farm at Madison. He expects to sell it for not less than $20,000. There are two fine dwelling houses on the property, one of which is of modern construction. There are over 130 acres in the farm and a number of buildings on it in addition to the two residences.

STRUCK BY AUTOMOBILE ON NORTH MAIN STREET

Dr. Paul A. Gadie was summoned and took four stitches to close the wound in the girl's head and also treated her for minor bruises. She is resting comfortably at her home.

MACHINE LOST WHEEL IN BROADWAY HILL COLLISION

The Ford coupe driven by Mrs. Mary Lee Buckley of 39 Cliff street was damaged to the extent of forty dollars when struck Monday morning by an automobile owned and driven by Joseph Antinello of 121 Summit street. The accident occurred on Broadway hill and an investigation was made by State Policeman Whitmarsh. The Buckley machine lost a front wheel and the front end was badly damaged. The damage to the other car was slight.

CHIEF JUSTICE'S OPINION IN SUMMARY PROCESS

In the summary process suit of Albert Stanley Main of North Stonington against his tenant Malcolm E. Thompson of North Stonington, in which the decision of the justice court in favor of Main was affirmed by Judge C. B. Waller of the common pleas court, but the supreme court has found error, the opinion by Chief Justice Wheeler has been filed with clerk Lewis Crandall of the common pleas court.

The following is the opinion written by Chief Justice Wheeler:

Wheeler, C. J. The Justice court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a jury trial. The statute gave the plaintiff the right to move for a jury "on or before the return of such complaint." The defendant did not so move, until sixteen days thereafter. He claimed this right because the complaint had been permitted to be amended by leave of court on June 14th, by alleging an additional ground of recovery concerning whose allegations he had had no opportunity to claim a jury trial. The original complaint of summary process alleged a tenancy terminable at the option of the lessor, the amendment to the complaint added an additional ground of termination, viz:" on any dishonest act upon the part of the defendant in connection with said part or its management." The amended complaint merely alleged two separate grounds of recovery, through a termination at will, or by reason of express stipulation. The statute did not give the defendant the right to move for a jury trial at any time later than the return day of the complaint and an amendment of the complaint could not extend the period named in the statute. The demurrer is addressed to the entre complaint, yet grounds 4 and 6 assume that it is addressed to one of the grounds of recovery stated in the complaint, that for a violation of an express stipulation of the lease. If ground 4 had been addressed to this, this ground of recovery would have been eliminated since the ground of demurrer is well taken. Practice Book, No. 194. Grounds of demurrer 1, 2, 3, and 5, are based upon the failure of the complaint to allege any forfeiture of the lease for breach of a condition or covenant therein, or that the plaintiff prior to the institution of the suit had made a declaration of forfeiture.

The complaint does allege a termination of the lease at the option of the lessor, and this is a sufficient allegation as to the cause of action based upon such termination. The notice to quit possession given upwards of three weeks prior to the summary process action was notice of the exercise by the plaintiff of his option to terminate. The condition of this record would have furnished ground for finding error in the failure of the Justice to render judgment for the defendant in view of the fact that none of the allegations of the special defense were denied, and under our rules unless waived, must be taken as admitted. This entitled the defendant to a judgment and there is nothing in the bill of exceptions to indicate that the parties tried the case as though issue had been joined upon the facts alleged in this special defense. But in the memorandum of decision it is stated that the case proceeded to trial without objection on the part of the defendant, and this we take it was intended as a statement that the parties proceeded to trial as if issue had been joined on this special defense. Under these circumstances we do not feel that error should be found where the matter was one of clear inadvertence in not incorporating in the bill of exceptions the true situation.

Error is assigned that the Justice erred in overruling the claim of law of the defendant Thompson that as a defendant he had the right to remove there from and sell any manure made from the products not raised on the farm, but which he had brought to the farm from their premises or had purchased elsewhere. Whether this claim of law arose upon a ruling on evidence, or upon the overruling of a claim of law made by the defendant cannot be told from a reading of the bill of exceptions. The bill of exceptions does not state that the manure was produced from fodder purchased by the defendant. Until this does appear there would be no basis for the claim of law that defendant had the right to move the manure. Nor are the facts surrounding the ruling sufficiently stated, if this claim of law was upon a ruling on evidence, to enable us to pass upon the matter.

The final grounds of error pressed are the assumption by the court of facts other than those stated in the judgment of the justice, and its overruling the plaintiff's claim that the judgment of the justice was erroneous. The trial court affirmed the judgment of the Justice. The only judgment recited in this record and found in the bill of exceptions is the oral judgment rendered by the Justice as follows: "I find that the defendant was dishonest in his conduct of the farm and find this issue for the plaintiff, but I also find that the plaintiff had no right to put the defendant off from the farm in question because the defendant had cultivated and planted crops. I render judgment to the effect that the defendant is guilty and that he is bound over to the Court of Common Pleas."

The two issues for decision under the complaint were whether the lease contained a provision giving the lessor the right to terminate the lease, as his option, or upon a dishonest act upon the part of the lessee in connection with the farm. The court found the issue of dishonesty for the plaintiff Main, and finds that defendant Thompson has the right to remain on the premises and harvest his crops, and rendered judgment that the defendant was guilty and that he be bound over to the Court of Common Pleas. This is no adjudication of the prayer of the complaint lessor for "judgment for the possession of said leased premises." The justice evidently regarded the case as a criminal one and rendered judgment accordingly. It follows that there was no valid judgment rendered by the justice.

There is error, the judgment of the court of common pleas for New London county is reversed and the case remanded with direction to said court to enter its judgment in favor of plaintiff in error Thompson and setting aside the judgment of the justice of the peace.

In this opinion the other judges concurred.

WATERFORD TOWN COURT ASSESSES $800 FINES

Fines totalling $800 in addition to costs were imposed upon three violators of the liquor law Saturday afternoon in Waterford town court before Judge Frederick N. Dimmock. The accused were placed under arrest following a series of raids made by the Waterford constabulary, assisted by federal prohibition agents and state policemen on the night of July 2.

Mrs. Nicholas Homan, who lives on a farm near the Oswegatchie road, was arraigned on three counts, actual sale, keeping with intent to sell, and reputation. It was alleged in town court that this was her second offense. Three bottles of liquor, testing 48 per cent., 76 per cent., and 22 per cent., alcohol, respectively, were presented as evidence. Mrs. Homan pleaded guilty to all three charges. She was fined $200 on each of the first two and $100 on the third.

Clarke Brown, cook at the Retisserie Inn, Waterford, was charged with actual sale, having sold a quart of White Horse to members of the Waterford constabulary on the night of June 24. Counsel for the defendant demurred to the complaint but the demurrer was overruled. Brown was found guilty and was fined $200 and costs.

Joseph Hanoski of Broad street extension, Waterford, was charged with having sold a pint of moonshine to a Waterford constable. He pleaded guilty and was fined $100 and costs.

Mrs. Homan was unable to pay her fine immediately so she was placed under $1,000 bonds pending payment of the fine. The other two defendants paid up.

DECISION ON LEGALITY OF INDICTMENT IN EVOLUTION CASE TO BE MADE TODAY; JUDGE RAULSTON WARNS NEWS REPORTERS

Court Threatens to Institute Contempt Proceedings Against Any Reporter of Any News Service Found to Have Violated the Privacy of the Court—Warning Was Provoked by Report That Certain News Reporters Had "Sought to Anticipate" the Nature of the Ruling on the Defense Motion to Quash the Indictment Against Scopes—The Court Referred the Matter of Who Should Lead the Daily Prayer to the Dayton Ministerial Association.

DAYTON, Tenn., July 14.—(AP)—The third day of the Scopes evolution trial ended amid stormy scenes here late this afternoon without the jury which will try the young school teacher having been sworn in, and before Judge John T. Raulston had announced his decision on the defense motion to quash the indictment.

"It was a stormy day" the judge remarked as he left the bench, from which he had a moment earlier warned news reporters of possible contempt of court proceedings because of publication of stories intimating the judge would deny the defense motion to quash. A committee of newspapermen was named to investigate the premature publication.

A statement from a correspondent of the International News Service was heard by the committee and it announced it would report to the judge tomorrow.

The storm occurred at the end of a long day of waiting to learn what the court would do in response to the defense's attempt to end the trial by establishing the unsoundness of the indictment and the unconstitutionality of the Tennessee statute which says that public school instructors shall teach no theory of evolution which denied the biblical story of man's creation.

When the judge at length entered the courtroom, after a recess of hours which he employed in writing his decision, he was confronted by a defense motion asking that the court's practice of opening the morning session of court with prayer be discontinued. In addition, the motion asked and backed its request with a signed affidavit from churchmen outside Rhea county that if the prayer opening session be continued the court would find that some minister of beliefs other than those of fundamentalists to lead the devout appeal.

In filing this motion, Arthur Garfield Hays, for the defense was interrupted by the objections of Attorney General Stewart who declared that the court at this stage was not an assembly met for the purpose of hearing a motion.

The prosecution chief's objection was reiterated by Dudley Field Malone, defense lawyer, in a sharp verbal exchange.

The court restored order and announced he would refer the petition to the Dayton ministerial association with the request that this body choose the clergymen who should lead the daily prayer. The crowd applauded.

Court Warns Reporters

The court then announced that he would not publish his decision on the pending motion until tomorrow, explaining that he had been informed by certain news reporters or services had presumed to forecast the tenor of his ruling and had dispatched news reports to this effect. Declaring that it should be established that the privileges of the court had been violated he could immediately institute contempt of court proceedings against the accused persons, he called for a conference of representatives of the press and dismissed the court session.

In the conference which followed immediately, Judge Raulston appointed a committee of five reporters whom he charged to investigate the matter and report to him.

The committee was announced as Richard Beamish, Philadelphia Inquirer; Forest Davis, New York Herald Tribune; Philip Kingsley, Chicago Tribune; Earl Shaub, Universal Service; Tony Muto, New York Evening Bulletin.

Controversy over Prayer

The issue over the opening of court with prayer appeared at the beginning of today's session when Judge Raulston invited the Rev. A. C. Stribling, pastor of the Dayton Cumberland Presbyterian Church, to offer prayer from the bench before the beginning of the official session.

Prayer had been offered by a Methodist minister on opening of court Friday, the first day, before the jury was chosen. Yesterday a Baptist minister led the prayer, the jurors, unsworn, sitting in their courtroom seats. This morning as the invitation was made and the court and spectators were directed to stand, the jurymen had not entered.

As the crowd rose, Clarence Darrow held up an objecting finger and addressed the court. He told Judge Raulston that the defense wished to protest against the public court prayer because it might prejudice the case of John T. Scopes in the minds of the jury and the court.

"I object to turning this court into a meeting house," Darrow declared. Attorney General Stewart asserted that it was the custom of the Rhea county court to open with a prayer, "the people around this section are a God fearing people" he said, and insisted that the practice be uninterrupted.

After some confusion Mr. Malone formally supported Mr. Darrow's contention.

Judge Raulston declared that he wished to be "reasonable" to all parties. He believed in prayer and practiced it himself, he said. He overruled the objection of the defense and Mr. Stribling led the prayer.

Mr. Darrow then asked that the court permit the record to show that he entered the same objection daily, would show the objection daily and show also that it had been overruled in each instance.

Mr. Darrow had been expected to continue his address of yesterday in support of the motion of defense to quash the indictment on the grounds of vagueness in the indictment and unconstitutionality of the anti-evolution law. He told Judge Raulston he would not continue.

The court announced that he wished to deliver his ruling on the motion to quash "after fair consideration of the profound issues involved and without guessing." He had been unable to finish the transcripts of his decision, he said, and in order to give him time to complete the document he declared a recess until one o'clock.

Shortly after the hour set for reassembling, a court attendant reported that the judge would not return until 2:30. At that time, Judge Raulston appeared and told the packed throngs which kept their places throughout the afternoon that he was not yet ready. He warned newspapermen that his ruling could not legitimately be published until he himself read it from the judicial eminence. He then declared he would institute contempt proceedings against any who announced his ruling before the court should declare it.

Attorneys tonight expected Judge Raulston to announce his ruling on the motion to quash at the court opening tomorrow morning. The procedure thereafter will be to swear in the jury, arraign the defendant and receive his plea, and to call in witnesses to support the contention of the state that Professor Scopes violated the Tennessee statute against teaching evolution in the public schools.

Ten or more high school pupils, members of Mr. Scopes' class of the recent session of the Dayton school, have been summoned by the state and are expected to give their testimony tomorrow, unless further motions by counsel delay the routine.

CONTROVERSY OVER PRAYER AT THE EVOLUTION CASE

DAYTON, Tenn., July 14.—(AP)—A petition calling on Judge Raulston to discontinue his practice of opening morning sessions of the court with prayer was presented by defense counsel immediately after Judge Raulston returned to the courtroom after preparing his decision on the defense motion to quash.

Judge Raulston referred the petition to the Dayton Ministerial Association, asking that they choose the preacher who should render the morning prayer.

The petition was signed by Dr. Charles Francis Potter and others.

A sharp clash of counsel occurred when Attorney General Stewart objected to the reading of the petition by Arthur Garfield Hays. Mr. Stewart retorted sharply when his objection was interrupted by defense counsel.

"Will you please keep your mouth shut?" the state's attorney cried across to opposing counsel. An uproar resulted.

The spectators applauded when Raulston referred the petition to the Ministerial Association.

The petition says:

"We, the following named representatives of various well known churches and synagogues, do hereby petition your honor that if you continue your custom of opening the daily session of court in Rhea county with prayer, you select the officiating clergymen from among other than fundamentalist churches in alternation with fundamentalist clergymen.

"We beg you to consider the fact that among the persons intimately connected with and actively participating in this trial of Mr. John T. Scopes, there are many to whom the prayers of fundamentalists are not spiritually uplifting and are occasionally offensive. Inasmuch as by your own ruling all the people in the courtroom are required to participate in the prayers by rising, it seems to us only just and right that we should occasionally hear a prayer which requires no mental reservations on our part and in which we can conscientiously participate.

"Rabbi Jerome Mark, Bethel Temple, Knoxville, Tenn.

"Rev. D. M. Welsh, Knoxville, Unitarian Church.

"Rev. Fred W. Hagan, First Congregational Church, Huntington, W. Va."

The defense motion offered by Mr. Hays after the petition was:

"Still preserving our exception to the opening of court by prayer, and without waiving the same and renewing that objection, we move this court that if prayers are to be made, this petition be granted, and that some occasions the prayers be made by men who think that God has shown his divinity in the wonders of the world in the book of nature quite as much as in the book of the revealed word."

FLOOD IN SUBWAY UNDER EAST RIVER ABATED

NEW YORK, July 14—(A. P.)—Subway service was resumed today in the Steinway tunnel connected midtown, Manhattan and Queens, after a thirty-six hour shutdown caused by the flooding of the tube from a broken water main at Fifth avenue and 42nd street.

The opening of the tunnel, which had been flooded to a depth of nine feet under the East river, proved a boon to thousands of commuters who had been handicapped by the stopping of subways.

Owners of American Ships Lose Test Case

Involved Treaty Allowing Foreign Ships to Bring Liquor Into U. S. Ports.

NEW YORK, July 14.—(AP)—A test attack upon the so-called "moist" treaty with Great Britain, which permits vessels of foreign registry to bring liquor under seal into United States ports failed today when Federal Judge Mack ruled that the federal courts are without power to compel prosecuting offices to enforce penal laws.

Judge Mack ruled that whether the treaty is contrary to law and the constitution or not the courts cannot order enforcement of the penal laws. "The federal courts are without power to compel this" he said, "whatever the ground of the failure of prosecuting officers to enforce the laws may be. The remedy for inactivity of that kind is in the executive and ultimately with the people."

The suit was brought by members of the Neptune Association of Masters and Mates in an attempt to have the treaty declared unconstitutional. The plaintiffs, all interested in American shipping, claim that ships flying the American flag were being damaged because passengers preferred to travel on British ships in order to secure liquor beyond the three-mile limit. They asked for injunction restraining British ships "from violating the law and constitution." The injunction was denied.

As to the constitutionality of the treaty Judge Mack said, in his opinion: "While on the motion to dismiss for want of equity both counsel desire a ruling on the constitutionality of the treaty, I find it unnecessary and, therefore, improper to consider that question in view of my opinion that, even if the treaty were unconstitutional, as to which I intimate no opinion, the bill states no cause for equitable relief."

He held that the damage claimed to have been inflicted resulted not from the fact that British ships brought liquor into port but from the fact, so it appeared, that passengers preferred British ships.

REVIEW SHOWS BUSINESS CONDITIONS OF 1924 GOOD

WASHINGTON, July 14.—(AP)—Business conditions during 1924 left little room for complaint on the part of the American people, Secretary Hoover declared today in the foreword to the commerce department's official history of the year's trade.

Publication of this document, summarizing statistics of production and distribution covering the nation's trade, coincided with announcement of foreign trade figures disclosing a balance of $1,042,681,497 in favor of the United States in the last fiscal year.

In his foreword Mr. Hoover cited that 1924 had been marked by very complete employment of the country's working force; that agriculture had experienced "some partial recovery from three years of extreme difficulty," that transportation efficiency had been high; that buildings and construction had established new records. And that the general production and distribution of articles for consumption had been measurably satisfactory.

ADVERSE TO RECEIVERS OF MARLIN FIREARMS CORP.

HARTFORD, July 14.—(AP)—Denying the petition of George Ramsey and others, receivers of the Marlin Firearms corporation, in an action to conserve the assets of the defendant, Judge Thomas ordered the payment of $4,455, a "service charge" claimed by the Commercial Credit company for the collection of assigned accounts of the bankrupt defendant, to the credit company in a decision handed down in New Haven today. The court denied the specific petition of the receivers of the Marlin Firearms who asked the Commercial Credit company to pay over $2,636.40 collected from the Shapleigh Hardware company, now held by the credit company, authorized collectors.

LLOYDS SHOWS LOW RECORD IN SHIPPING

NEW YORK, July 14—(A. P.)—A new low record in world shipping since the world war is shown in the statement issued today by Lloyd's register of shipping for the quarter ended June 30 covering all maritime countries. On June 30, there were building or on the ways 2,369,831 tons as compared with 2,396,910 tons on March 31, 1925, a decrease of 27,089 tons.

Increases in tonnage orders over those of the preceding quarter were received by shipyards of the United States, Italy, Japan and some of the smaller shipbuilding nations.

Orders for steam tonnage continue to decrease, while orders for motor ships show a steady increase. Almost 50 per cent of the world's shipbuilding now calls for motor ships. During the past quarter the United States moved up from seventh to sixth place in comparative ranking as a shipbuilding nation.

BRITISH MINE OWNERS PARLEY WITH MINERS

LONDON, July 14—(A. P.)—The mine owners association today offered open and direct negotiations with the miners federation. There is no indication, however, that this move was intended to sidetrack the government inquiry, which as at present arranged will open Friday, and from which a report is expected within a week.

As the mine owners decline to withdrawn their notice terminating the agreement with the mine workers, it hardly seems likely that the miners will accept direct negotiations. This question will be settled by a vote at the Scarborough conference of the miners federation tomorrow.

Coolidge Spent Day Receiving Callers

Today the President Will Inspect the Foreriver Shipyards at Quincy, Mass.

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., July 14—(A. P.)—President Coolidge wound up the third wek of his stay here today with a round of activities that gave White Court, with callers coming and going, anything but the appearance of a quiet retreat of a vacationist. The executive received more callers than on any day since his arrival, all of them dropping in solely to pay their respects.

Among the president's visitors were Dr. Harry Garfield, president of Williams College and war time federal fuel administrator, and former Governor Cox of Massachusetts who was accompanied by a group of men who served on the Massachusetts executive council when Mr. Coolidge was governor and Mr. Cox lieutenant governor.

At noon the executive held the semi-weekly conference with newspapermen, receiving them in his study instead of on the lawn as has been his custom since he started his vacation.

Tomorrow Mr. Coolidge will board the Mayflower for a cruise down the coast to Quincy, Mass., to inspect the Foreriver Ship Yards where the new airplane carrier Lexington is under construction.

WHEREABOUTS OF PHILIP KNOX STILL UNKNOWN

SYRACUSE, N. Y., July 14.—(A. P.)—The thrill of the quarry was still Philip Knox Knapp's tonight, with the long arms of the nation's civil and military law grouping in a maze of false trails for a definite lead to his whereabouts.

Out of a series of new, and contradictory, developments today the one given most credence by Syracuse police was a positive statement by two Syracuse men that they saw Knapp in this city last Thursday night, on the eve of appearance in the newspapers of the strange story connecting the army deserter with the murder of Louis Penella, Hempstead, L. I., taxicab driver.

The information was offered by Andrew Helm, and his son, Leo, who told detectives he knew Knapp well.

According to their story, Knapp was clad in army khaki and he was with another man in a small car, his companion was a pugnacious appearing youth of dark complexion. The two stopped at the Helm stand for a light lunch.

This development was held by authorities to dovetail with reports from Seneca county that Knapp was believed to have been the person who abandoned an automobile owned by his father a few miles from the Knapp summer home at Covert Cove, Cayuga Lake.

HANGED HIMSELF WHEN GIRL REFUSED TO MARRY HIM

BREWSTER, N. Y., July 4—(A. P.)—During an automobile ride last night Ernest Murello, 17 years old, twice asked Miss Cora Mason, of Crafts, with whom he had gone for several years, to marry him. Each time she refused saying that they were too young.

Murello stopped the car on the state road near Crafts, got out and mounted a nearby stone wall. He then put one end of a leash around his neck and made the other end fast to a limb of a tree. Jokingly, so Miss Mason thought, he said that he would kill himself, unless she agreed to marry him.

When he suddenly swung out from the wall, Miss Mason became frightened and ran for help. A few minutes later when she and others returned to the spot, Murello was on the ground dead, his neck broken.

The body was taken to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Murello of Brewster. Coroner McKeown, of Putnam county is holding an inquest tonight.

Miss Mason in telling of the events which preceded Murello's death said that she did not know whether Murello slipped on the wall or deliberately dropped off.

AMERICAN YACHT DEFEATS BRITISH SECOND TIME

ROTHESAY, Scotland, July 14—(A. P.)—In improved sailing weather with a stiff breeze from the south the American six-meter yacht Lanai succeeded today in winning the second of the necessary three victories to take the Seawnhaka cup back to the United States. The Lanai led throughout. The race was sailed over a windward and leeward course of fourteen miles in two legs. The times for the first round were: Lanai, 2 hours, 55 minutes, 35 seconds; Coila, 2 hours, 57 minutes, 3 seconds.

In the second round the Lanai was home to receive the winning gun 22 seconds ahead of her rival.

The final times were: Lanai, 4 hours, 29 minutes, 37 seconds; Coila, 4 hours, 29 minutes, 59 seconds.

The Coila won the first race on Saturday, while the Lanai was victorious yesterday.

KILLED WIFE TO RELIEVE HER FROM SUFFERING

PARIS, July 14.—(AP)—Eugene Gazio, a 40-year-old dye worker, was arrested today at Creil, about 25 miles north of Paris, charged with the murder of his wife. The case is another one of "pity murder," in which the accused claims that he strangled the victim to relieve her from suffering.

Gazio said she had suffered terribly from a disease of the stomach and longed for death. As he was unable to earn enough to give her proper medical treatment, he yielded to her desire to be put out of misery.

Gazio begged the police to send him to a penal institution, saying that nothing could be worse than what he had endured.

STRIKE OF DOCK WORKERS IN PROGRESS IN HAVANA

HAVANA, Cuba, July 14.—(A. P.)—The strike of dock workers, which began yesterday, completely paralyzed activities along the waterfront today. The docks, with few exceptions, were idle, with auot 18 ships waiting to load and unload.

The dock workers are demanding that union inspectors shall be permitted to select and hire employes, and the steamship company, thus far has refused to concede the point.

DILATORY NEGOTIATIONS ON ANTHRACITE WAGE SCALE

All the "Stars" Were Absent From Parleys Yesterday—Only Technical Demands Were Discussed by Leaderless Delegates at Conference in Atlantic City—But 48 Days Intervene Before the Expiration of the Present Contract.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 14—(A. P.)—Anthracite scale negotiations were resumed today by under officials and subordinates with only forty eight days until September 1, when miners say the public will face a hard coal strike if the contract expiring August 31 is not renewed.

Today's parley produced an absence of "stars" which aroused ocmment.

The leaderless delegates conferred this afternoon and later reported some progress in discussion of such technical demands as method of paying contract miners' laborers and the general question of rate uniformity.

The major questions of wages, the check-off and the duration of new contract, any one of which is pronounced by both sides as of crucial importance, so far have been held in abeyance.

Enoch Williams, secretary of district 1, filled in today for John L. Lewis, miners' president, who departed yesterday for the West.

Philip Murray, vice president who was expected to assume Mr. Lewis' role, was unable to attend the session because of other matters. His place was filled by John Straubs, vice president of District 9.

W. W. Inglis, chairman of the six mine owners on the joint scale subcommittee, was also absent.

Miners cannot be drawn out as to whether they have taken umbrage at the rank of the men the mine owners have chosen to treat with them. Chairman Inglis is the only one of the six operators who heads a coal company. The remaining five are the general manager class.

Neither will the miners listen to questions whether the absence of Mr. Lewis and Mr. Murray means reprisal and "paying in kind."

Operators for their part deny there has been deliberate use of "second team" men. Veterans of other years have demanded and earned a rest, it was said. Competent successors, able and willing to undergo the thankless rigors of scale negotiations, do not grow on every bush, according to these spokesmen.

PUBLIC MEETING OF LEAGUE FOR PEACE AND FREEDOM

INNSBRUCK, Austria, July 14.—(AP)—The second public meeting of the conference of the International League for Peace and Freedom, called for today, was prohibited by the Tyrol provincial government in order to prevent a repetition of disturbances such as marked the first public meeting last night, when German Nationalist students prevented the speakers from being heard.

The German National party leader, Herr Pembauer, stated today that the Nationalist attack was not against the English and French speakers, as had been claimed, but against the German women delegates, principally Miss Mimi Jonash.

Four American women are among the thirty delegates to the conference, which opened last Saturday.

START TO ROW BOAT FROM BOSTON TO NEW YORK

BOSTON, July 14.—(AP)—Two oarsmen set out for New York today from the Union Boat club in the wherry "Venture," a light narrow craft with a port and starboard oar. Dr. Thomas K. Richards, physician to the Harvard football squad, manned one oar and his friend, S. Selfridge, a former naval officer, the other.

No record breaking was to be attempted, the men explained, and the novel trip was staged "for the fun of it." The rowers planned to make the voyage in fifty mile stages, stopping each night at some point along the way, and passing through the Cape Cod canal and Long Island Sound. Tonight's resting place was Plymouth. The men said they would return in about a week by train.

NATIONAL HOLIDAY WAS CELEBRATED IN FRANCE

PARIS, July 14—(A. P.)—Favored by brilliant weather and not discouraged by the higher prices, the French people today celebrated their national fete with rare zest, which no untoward incident marred. Wreaths were placed on the monuments of the heroes of the Bastile.

The ceremony of relighting the perpetual fires on the tomb of the unknown soldier at the Arch Triumph, was performed by a delegation of stricken war cripples in wheeled chairs.

Tonight, after the traditional fireworks, dancing was resumed until dawn.

FRENCH HOLIDAY WAS CELEBRATED IN ROME

ROME, July 14—(A. P.)—The French national holiday was celebrated here with a reception for the French colony at the embassy, where Ambassador Rene Besnarl delivered an address in which he said that France, thanks to her moral force and material riches, would be able to surmount the difficulties now facing her.

In a patriotic appeal he urged a stronger union among all Frenchmen, bitterly reproaching those carrying out acts of violence and attacking French civilization based upon the principles of the revolution of 1789.

The ambassador concluded with a moving tribute of homage to the French soldiers who are fighting in Morocco.

DISCHARGE OF REVOLVER WAS MISTAKEN FOR BOMB

NEW YORK, July 14.—(AP)—Magistrate Farrell's division of traffic court had a bomb scare today during which court attendants, witnesses and spectators dashed for places of safety when a loud report was heard.

Officers of the bomb squad were unable to find any traces of the supposed bomb and it later developed, after an exhaustive examination, that the explosion was caused by the accidental discharge of a policeman's revolver. The weapons of all the bluecoats in the room were examined and a discharged shell was found in the pistol belonging to a patrolman, whose name was withheld.

FIGHTING ALONG FRENCH FRONT IN MOROCCO

PARIS, July 14—(A. P.)—General Stanislaus Naulin, recently appointed commander-in-chief of the French forces in Morocco, arrived in Paris today and was received by Premier Painleve. He came from Wiesbaden, where he was in command of the Thirtieth Army Corps. A Moroccan division quartered in the Palatinate around Landau began leaving for Morocco; the last section will start tomorrow.

A simultaneous attack on the post at Aid Bou Aissa and a demonstration against the post at Skiffa Sunday night are the only two events officially mentioned today. The enemy was repelled with severe losses at both points, which are on the French left line held by the Colombat group.

The 14th of July celebration gave Marshal Lyautey an opportunity in the presence of the fighting in Morocco and the relief he felt at the appointment of General Naulin.

"The hardest is over," he said today, "but I confess I have passed days of anguish. We are sure today, with every increasing means, which will be still further increased, and with the command more solidly organized, not only of sustaining the attack, but of remaining masters of the situation for the definite security of Morocco and the French protectorate."

The Rabat correspondent of the Petit Parisien summarizes the situation as follows: "Fighting is raging everywhere along the 100 mile front and almost the entire French force is in the line and permanently on the alert, while the staff keeps cautious watch over the most sensitive section, that is, the roads that lead to Fez."

Smith said that he did not know what had happened to Nickerson and that he had not seen him since July 4 when Nickerson loaned him his automobile. An accident resulted in the car being taken to a local garage.

Smith said he went to visit his grandmother near Plattsburg and returned home last Sunday, only an hour before Nickerson's body was found. Later he went to Albany, he said, and was in that city until his return last night.

P.)—Seventeen Building and Loan Associations of this city, alleged to be insolvent of $418,491, were taken over today by the state department of banking and placed in charge of William R. Smith, special deputy commissioner. "Over-loaning of real estate" was given by investigators of the banking department as the reason for their financial difficulties.

Approximately 1,500 stockholders were said to be involved. The assets of the companies were placed at "more than $2,000,000" and the liabilities at $1,800,000, indicating that they had borrowed close to 90 per cent of the total valuation.

A. and at the opening of the session made the announcement that the part taken by the organization in caring for the New York Tribune "fresh air" children, who are due to arrive here August 10, will be taken in charge by the boys' work committee, P. First he'd get a cigar whose mildness reminded him of weak tea. Then he'd get one with the rush and wallop of a Jack Dempsey. And then? He changed to Blackstone!

He finds real mildness. But each puff also gives a full-bodied, satisfying flavor. Blackstone's 100% Havana filler grows on Cuba's sandy upland—famous for its light, mild tobacco.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

Five acts of real vaudeville opens for a run of three days at the Broadway Theatre tomorrow. Those who have visited the Broadway regularly will not want to miss the special program for the last of this week. Watch tomorrow's paper for the special announcement.

"Salome of the Tenements," produced by Sidney Olcott for Paramount from the novel by Anzia Yezierska, who wrote "Hungry Hearts" and other just as successful stories, comes to the Broadway tomorrow for three days.

Jetty Goudal, French beauty seen in "Open All Night," Godfrey Tearle, Conway's brother, and Jose Ruben are featured in the cast.

The story is one of Sonya Mendel nicknamed Salome of New York's tenement district. She meets and falls in love with a young millionaire who has established a settlement house in her neighborhood and has sacrificed a comfortable home and social position to live there and help brighten the lives of the inhabitants of Manhattan's Ghetto district.

Sonya borrows money from an unscrupulous usurer to make an impression on her philanthropic friend and by so doing almost ruins her chances for happiness—and love.

"Salome of the Tenements" is a picture with an appeal not unlike that of "Humoresque." It's real!

Palace Theatre

Heading the vaudeville for Thurs., Friday and Saturday at the Palace theatre will be the famous Australian Wood Choppers, Jackson and Lawler, in their novel and exciting tree-falling contest. A unique introduction to stage from Virginia forest and deepest brush. Actual forest trees fall on the stage at each performance.

H. Jackson and W. Lawler are the champion axmen of the world and have several times played the N. F. Hippodrome and Keiths Palace both New York and Boston.

They will be supported at the Palace with four other great acts and latest screen attractions.

For the first showings today are Pauline Frederick in "Smouldering Fires" and Lefty Flynn in "O U Cowboy."

Gossip impells a young man to propose marriage to his middle-aged employer in "Smouldering Fires," Universal-Jewel-Clarence Brown production now being screened in the Palace Theatre. Pauline Frederick and Laura La Plante are co-starred. Miss Frederick having the part of the middle-aged woman and Miss La Plante is her younger sister whom the young husband, Malcolm McGregor, loves. Tully Marshall, Wanda Hawley, Helen Lynch and George Cooper also have important parts.

For the first time in his career, Lefty Flynn plays the part of a drunk; in the opening scenes of "O. U. West." "Pretending that you are what you are not is not the nicest thing I can think of," Lefty remarked, "but the incident in the picture is so funny that I know it will pull down a lot of laughs."

At the Breed

In accord with the popular policy of transferring remarkable novels to the screen, Ouida's dramatic story Strathmore has been produced as a photoplay by William Fox, that specialist in motion picture adaptation from striking works of literature, and it will be seen at the Breed theater today and Thursday, under the title Flames of Desire.

Denison Clift, who directed the motion picture version of This Freedom, from the novel by A. S. M. Hutchinson, supervised the making of Flames of Desire. Wyndham Standing has the leading male role in the production and playing opposite him in the principal feminine part as Marion Vavasour, the courtesan heart wreckers, is Diana Miller.

Others in the cast are Richard Thorpe, Frank Leigh, George K. Arthur, Jackie Saunders, Frances Beaumont, Hayford Hobbs, Charles Clary and Eugenia Gilbert.

Few fiction works created greater stir in literary circles than Strathmore, here and abroad. A newspaper poll designed to reveal the popularity of contemporary novels available for screen adaptation placed the book from which Flames of Desire, is taken well to the top of the list. A scant synopsis of the story seems to indicate its scope as a screen production.

Daniel Strathmore, American diplomat, cynic and woman-hater, meets Marion Vavascour, the skilled courtesan, noted for her beauty and wit, as the result of the suicide of one of his young friends who could not stand her indifference to his suit. He first denounces but gradually falls under her almost hypnotic spell. This commences a series of tragedies. Death and living death follow in the wake of his love affair, wrecking friendship and blighting the beauty of the past with the constantly tragic developments of the present and the ominous doubts of the future. The story eventually untangles a web of passionate intrigues which affords a wide range of action and characterization for the cast. The Fox production follows Ouida's plot closely and the selection of performers was made with extreme care.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

In view of the fact that the Crystal Water company is to extend a new 6-inch main through Salisbury street to better supply its patrons in streets in that section of the borough, Chief A. P. Woodyard of the fire department has recommended to borough officials that an additional hydrant be installed about midway of that street. There are various good reasons for Chief Woodward's recommendation.

Salisbury street is a thoroughfare running from Furnace to School street—from the Danielson inn to the School street garage. Though not an accepted street of the town, it is very centrally located and the proposed hydrant would occupy a strategic position of great value. Streams directed from the proposed hydrant would cover two squares where fires more destructive than any in Danielson's history might occur if they went out of control. In the area that Chief Woodward wants to afford additional protection are such large frame structures as the Danielson Inn, the Winkleman building, the Shumway block, the Atawaugan hotel, the Phoenix building, the Phoenix Hall property, the Orpheum theatre, the Palace laundry, the group of large frame structures on the Kennedy property, the Paco Manufacturing company and numbers of smaller structures, including dwellings.

There is, of course, hydrant service for all this area at the present time, but an additional hydrant, which can be installed and maintained at comparatively small expense, would just about double this protection.

Such a hydrant as Chief Woodward recommends would have two outlet connections for fire hose and a larger outlet connection for steamer or pumper use. Danielson has been exceptionally free from heavy losses by fire. This has been largely due to the alertness and efficiency of the fire department. The safety from fire disasters that has been Danielson's good fortune through a score of years is also due to its fire department apparatus, its fire alarm telegraph system and such constant improvement of advantage in fighting fires as is represented in the proposed new hydrant installation.

Tuesday afternoon, funeral services for Ephriam H. Harrington, many years a resident at East Killingly, were conducted at the church in East Putnam by Rev. Mr. Newton of the church at Attawaugan. Relatives acted as bearers. The body was taken to Leicester, Mass., for burial. A. F. Wood was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Application that borough officials appoint four fire police has been made by Chief A. P. Woodward. A desire to better control automobile traffic in a fire area is the reason for requesting the appointments be made. The firemen have had some exasperating experiences with automobilists who have delayed and otherwise hampered their efforts to reach a fire and get into action. On one occasion the firemen had to move three automobiles themselves before a hose connection had been made with a hydrant. Numbers of drivers insist on getting in the way of the firemen going to or at fires, and it is believed that much of this difficulty can be corrected with the aid of fire police, as is done in many other towns and cities.

Ira A. Warren, who has charge of the fire alarm telegraph system, has completed the construction of a platform on a section of the roof of the Main street plant of the Paco Manufacturing company upon which the steam siren on which fire alarms are sounded will be re-located. Changes that the Paco company are making at the plant necessitated putting the siren in another place from that which it has occupied at the mill for years. Consideration also is being given to the purchase of a motor generator for installation at the central fire station for use in charging fire alarm system batteries.

Tuesday 1,000 fingerling bass were received here through the Danielson Rod and Gun club for distribution in Old Killingly pond. This is the first step the club has taken for the restocking of this splendid body of water, which appears to be ideal as a place in which bass will thrive. The bass released are about an inch and a half in length. It so happens that there are no restrictions of a special nature against fishing in Old Killingly pond. It is not in use as a reservoir from which any community obtains its water for domestic uses and one may fish there at any time during the open season, having complied with the license law and observing the laws pertaining generally to fishing.

Boys who gathered in the vicinity of the Chautauqua tent, Monday evening, became so boisterous that an officer was summoned to drive them away from the vicinity as a nuisance. No arrests were made.

In the town court Tuesday morning, Judge W. Fenner Woodward continued the cases of Georgianna Beaulac and Lillian Beaulac and fined Edward Allard, of Putnam, $1 and costs, a total of $22.56. The trio were charged with breach of the peace and were in court on complaint of Joseph Cusson. The young women are resident in the northern part of Killingly. Attorney Irving H. Miron, of Putnam, represented the accused.

Construction work continues on the building being erected on Stearns hill for the Eastern Dairies, Inc. This corporation includes several of the largest manufacturers and distributers of ice cream in New England. The local plant is to be used as a storage and distribution center. No cream will be manufactured there, at least for the present.

It was stated Tuesday morning that 101 guarantors for Chautauqua in 1926 have been obtained, thus assuring a series of entertainments for next summer. A slight deficit this year will be made up by the guarantors.

COMPLETING MAIN STREET

When the last city meeting voted for the replacement of the block pavement in Main street, between Market street and the West Side bridge, provision was made for a much needed improvement, the necessity for which has been fully recognized since Main street was made a one-way thoroughfare. It will mean the elimination of practically the last of the block paving and provide a modern hard surfacing for the entire length of this important street.

In the construction of this piece of roadway it is to be hoped that due consideration will be given to the fact that two rather bad grades are involved, one short and the other long. As for the motor vehicle traffic it would make little or no difference whether it is finished smooth as on the level or with indentations like a washboard, but it matters much to the horse drawn vehicles, and particularly the heavy loads. The necessity of providing some foothold for the horses exists through the year. When the cement road on Laurel Hill was laid the sharp grade near the bridge was made smooth against advice offered at the time it was being laid and it is possible to see horses falling, or going down on their knees, frequently in their efforts to get their loads up that hill. This is a condition that prevails not when slippery but during the twelve months of the year. Depressions will serve to overcome such a condition without injury to the riding surface.

The betterment of this section of Main street is a continuance of the policy which was adopted during the administration of Mayor Leroy of putting down a certain amount of permanent pavement each year. The good effects of it are to be noted in several directions and Norwich is today getting much better results from its cement roads than from that section of Main street which was built of vitrified brick, the first bit of so-called permanent street improvement that was done.

FIGHTING THE BILLBOARDS

Such progress as is made in the fight against the billboard only seems to spur on the ambition of others to get similar relief and restore the attractiveness of the countryside.

Even as the billboards grew in number there has been a steadily developing opposition to them. It has been the increase in number and size that has served to direct attention to the manner in which they mar the landscape and interfere with the pleasure of the highway users.

State after state has taken action to reduce them and now the people in the western end of Massachusetts, who have a right to be proud of the beauties of that region, are joining hands for the purpose of having disfigurements eliminated.

Today the highways are used as they never were before. The volume of traffic is growing and a large proportion of the motorists are interested in seeing the hills, the valleys, the rivers, the cliffs, the fields, the brooks, the rocks, the trees, the land formations, the many inspiring views from vantage points, the general delightful and refreshing scenes that the great outdoors present. And they don't like the idea of dodging great billboards in order to do so. They are not impressed by the roads which are filled with all kinds of merchandising propositions which detract from the pictures which nature presents.

Up in Maine there has recently gone into effect a law prohibiting all such signs on the highways. It is evident that Maine appreciates the value of its tourist business and it knows that unless it protects its natural beauties and attractions it will lose such visitors. Maine is not much later than Minnesota in the adoption of a similar law, in which state satisfaction was manifested by the people in knocking down the prohibited signs when the owners failed to remove them by the designated time. It doesn't require much effort on the part of those who start a movement against the billboard to arouse a vigorous opposition.

AIDING CHINA

What the administration seeks is to do something for the relief of the situation in the far east, in suggesting a conference of the powers concerning China. The situation there clearly calls for something being done and in view of the interest of several nations it is important that there should be concerted action.

The president has declared that he believes that China should accord proper protection to the subjects of all nations, and he believes that the responsibilities of other nations to China should not be neglected. Hence the effort to get a conference.

It will be remembered that at the time of the Washington conference there was action taken which was believed would result in much good being accomplished for China. There were treaties relating to that country negotiated which some countries were quick to ratify. Others took a little more time but only this month has France acted upon them. It acts favorably now but it acts late. It has had the effect of delaying action by the countries in behalf of China, or at least it has provided the excuse for a delay. And during that time the conditions in China have been growing worse.

There is a situation there which cannot now be ignored but the problem has grown bigger by waiting. There has not been the needed improvement in the relations of China with foreign nations. Instead of those who joined together for the purpose of holding that country really doing something the field was left open for bolshevic influences to get in their work, and as might have been expected they were not slow in doing so. That creates a new situation to deal with, adds complications and plainly indicates that the time is ripe for action rather than further delays.

The aim of the treaties was to help China and the desire of President Coolidge now is to put that object into operation. Likewise he would have this country use its influences in getting an adjustment of the present difficulties which are causing so much havoc inside and creating no little alarm on the outside.

DANGER WARNINGS

The many killed at railroad crossings is causing increased study to be given to the matter of new devices for directing the attention of the highway users to the crossings ahead under the belief that such would cause them to give heed to their safety.

One inventor in Detroit comes out with a device which is set in operation by the automobile as it goes along the highway at a distance of 600 feet from the crossing. When the machine crosses the table, or bar, extending across the roadway flush with the surface, it causes a gong to ring, a sign erected 200 feet ahead reading "Railroad 400 feet" to be illuminated and the semaphore on the same pole to revolve in the day time or to show two flashing lights at night. Such a device is intended to attract attention. It does not serve as an automatic brake upon the machine but is intended to attract attention. It does not serve as an automatic brake upon the machine but is intended to so act upon the mind of the driver, or those with him, as to cause him to bring his car to a halt within the next 400 feet to the railroad crossing so that it can be determined whether there is a train approaching or not.

Warnings which do the very same thing are to be found today and yet there are those who disregard them entirely, who even drive through lowered gates and who are so determined to have their own way regardless of recognized danger that they knock down flagmen who are trying to keep them from being killed.

There cannot be too much done in the way of warnings but the real big problem is to get a certain proportion of the motorists to give the necessary attention to what is known to be actually perilous.

THE BARNARD DISCOVERY

New discoveries in the medical field are watched with particular interest, for the fight against disease concerns everyone. And yet experience has taught the wisdom of requiring proof before accepting too much from the claims that are made by enthusiastic discoverers.

Because of the difficulty in making satisfactory headway in the fight against cancer the reported discovery by John E. Barnard of London as announced by Dr. W. E. Gye is due to hold close attention in and out of medical circles until the correctness of it is established or the error disclosed.

The claims that come from abroad tend to upset theories that have existed and furnish a basis for further and more definite study. It is a matter which must be wrestled with by scientists, by specialists and those who have devoted much time and expense in an endeavor to provide more relief in the treatment of the disease.

In the announcement which comes from abroad it is made clear that much remains to be found out, but there is apparently a sincere belief that something has been stumbled upon which may change the entire course of the researchers and furnish the needed tip that will result in the establishment of a cure.

Cancer is one of the diseases which has baffled science. The fight against it has gone on relentlessly but without reducing the deaths from it. It has been a losing struggle but one in which there has been no disposition to abandon hope. Possibly the British microscopist has discovered something that will mean great relief to the world. It is to be sincerely hoped that he has.

HATS AND DAUGHTERS

Mrs. Morrissey had worn the hat for five years—if it could still be called a hat. Time had resolved it into a shapeless hodge-podge of faded black, soiled flowers and streaked ribbon and she hated it!

"I'll have a new hat!" she vowed each time she dropped a dime, a couple of pennies or a nickel into the cracked cream pitcher on the shelf behind the cooky jar.

Stirring deep down beneath the self-denying veneer of long-drawn-out motherhood was the sense that she could be more self-respecting if not more beautiful with new headgear. On her trips to the market she stepped a trifle more briskly and lingered before the windows of the corner hat shop. It was remarkable how hats had changed since she had bought the hideous one she was wearing.

There were always so many clamorous calls from the family that nothing ever seemed left over for her own uses. The girls were young and pretty and they needed things if they were to hold up their heads among other girls, though of late a little doubt had assailed her maternal thrill of pleasure in bestowing on them what they demanded.

Precious little sacrificing had the Morrissey girls done with a soft-hearted mother who was a too easy victim to expert wheedling.

And so Isabel, the snappy brunette of the family, was almost shocked at her mother's denseness in the matter of shoes. "Gee!" she said, bursting into the kitchen where pot roast was perfuming the air, "they've got in a swell line of shoes these days! The latest thing—alligator skin trimmed with suede! They're classy and I've just gotta have some! Elsie's got a pair!"

Mrs. Morrissey did not look at her admiringly as was her wont. "You had a new pair two weeks ago," she said eventually, basting the pot roast.

"B—but I need 'em!" Isabel had protested indignantly, holding out one foot with its silken ankle. "These old plain things! Gee, ma, don't you want me to be in style? Don't you care whether the boys think I am a back number?"

Mrs. Morrissey paused and regarded Isabel as though she were somebody else's child, and the view displeased her. "You get no shoes!" she stated briefly. "You don't need shoes any more than I need six new dresses!"

The idea made even the miffed Isabel giggle. "Six dresses!" she gurgled. "I should say not! Why, you never go anywhere! It's different with you. Please, mom, can't I have the shoes?"

Mrs. Morrissey felt strangely guilty when she dropped a quarter into the cream pitcher the next morning. Yet, mingled with the emotion was a defiance born of the rankling sting of Isabel's careless jeer.

"Look, ma, here's Elsie! I want you to see her shoes!" Isabel cried the next afternoon. Mrs. Morrissey looked briefly and went on about her work. Voices floated to her from the other room. "Why, shes just mean about it!" Isabel was wailing to her friend. "I'll die if I can't have shoes like yours!"

Mrs. Morrissey slammed the bread in the oven and bit her lip. She had made Isabel selfish like this, but she yearned over the child's unhappiness. They were young only once.

"When do you think you'll have the money?" Isabel persisted Saturday morning with some irritability. "Did—did you know you've got a lotta money in the pitcher back of the cookies? There's most enough for my shoes! Did you forget you had it?"

It was unfortunate for Isabel that as her mother turned sharply the old hat hung on a nail in the hall swept her vision. Sentimentality went down with a crash.

"No!" snapped Mrs. Morrissey with a glint in her eye. "I ain't forgot it! I been saving it to buy a new hat and a new hat I'm getting today! Maybe I'll buy a new dress next to go with the hat! And you're not going barefoot at that, remember! Look at it!"

Isabel stared at the old hat as though she were seeing it for the first time. She poked it with a shuddering finger. "Gee," "I'll say you need a new one!" she admitted with her old impish grin. "Aw, I can get along without the shoes, ma! Lemme go with you to pick it out, can I?"

"Sure," said Mrs. Morrissey with warm tears of sudden happiness in her eyes.—Chicago News.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A Reply to Mr. Ouimet.

Mr. Editor: Let us state and stand by the facts leaving aside the personality. It is not the spirit of a false ambition, but rather the love of truth has forced me to answer to those statements affirmed by the local preacher which are historically wrong.

Let us discuss with documents the education that the church of Rome has given to the world. Who caused Europe to fall in that deep intellectual and moral slumber which is one of the most darkest and tragic periods in the history known as the "Dark Ages?" Who established the Inquisition? Pope Gregory XIII even gave a medal with his image on to those who persecuted the liberals and all those who did not think the way he did. Did Christ ever do such things?

What is the method of the Roman church of imparting education? It is superstition, established dogmas, fear, excommunication and belief in witchcraft, ghost and evil spirit. All happenings are caused by the evil spirits. All Catholics live in a world of fear. I know this by experience. Who can deny the superstition that prevails in the Catholic countries?

Here is an example how fear is taught to the people. An Italian woman presenting herself for the church membership was asked how she came to leave the Catholic church and come to the Protestant church. She said: "I had already left the Catholic church long before I began coming here. When I sent my little girl here to the daily kindergarten the priest came and told me that they burned babies in this church and pointed to the smoke coming out of the chimney the morning the kindergarten opened. Then he said there were devils under the carpet. But when my little girl came home all safe and sound and said there was no carpet on the floor, I knew the priest lied." I could tell you many others of such stories, but this is enough to prove the case. They do and say everything they can to frighten and keep the people ignorant.

Education to be true education must enable the young man to do his own thinking and do things for himself. It is the desire of Christ that it should be so. When He was asked what is the first and great commandment He replied: "To love God with all our heart and soul and Mind." In another occasion He said: "And why even of yourselves do ye not judge what is right?" Man was created a free being with the power to think through and judge things by himself He has to make his own choice and fight his own battle of life. No man or any institution should interfere or do things for him.

The Roman church has an educational system of her own. She is the greatest autocratic institution that has ever existed. She is based on false pretense. She pretends to be the only source of knowledge and truth. The simple fact that she makes a man holy and claim him to be above all men and gives him all power and authority is enough to prove that she is against progress and education. The church of Rome requires blind obedience from her people. They are supposed to accept every thing which is taught to them without questioning the authority of the church. Their mind and conscience are dead, they are like dead bodies. They must have no will power of their own and must obey without hesitation. Mr. Ouimet reads this in this catechism, therefore, he cannot deny it.

Is not this one of the greatest criminal acts the Roman church has and is committing against the progress of the world? She is killing the mental growth of many children. How can she reconcile herself before the world's justice? What is there left in the child when his thinking faculty which is the noblest and best that there is in him, is taken away? It is that thinking power which constitutes a child to be a son of God. Therefore, such teachings are morally, religiously and psychologically wrong and against education in the true sense of the term.

Her hostility to education is also seen in her attitude toward the Bible. Why does she persecute all those who read and own the Bible? She burns them with out any scruple whatever. Two years ago the priests burned many Bibles in one of the squares in Rome. Such thing is repeated in all Catholic countries. Why such opposition, while the Bible has civilized and Christianized all those who have made it the standard of their life?

She does it because she knows very well that as soon as the people read it they will no longer stay in the church for they find that all her teachings have no basis in the Bible. I was an altar boy in the church of Rome and never saw or heard about the Bible until I came to this country. Instead of giving the Bible to the people she gives the catechism.

Our great Italian hero, Garibaldi, said: "The open Bible is the mightiest weapon against the pretensions and agressions of Rome." Mind you that Garibaldi was under the guardianship of the priest until he was 14 years of age.

In regard to the challenge of Mr. Hogan I wish to say that I will gladly accept it, but he must first of all prove to me with the Scripture that Peter was ever in Rome.

REV. V. PANIZZOLI.
Norwich, July 13, 1925.

An Aftermath

Mr. Editor:—Studying the letters of our earnest correspondents, John M. Hogan and Arthur Ouimet, I have found one thing certain:—these biased gentlemen know the historical facts are true as given authentically by Rev. V. Panizzoli and myself. They know that it is not within their poor power to right the wrongs committed by the papacy. Still they insist on weaving beautiful fables to smooth things up a bit.

John M. Hogan, even deeply regrets his action. Why? No one asked him to jump in the fire. To state a true fact, his knowledge of true historical facts is very poor. Especially in his treatment of Martin Luther. John M. Hogan, states that Luther left the Roman church not for the love of God and truth but, to satisfy his opportunity to gratify his sensual appetite. This is most certainly a wonderfully machinated strategy of Mr. Hogan. Would he but read Martin Luther's 95 theses and the address to the German nobility, concerning Christian liberty, he would soon find out his blunder.

John M. Hogan, slurs Martin Luther with his supposed sensual appetite. I am not sure of this incident but, let us suppose Martin Luther was guilty of such a wrong, he would still be within the teachings of the Bible. For instance, "St. Paul plainly says (Titus I.) 'and this minister should not be forced to live without a lawful wife, but should be allowed to have one, as St. Paul further writes, saying that, "a bishop then must be blameless, the husband of one wife, x x x x having his children in subjection with all gravity." (I. Tim III). Is not this plain enough for the average intellectual to understand? Does Mr. Hogan, defy the Bible without his fear of error? I wonder.

Mr. Hogan claims that fair minded Protestants abhor the name of Martin Luther. Cui bono? I am not in sympathy with one who slurs Luther this way. Martin Luther, the leader of the Protestant reformation and through his untiring and zealous endeavor, translated the New Testament as early as 1522, the Old Testament a little later. The papacy was up in arms on the appearance of the Bible, which has always been fatal to the delusions of Rome; but it was received with joy by the people, and Martin Luther saw it spread to the borders of the land. Its simplicity and dignity have no rivals, and, by reason of it, Martin Luther's name is in Germany what Washington's is in the United States.

These efforts to circulate the Word of God in the vernacular language of the people were jealously discountenanced by the Roman church. Thus came about the Donay Bible. As a rule it is scrupulously faithful and exact but, disfigured by a profusion of unfamiliar and Latinized words, which have no meaning whatever to the ordinary reader. No wonder the Roman missionaries say, "Don't read the Bible, you are not educated enough to understand it, we will read it for you and tell you how to live." I have heard this statement made on several occasions.

The following historical facts that cannot be denied go to show further where Rome stands in regard to progress and freedom of thought in religion as well as in every political, social and educational idea:

July 6, 1415, John Huss burnt at stake and his ashes were scraped together and thrown into the Rhine.

Oct. 6, 1536, William Tyndale was strangled at the stake and burned to death.

Feb. 4, 1555, Rev. John Rogus burned alive at Smithfield.

Feb. 8, 1555, Rev. Laurence approaching the fire and embracing the stake said, "Welcome the cross of Christ, welcome everlasting life."

Oct. 16, 1555, Bishops Latimer and Ridley burned at stake. At the sight of the flames Bishop Latimer exclaimed, "Be of good cheer, Master Ridley, and play the man: we shall this day light such a candle, by God's grace, in England, as I trust shall never be put out." Such was their glorious and triumphant end.

Did not Bishop Fleming of London, order the bones of John Wycliff, who peacefully died 41 years previous, to be dug up and reduced to ashes and scattered in the Avon?

What did Thomas Cranner do to be dragged to and burned at the stake at the age of 67?

Is this the method used by the Roman church that kept burning the lamp of learning sacred and profane for 20 centuries?

Was the burning of the Bibles by the order of the bishop of London in 1538, the sequel to, "Go ye therefore and teach and preach all nations, etc., etc." (Mat. 28-19)?

I have often wondered, why is it that the Roman church teaching the Ten Commandments should be guilty in condemning, strangling and burning to death, innocent human beings! If these historical facts are not true, why does the church tolerate them? I would like to be more informed along these lines, and would earnestly welcome our correspondents to make some explanatory remarks.

I hear some men of headlong, and audacious spirit, who dare to pronounce me a heretic as though the matter had been thoroughly looked into and studied. I am neither so prone as to maintain that my own opinions should be preferred to those of other correspondents, nor so senseless as to be willing that historical truths should be made to give preference to fables, devised by biased contemporaries.

I, of set will, speak words the wise may learn, to others, nought remember nor discern.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Probably the only man in the world who sits in two parliaments is Sir Gerald Strickland, who is a member of the British House of Commons and also a member of the Maltese parliament and leader of the Opposition. Sir Gerald is a Maltese count, as well as an English gentleman. He comes from one of the oldest of English Roman Catholic families, and he very early joined that branch of the British diplomatic service which concerns itself with Greater Britain. His first apprenticeship as a public servant took place in Malta, where he was Chief Secretary; and as chairman of the Malta Cholera Committee he did yeoman serivce during the scourge of some years ago for both Maltese and British. In more recent years Sir Gerald has filled a number of important posts in the colonial service, including the governship of the Leeward Islands and the governorship of Tasmania.

He Couldn't Sleep.

He had been out for the evening where the crowd was telling ghost stories. It was quite evident that some believed what they were telling. At any rate they impressed Edgar seriously. That night he went bravely to bed but he couldn't get them out of his mind. After tossing for a time sleep overtook him. His rest was rudely broken early in the morning by a creaking, and as he sat up in bed the door of the closet opened. He had the lights on in a hurry and spent the rest of the night trying to sleep under the bright rays of the electric light in his room.

Mother's Rest Period.

This housekeper is the mother of four children. The father now dead was a Spanish war veteran. All the children are musical—the two oldest boys play cornets, the third boy a trombone and the youngest a girl is learning to play the piano. It being vacation time the four were practicing together and the mother said: "Goodness me! An orchestra in my own family! But what shall I play?"

The oldest boy spoke up with—"When we come to the 'rest period' mother, you can play that."

STATE HOSPITAL PATIENTS GIVEN ANNUAL LAWN PARTY

Five hundred and fifteen women patients at Norwich State Hospital were guests of Mrs. Wilcox, wife of the superintendent, Dr. Franklin S. Wilcox, at the annual lawn party, Tuesday afternoon. The party was held on the grounds at the superintendent's home, where the decorations centered about a May pole with gay streamers.

Swahn's orchestra played during the afternoon. The guests were entertained with a program of music and dancing by the staff of physicians and their families.

The May pole dancing was by twenty-four girl patients, in costume, who were under direction of Miss Barber, of the therapy department. This proved a very pleasing feature, greatly enjoyed.

Lolly pops, ice cream cones and lemonade were provided for the guests. Fancy dancing by the children was one of the charming features of the entertainment.

SALEM TURNPIKE IS TRANSFORMED HIGHWAY

The construction work on the Salem turnpike between this city and Gardner Lake has now been completed except for finishing the shoulders of the road and the highway is now open to traffic, with the usual precautionary signs posted to give warning of the uncompleted work.

The work of the state highway department in improving this stretch of about eight miles has effected a transformation in what was once known as one of the worst pieces of highway in this section. In places where curves have been straightened, hollows filled or hills leveled the road is hardly recognizable to those familiar with former conditions.

BEGINNING WORK ON MAIN STREET IMPROVEMENT

Street Commissioner John C. Donovan had work started Tuesday morning on the job of putting in the new cement highway on Main street from Market street to Washington square. The first step in the work is to tear up the block pavement on the southerly side of the street and between the trolley tracks westerly from the Market street corner.

At the present stage of the work, traffic going west on Main street in the business is detoured down through Market street, but at night the north easterly side of Main street beyond Market corner is used under the direction of an officer who is posted at the corner.

YOUNG MAN KILLED AT OCCUM, FALLING IN FRONT OF TROLLEY

Falling in front of a trolley car at Occum about 7:30, standard time, on Tuesday evening, Romeo Varieur, 17, of New Bedford was instantly killed, suffering a fractured skull, with his left arm almost cut off near the shoulder.

The young man had been to the home of Kurt Seifert to get one of the Seifert boys to go to the movies at Baltic with him. Coming out of the house he ran for the signal pole alongside the trolley track to catch the approaching north bound Willimantic trolley car. As he reached the tracks in front of Treckman's residence, he stumbled and fell across the rails and before he could pick himself up he was hit by the car. Motorman Arthur Prodell slammed on the brakes as he saw the man fall, but the car slid on for 65 feet, dragging the body of Varieur which remained wedged under the front trucks. Except for his left hand which extended outside the rails, the body was completely under the car.

Dr. J. W. Callahan was summoned from this city and Dr. George Thompson from Taftville by the car crew. Motorman Prodell and Conductor Carter, and the wrecker was ordered from the Greeneville car barn with jacks to raise the car so that the body could be taken out.

Dr. C. C. Gildersleeve, medical examiner, was also summoned and he gave permission to Undertaker Grant to take the body in charge after the trolley car had been jacked up.

Young Varieur, whose mother lives in New Bedford, had been living with his brother, Ernest, on Lillibridge road, Occum, and had been employed as a weaver in the Totokett mills. He has another brother, Hormisdas, also living in Occum.

It was learned by the medical examiner that the young man had apparently had a presentiment of impending misfortune, having told his sister-in-law Tuesday that he felt something was going to happen to him that day. The place where the accident happened is a downhill stretch of track, but according to the information secured by the medical examiner the trolley car was not traveling any unusual speed for this point. His measurements showed that it was stopped in 65 feet.

Constable Richard Fillisar of Occum kept the motor vehicle traffic straightened out while the wrecking crew was at work getting the young man's body from under the trolley car.

COAST GUARD COOK DROWNED AT NOANK

Leon Dupuis, 19, of Lawrence, Mass., ship's cook, second class, on the Coast Guard patrol boat 237 was drowned at Light House point, Noank, Monday afternoon. The sailor was attempting to board a raft from a rowboat, when he missed his footing and fell into the water. Unable to swim very well, he reached for the rowboat but only succeeded in pushing it away from him, and before two companions, who were on the shore, and other spectators could reach him, he sank. One of the young man's companions dived three times before he was able to locate the body and bring it to the surface.

Dr. J. H. Bumstead of the staff of the Johns Hopkins hospital in Baltimore, who is summering at the Point, and the Rev. Charles A. Merrill, pastor of the Noank Baptist church, took charge of the body as it was brought ashore and for a long time Dr. Bumstead exercised every means known to medical science to resuscitate the man, but to no avail.

A telephone call to the Section Base headquarters at the state pier at New London resulted in the despatch of Dr. E. D. Middleton, medical officer of the Coast Guard destroyer forces, to Noank, and he assisted Dr. Bumstead in the efforts of resuscitation. From the start it was thought that young Dupuis was dead when taken from the water, but in the hope that a spark of life still remained the physicians worked over him for more than two hours.

Medical Examiner Frank W. Hewes was summoned, and after viewing the body gave permission for its removal to the undertaking rooms in New London. Dupuis is survived by his parents and several brothers and sisters in Lawrence, Mass., who were not died of his death by the Coast Guard authorities Monday evening. They came to New London Tuesday and took charge of the body, which was shipped to Lawrence in the afternoon. Funeral services will be held in Lawrence. A detachment of men from the Coast Guard Section Base escorted the body to Lawrence.

A board of investigation was impaneled at the state pier Tuesday morning and went to Noank in the afternoon to investigate the drowning.

MISSING MAN MIGHT HAVE COME TO NORWICH

Herbert J. Potter, 31 years old, of No. 1681 Boulevard, West Hartford, a broker employed in Hartford, has been missing from his home for more than two weeks and Chief Joseph F. Grogan of the West Hartford police has been conducting a search for the missing man.

Mr. Potter has been employed by the Connecticut Brokerage company by his brother-in-law, Harold R. Willetts, but on June 23, the day of his disappearance, he changed his position and accepted a place with F. J. Williamson of No. 721 Main street, Hartford. He made one call on a prospect in Hartford, and then left town supposedly for New London and Norwich to make calls in those cities, but so far as can be learned, he never reached there. Inquiry has been made in New York where he has a brother and other relatives, but none has seen him.

He is described as of medium build, has dark brown hair, gray eyes, and when he left home he wore a gray suit and black shoes. He is married and has one child. Mrs. Potter can attribute no cause for his leaving as he was in the best of spirits, had enjoyed good health and had never indicated an inclination to leave. In the World war he served in the Seventy-seventh division, 302nd Ambulance train, and was shot through the stomach while overseas.

UNDER AGE DRIVER GETS INTO COLLISION

An automobile collision at the corner of North Main and Second streets Tuesday night about 10 o'clock revealed that Leon Gadbois, 17, operator of a motor truck, was driving without a license and has never had one as he is below the legal age to secure an operator's license. He was locked up at police headquarters over night, and the police were unable to find George Boucher, a contractor, of 108 North Main street, by whom Gadbois is employed and whose truck he was driving. Gadbois claimed that Boucher allowed him to drive but didn't know that he (Gadbois) had the truck Tuesday night.

The crash that disclosed these conditions happened when Apolinary Komorowski of 380 North Main street, driving north, was making the turn into Second street. The truck driven by Gadbois, coming south, hit the other machine as it was turning. Komorowski's car, a Dodge touring, had the right forward wheel broken, front axle bent, lights broken, mudguard mushed and frame bent. The truck would not be operated after the accident.

Sergeant Delaney and Officer Quinn placed Gadbois under arrest and the other driver with a man who was with him, was summoned to court as witness.

NORWICH FRIENDS SORROW FOR DEATH OF CHAS. E. SEARLS

State Attorney Charles E. Searls, who died at 3.30 (S. T.) Tuesday afternoon at his home in Thompson, was a close friend of the late Judge Gardiner Greene, of Norwich. Mr. Searls was on his way to attend the funeral of Judge Greene in January last when he became ill and was forced to return to his home.

He and Mrs. Searls have kept up their friendly relations with Mrs. Greene and her sister, Mrs. William H. Palmer; during each winter Mr. and Mrs. Searls and Mrs. Palmer and son were guests at the inn in Pomfret Center. His Norwich friends were deeply grieved to learn Tuesday of the ending of his brilliant career.

Mr. Searls served in a senate which had among its members, who are now gone, Isaac W. Brooks, Andrew G. Barnes, D. S. Brinsmead, Moses W. Manwaring, John F. Shanley, Frank L. Stiles and Luzerne Luddington. Among those who survive are Dennis A. Blakeslee, Congressman E. Hart Fenn, former president F. S. Luther, of Trinity college, J. W. Alson, H. A. Middleton, J. H. FOREIGN WAR VETERANS OPEN CARNIVAL ATTRACTION

Under the auspices of Richard Hourigan Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Metro Bros. Exposition Shows opened Tuesday night on Falls avenue and throughout the evening the various booths were well patronized and the rides proved great entertainment for the pleasure seekers.

The show carries two rides, the ferris wheels and the chair planes and both of these carried a full list of passengers on the opening night. The motor drome with Fred Morrell, a local boy, as rider was another big attraction. Morrell, known as Cannon Ball Mack, thrilling his audience with his daredevil riding within the almost perpendicular walls of the silo-drome.

Assisted by city officials the land in back of the industrial building has been cleared and a matting of sawdust and wood chips spread over the ground. Lights are being strung from the rear of Falls avenue down to the main street and by this (Wednesday) evening the circuit will have been completed, giving a brilliantly lighted entrance to the midway attractions.

Various booths, sideshows exhibiting freaks and curiosities make up the remainder of the show and under the direction of the local post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars the show is one of the cleanest that has visited Norwich in a number of years.

People visiting the grounds Tuesday evening remarked about the ideal location for shows of this kind and stated that with more cleaning up the location could be made ideal for circuses and other forms of public amusement as well as a recreation field, as Falls avenue is the best location in the city for such attractions.

SCHOOLS WILL RESUME DAY AFTER LABOR DAY

The appointment of Miss Lucy G. Buchanan, as teacher of the public schools of the city, was the principal item of business conducted at the monthly meeting of the town school board, which was held Tuesday evening in the court house. The chairman, Walter F. Lester, presided at the meeting. Other business included the reports of committees and bills were ordered paid. Announcement was made that the schools in the city would resume sessions, September 8, 1925, which is the day after Labor Day.

People might be more lawless if there were less law.

VALUABLE BULL SLASHED AND HAS TO BE KILLED

After a lull of several months, farmers in the region of East Great Plain were aroused to anger Monday afternoon when a valuable bull, owned by Roy S. Beebe of Dudley street, E. G. P., was attacked and brutally cut by the creature who has been busy around this city for sometime.

The bull, a three year old Ayrshire, valued at about $60, was injured severely and it was necessary to put the animal out of its misery soon after the injured animal was found.

Evidently the man who slashed the bull was familiar with the lay of the ground at the Beebe residence and waited until everything was safe for him to go about his dastardly work. Two dogs at the farm, one a female which never lets a stranger into the yard, were at the farm all day, but the slasher waited until the cattle were over the brow of the hill, in the pasture back of the house, before he got in his cruel work.

The act was evidently committed late in the afternoon for, when the cattle were brought from pasture the injured bull was found bleeding profusely and steps were immediately taken to put him out of his misery.

The police were notified of the act and officers accompanied by County Detective William Lewis went to the Beebe farm and made a thorough search of the pasture and woodland surrounding it in hopes of gaining some clue that would lead to the arrest of the slasher.

At first it was believed that the bull had become injured through contact with a barbed wire fence but farmers familiar with this type of injury claimed that the wound was a clean one and made by a knife or some other sharp instrument.

People at East Great Plain feel that the man guilty of the dastardly acts which have been committed on horses and cattle in and around Norwich for many months past, visits the scene of his work previous to attacking the animals and thus gets the lay of the land and acquaints himself with the habits of the family. He then returns either in the daytime or at night and thus far has escaped detection.

People owning cattle are aroused by the resumption of this cruel work and strangers will be watched hereafter in hopes that some description may be secured if the dastardly work happens after the appearance of any strangers around the farms.

This is the second attack made in the Dudley street section of East Great Plain within a year, the other being at Starr Farm where valuable animals were attacked. This most recent attack was evidently made from the direction of the woods back of the house, for to have passed up the road would have been to invite an attack by the watch dog. The attack in daytime showed careful planning for a night attack would have been most risky as the dogs are on guard throughout the dark hours and strangers wandering about the premises would have laid themselves open to being bitten by the watch dogs.

LIQUOR LAW VIOLATORS FINED IN STONINGTON

Three liquor law violators were presented before Judge William A. Wilcox in Stonington town court Tuesday morning. All defendants were found guilty and paid stiff fines.

Hannah Grissar, daughter of the proprietor of 101 Ranch, which has a long record as a place where liquor is sold was charged with the sale of one quart of beer to Philip Clair on July 13. She entered a demurrer, which was over-ruled. She was found guilty and fined $200 and costs, the costs amounting to $37.93 and sentenced to 10 days in the New London jail, the jail sentence being suspended for six months, in a raid, staged by State Policemen Fred Caron and Robert Parker upon the place, nine full cases of beer, each containing 24 bottles, were found. The beer tested more than 2 per cent. alcohol.

Angeline Christino of Liberty street, Pawcatuck, was charged with selling a bottle of whiskey on July 11 to Philip Clair. The whiskey tested 70 per cent. alcohol. A demurrer was entered which was over-ruled and the defendant was fined $100 and costs of $32.93 and sentenced to 30 days in the county jail, the jail sentence being suspended.

Joseph Savona of Cherry street, Pawcatuck, was charged with selling a bottle of whiskey, which tested 70 per cent. alcohol on July 11. He also entered a demurrer which was overruled and he was fined $100 and costs of $32.93, with a jail sentence of 30 days, suspended for six months.

All paid their fines and were released.

TELEPHONE BULLETIN'S TRIBUTE TO JOHN E. VAUGHN

The current issue of the Telephone Bulletin contains an appreciative tribute to John E. Vaughn of this city, whose death occurred last month.

The Bulletin says:

By the death recently of John E. Vaughn, commercial agent at Norwich, our company loses an earnest, conscientious employe and one who had established himself as a leader among his associates.

Mr. Vaughn had been with our company less than five years, but in that short period his steady application to business, his initiative and sound judgment won him a desirable and deserved advancement. He was engaged November 22, 1920, as a collector at Norwich. On January 2, 1922, he was appointed commercial agent in that city.

Widely known in Norwich and well regarded by all with whom he came in contact, Mr. Vaughn was always the thoughtful, courteous, fair dealing representative of our company, such a man in business and socially as reflects credit upon his business and associates.

A tireless worker in behalf of our employes' association, our commercial force in Norwich registered their appreciation of his efforts by electing him to office in the association, locally, district-wise and finally to membership in the general conference board. He held the position of chairman secretary of the commercial section of the general conference board and was thorough in his administration of the duties of that office.

On questions relating to association work and welfare his opinion was constantly sought and his judgment generally accepted. Also he was an energetic leader in the association's social affairs in his district. No matter what was planned for business or social gathering, John Vaughn was among those to aid in making the plans and then showed his active and genuine interest in our association by helping carrying out the plans made.

Mr. Vaughn was a central and outstanding figure in our business in New London district and he will be greatly missed.

CENTRALS BEAT NUGGETS IN HARD HITTING GAME AND TAKE FIRST PLACE

In a close and hard-fought contest the Centrals nosed out the Nuggets Tuesday evening by the score of 9 to 8. The victory gave the Centrals undisputed possession of first place, while the losing Nuggets dropped to the cellar position.

The game was played under protest by the Centrals on the grounds that the Nuggets were playing men who were not on their official roster. As the Centrals won, however, the protest in all probability will be withdrawn.

As in Monday night's contest, last night's game was one in which hitting was the main factor. Each team used three twirlers in an attempt to grab off a victory, and all but Gauthier, the Centrals last choice as moundsman were hit freely.

Johnny Greene started in the box for Madden's team, and lasted three innings. During his stay on the mound, Greene was hit safely six times and after two consecutive singles in the fourth retired in favor of Leo Jarvis. Jarvis completed this frame, and his brother, Lloyd, took the mound in the next stanza, pitching the last two frames.

Gaudette was the Central's first choice for pitching honors, but was hit hard during the two innings he twirled and was relieved by Gero in the third. Gero after pitching to four batters, all of which got on base, also vacated the mound in favor of Gauthier who finished the game.

Gauthier was the only pitcher of the entire six that was able to check the opposing hitters, and was the one who gets credit for winning the game. He twirled the last four frames, and allowed but one hit during that time. He used a slow-breaking curve to good advantage and the Nugget hitters were continually raising pop-flys or hitting easy grounders to the infield.

The Centrals started off with a rush, scoring three runs in the initial frame. Lefty Dugas shot a two bagger to left as an opener, and scored on Cardie's two base hit to the same sector. Cardie took third on a passed ball, and after Murphy had flied out to center, scored when Streeter mussed up Yerrington's fly to left. Yerrington took second on the play at the plate, and scored when Fox let Eccleston's grounder go through him.

The Nuggets came back and tied the score in their half of the first on doubles by Lloyd Jarvis and Body, and a single by Streeter. In the third the Nuggets went into the lead, when they tallied three times. Streeter doubled as a starter and this hit drove Gaudette from the mound, Gero taking his place on the hill. The change in pitchers proved to be a matter of bad to worse. Gero walked Leo Jarvis, and hits by Body and Lemieux scored three runs. At this juncture, Gauthier took up the pitching burden and retired the Nuggets without further damage.

In the fourth, the Centrals came up to within one run of a tie score when they scored two runs on successive hits by Eccleston, A. Dugas and Gaudette.

In the next inning, the Centrals went out and won the game, counting four times when the entire Nugget team went to pieces temporarily.

Lloyd Jarvis pitched for the Nuggets in this stanza, and his team was in the lead when he took the mound, he was the losing pitcher. Although he committed a costly balk that let in one run, the other three runs were due wholly to errors by his supporting cast, and as these three runs were the margin of victory, it can be readily seen that it was largely due to poor support rather than poor twirling that lost Jarvis the game. Tonight's Game

Last night the fans witnessed one of the most uncertain games of the season when the Centrals nosed out ahead of the Nuggets after six pitchers had been driven from the box. The boys sure had on their hitting togs and nearly every inning piled up hit after hit. First the Centrals would lead and then the Nuggets would take their turn and right up until the umpire called the game in favor of darkness it was a toss up as to who would win. It was another hard breaking game for the Nuggets as they played well in the field and also at the bat and as usual sent the fans away feeling well satisfied with their playing. By winning last night the Centrals nosed into first place with a half game lead over the Hallville team which has played one game less than the Centrals, and there is no use talking the Centrals well deserve to be on top as they are a scrappy bunch of boys which they proved last night when they were trailing Madden's team by four runs, and two of their pitchers had been driven from the box and then came back and scored enough runs to win the game.

Tonight the fans will have a chance to see two of the most evenly matched teams in the league in action when Yantic and the Eastern Conn. Power Co., team come together. Both of these teams have plenty of real stars in their lineup and tonight's game should be close and well played. The E. C. P. will lineup as follows: Cormier catch, Harris or Simcox pitch, Chick Stanley on first, Davis at second, Whitney at third and Bill Ringland on short. In the outfield the fans will have a change to see two of their old favorites in action, first Eddie McKay, the pride of the old E. of C. team who is always good for a hit and is also a sure fielder will be seen in left and Jack Clabby who for the last few years has been playing in the York-Penn. league and is now home for a while will play center, while one of the Hall boys will play in right. The lineup is sure a powerful one and Mgr. Lane of Yantic realizes it as he will have all of his stars in line tonight. Either Tillie Daniels, Steve Posick or Lamphere will pitch, Lockwood will catch, Artie Couillard will play first, Eddie Burns second, Foote at short and McKiernan on third. In the outfield Lamphere, Marchand and Ainsworth will perform. The first seven men play on the Socony team of New London and Mgr. Lane has been using only three or four of them in each game but he knows that he is up against a tough proposition tonight and will use them all.

BERLENBACH'S HAND BROKEN IN BOUT WITH MARULLO

NEWARK, N. J., July 14—(A. P.)—Exoneration on a complaint of stalling in his first fight as world's light-heavyweight champion became possible to Paul Berlenbach of Astoria, N. Y., today, after examination of his right hand disclosed a fractured bone suffered last night while defending his title against Young Marullo of New Orleans.

Platt Adams, chief inspector of the New Jersey Boxing Commission, under whose direction the examination was made, announced that he would immediately report the physician's findings to the board with a view to having both boxers paid for the match. The National Sportsmen's Club, which promoted the bout, had been instructed by Adams to withhold their money after Referee Henry Lewis had sent the boxers to their corners in the ninth round for failure to put forth their best efforts.

Under the terms of the contract, the champion will receive $6,000 and Marullo $2,250.

Berlenbach, holder of the title for only six weeks, and Marullo, both issued statements today declaring that they had fought as well as they knew how. Berlenbach said that the injury to his hand was suffered in the fourth round, but that, owing to the fact his title was at stake, he had determined to try to go the limit of twelve rounds. Had he withdrawn from the fight, he pointed out, he would have forfeited the championship to Marullo.

Inspector Adams said that no blame attached to the club for what Referee Lewis had adjudged an unsatisfactory bout, and that under the circumstances, he felt that neither the promoters nor the boxers should be suspended.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 14—(A. P.)—Pancho Villa, flyweight champion of the world, died at a hospital here today while undergoing an operation for an infection of the throat that developed from an infected tooth.

Dr. C. E. Hoffman said the boxer suffocated under the anaesthetic. Dr. Hoffman was preparing to operate when Villa's heart stopped. Artificial respiration failed to revive the patient.

Villa, whose real name was Francisco Guilledo, went to the hospital last night to have a glandular affection of the throat attended to. The throat swelling was a complication of a jaw infection caused by ulcerated teeth, the affection having first become apparent a few days before he met Jimmy McLarnin here on July fourth.

He was enabled to go into the ring against McLarnin only after a dental surgeon removed one of his wisdom teeth. Against the advice of his physician and with a swollen jaw that was plainly discernable to the ringsiders, Villa entered the ring, while showing little of his old spirit he weathered the rounds but lost the decision.

Villa's condition grew worse after the fight and he was compelled last night to go to the hospital. His condition became such during the night that it was found necessary to operate today. Dr. C. E. Hoffman, the attending surgeon, said that Villa's throat was so swollen that it was with great difficulty that the anaesthic could be administered.

The body will be sent to Manila for burial.

BLANKENSHIP BLANKS YANKS IN PITCHING BATTLE

CHICAGO, July 14—Chicago made it three out of four from New York today when Blankenship shut out the Yankees 3 to 0 in a pitching duel with Shocker. Kamm's single and Schalk's double gave the locals a run in the seventh, while singles by Sheely and Falk and a triple by Hooper netted two more in the eighth. None of the visitors reached third base. Johnny Mostil who had hit safely in sixteen consecutive games failed to get a hit today.

Babe Ruth, home run king of the New York Yankees was compelled to leave the game today in the first inning after he had attempted to catch a fly ball off the bat of Ike Davis of the White Sox. Ruth fell just before he reached the sphere, and it went for a double. When he returned to the bench, it was revealed that he had strained his side slightly and was replaced by Bobby Veach. Ruth had one time at bat and struck out. It was announced that he was not seriously hurt and probably would be back in the lineup tomorrow. The score:

In a game marked by continual crabbing by the Yantic Mills players the team representing the Fitchville mill won 9 to 7 in the seventh inning at Fitchville Tuesday evening. The Steinman brothers were the battery for Fitchville and Wheeler and Malunis for Yantic.

CUMMINGS SETS WORLD'S RECORD IN QUALIFYING ROUND

LOCHMOOR CLUB, Detroit, Mich., July 14.—(AP)—Setting a world's record for qualifying scores, Dexter Cummings of Owentsia club, Chicago, twice intercollegiate champion while at Yale, today won medal honors in the Western amateur golf championship at Lochmoor by scoring 68-70—138, six under par for a double round of the 6,729 yard links. The exhibition was even at a much faster pace than the record of 286 set by Chick Evans in winning the national open title at Minneapolis of 1916.

Second place today was shared at 148, seven strokes behind the leader, by another Owentsia player, Ruddy Knapper, several times Iowa titleholder and one intercollegiate champion from Princeton, and R. H. Stranahan of Toledo, who scored 73 and 72 today.

Among the six players who shared the next score of 148, was Ted Sawyer of Chicago, titleist in 1906, who tied Cummings' 70 today, and Chick Evans, former national open and amateur champion, who took 40 for the first nine but cut two off par on the inner half for his second 74. In the 148 brace also were Art Sweet of Chicago who tied for second low score today at 71 with Russell Martin of Chicago, Fred Lamprecht of Cleveland, intercollegiate titleholder, who tallied his second 74, G. L. Conley of Detroit, who shot exact par today, and Henry Comstock of Buffalo, who added a 76 to his par 72 of yesterday.

There were 13 scores under 150, which makes another record for qualifying rounds. The only even 150 was recorded by Kenneth Hisert of Olympia Fields club, Chicago, the big ten collegiate champion scoring 74 and 76 while playing with Cummings.

NEW LONDON YOUNG MAN FOUND DEAD-FRACTURED SKULL BY PLUNGE FROM BED

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 14—Myles Thomas Donohue, 25, son of Mrs. Sarah Ann and the late James A. Donohue, was found dead this morning at his home, 112 Howard street, death resulting from a fractured skull sustained in a strange manner during the early hours of the morning, this being determined as a result of an autopsy performed late this afternoon by Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman. Donohue, who had been subject to epileptic attacks for some time, returned to bed. That was the last seen of him alive for when his mother went to his room about 8 o'clock this forenoon, she was horrified to find the body partially on the floor and partially in bed, and with life extinct. Clots of blood at the nostrils and ears indicated brain hemorrhages from a fractured skull. It is believed that Donohue suffered an attack of epilepsy and became violent, plunging head-long to the floor and sustaining the injury which resulted in his death.

Samuel A. Siller, a man over 40, was in the police court this morning, charged with failing to support his wife and child, the latter 14 years of age. Siller lived at Bridgeport with his wife, when he married June 12, 1910. He was a peddler there and he has been engaged in the same business here, being an employe of his brother, a storekeeper. Sam and Bessie, his wife, lived together some fifteen months, during which time the wife became in a delicate condition. One day Sam disappeared. His wife had no trace of him after that until a few days ago when she learned from relatives that he was in New London. Mrs. Siller gave birth to a child a month or so after her husband deserted her and since then she has had to support herself and the child. At the time that Siller disappeared there was a deposit in a savings bank at Bridgeport that amounted to some $300. It was in the joint names of the husband and wife. Bessie got to the bank first and she withdrew the deposit and kept it as her personal property. She was entitled to it the same as Siller would have been, but he demanded the money at the bank. When the couple appeared in court this morning it developed that they were irreconcilable to married life and both asserted that they would not live together. A divorce was suggested as the proper course for them to take, but they are Hebrews and that religious faith does not countenance the separation unless the parties to it shall have first been divorced by the rules of their church. So they left the court with the agreement that they should seek a rabbi and by him be separated. Then Mrs. Siller is to bring suit for divorce in Fairfield county, at Bridgeport, where the couple had a residence at the time of the separation. Mrs. Siller was accompanied by her brother, a hardware dealer in the Park city. He stayed with her and seemed to be satisfied when the court ordered Siller to provide $8 a week for the support of his wife and her child. The first payment, during which interval Siller shall bring the proceedings for a divorce, Siller gave a bond of $500, with Ikey Meltzer as surety that he would comply with the order of the court.

Garrison was arrested charged with reckless driving and furnished a bond of $100 for his appearance in the Groton town court next Monday. The child was crossing the highway near her home as the automobile was approaching and in order to attempt to avoid striking the girl, Garrison guided his car abruptly to one side, but he was not successful in missing the child. She was knocked under the front of the car. The automobile also struck a motionless commercial car, owned by the European bakery, this city, and smashed the radiator of the other car. MANY DOGS IN GERMANY WORK FOR THEIR LIVING

Germany is the country of many dogs—big dogs, little dogs, long-legged police dogs and legless dachshunds. On the average one German in every 15 possesses a dog. In Berlin the proportion is 1 in 17 and in Cologne 1 in 19.

For licenses for these dogs large sums are paid. Of Germany's 4,000,000 canines, 3,333,334 live in the country and presumably earn their bread, while 626,000 belong to the city dwellers and figure in dog shows and dog pounds. Five thousand belong to the Army and the police and work hard for a living.

WESTERLY

The U. S. dirigible Shenandoah of the Navy followed the course of all true ships in passing Westerly on Tuesday afternoon, for it laid its way over the water and continued it, even veering to the southward to round Watch Hill point. Then it pointed its prow more to the northward to follow the southern Rhode Island shore on its trip from Lakehurst, N. J. to Newport, R. I., where it is to maneuver before starting on its return trip again, early next Thursday.

From the top of Hinckley Hill, in Pawcatuck, the highest elevation in Westerly, the giant aircraft was first seen at about 12:50 when it was a speck in the sky over beyond Fishers Island, in the range of Long Island. At 13:50 it passed Watch Hill point and the sunlight and shadow of cloud on its aluminum colored sides made it like some larg fish that had arisen from the ocean and slowly swam the skies over Watch Hill. The airship was in sight from Hinckley Hill for over an hour, finally being swallowed up in the haze which clouded the horizon in the direction of Point Judith. Some declared that if the weather had been clearer, at the elevation maintained when the ship passed the hill, it could have been seen to close downward when Newport was reached.

Mr. and Mrs. Carol Payne have returned to their home in Sharon, Mass., after being the guests of friends in Westerly.

Charles Miller, son of City Clerk Everett Miller of Providence, the guest of Stephen Potter, of Hope Valley, visited Westerly and the Watch Hill Coast Guard station Tuesday.

PAWCATUCK LIQUOR SALES RESULT IN HEAVY FINES

(Special to the Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, July 14.—A number of Pawcatuck cases were heard before Judge William A. Wilcox in a session of Stonington town court in borough hall, Tuesday morning. The cases grew out of several raids on booze joints in the town of Stonington Monday afternoon, the raids being conducted by State Policemen Fred T. Carron and Robert J. Parker. In each of the places visited they succeeded in finding a quantity of wet goods.

At the 101 Ranch, located in the Road district, one of their assistants purchased a quart bottle of beer, drank and paid for the same. Hannah Grisear, who delivered the goods, was taken into custody by the police, and ordered to appear before the court.

Judge Wilcox presided, and the state was represented by Attorney George R. McKenna.

Miss Grisar was charged with selling spiritous and intoxicating liquor on the 13th day of July. A demurrer was entered. She was not represented by counsel and said she wished non. Mr. McKenna, in behalf of the state, said that the test of the beer showed alcohol to be in excess of 3 per cent., when the law only allows one-half of one per cent. He also stated that the 101 Ranch, so-called, was a source of complaint by many people, not only residents of Stonington, but New London and other nearby places. He said that in view of the fact that the place had a reputation for selling and that others in the family had been convicted on former occasions, he would ask that the maximum sentence in amount of money be imposed. He did not feel as if he wanted to recommend a jail sentence for the girl as it was her first offense.

Judge Wilcox found the accused guilty and ordered that she pay a fine of $200 and costs of $39.93, and be confined in jail at New London for a period of 10 days. The jail sentence was suspended for a period of six months.

Judge Wilcox, in addressing the accused, stated that if any of the members of the family were brought before the court for a similar offense they might expect the maximum of the law.

The state police in thier raid found nine cases of beer, each containing two dozen bottles.

The second case was that of Mrs. Angelina Crispino of Liberty street. She was accused of an actual sale of whisky on July 11. She said that she did not want an attorney and on advice of Attorney McKenna a demurrer was entered. This was overruled.

Mr. McKenna, in his statement to the court, said that he felt that if a fine of $200 was imposed it would be sufficient to make the defendant realize that she must go out of business.

Judge Wilcox found the accused guilty, and fined her $100 and costs taxed at $32.93, and ordered that she be confined in jail at New London for 30 days, which sentence was suspended, for the period of six months. Judge Wilcox also stated that if any further trouble resulted from this place that the maximum penalty would be imposed. The liquor obtained showed 70 per cent of alcohol.

Joseph Savona of Cherry street was presented on a complaint charging an actual sale of spiritous and intixicating liquors on July 12th. He entered a demurrer and did not wish an attorney. He promised to go out of business.

Mr. McKenna stated to the court that Savona's wife was ill in the hospital at Norwich and there were four small children at home, and he did not feel like asking a jail sentence, but asked that a substantial fine be imposed.

Judge Wilcox overruled the demurrer, found the accused guilty, and ordered him to pay a fine of $100 and the costs of the court amounting to $32.93. He also imposed in this case a sentence of 30 days in jail which was suspended for a period of six months. The liquor procured at this place tested 70 per cent. of alcohol.

The time of the various services is as follows: Masses Sunday at 8, 9, and 10:30 a. m.; benediction at 8 p. m.; confessions Saturdays at 4 p. m.

ZONING SECTIONS ADOPTED, WITH FEW MODIFICATIONS

(Special to the Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I. July 14.—A preliminary report was made by Chairman George R. McKenna, last evening, at the public meeting to hear the zoning committee's report, stating that the committee realized that the zoning regulations were desired as soon as they could be obtained, consequently numerous and frequent meetings were held; secondly, that they used all the authority granted them by the Connecticut legislature and thirdly, they had used many of the forms of other communities, changed to suit their needs. As a result they had workable and efficient zoning regulations.

John F. Gallager, clerk of the committee, read the entire zoning ordinance and after considerable discussion it was decided to vote the adoption section by section. Fire District Clerk William A. Hillard read the sections, and they were adopted by acclamation, with the only change that of inserting the date in the 21st section to July 15, the date of adoption. Previous to the voting on section 17 Thomas J. Whalen objected to the word "persons," as well as Fred Crowley, their argument being that the contractors, architects and builders should be the ones penalized for infraction of the regulation. In defense of the zoning regulation, which might invalidate the whole act. Following the adoption, section by section, the entire regulations were adopted as a whole.

The report of the committee was voted accepted. On motion of Mr. Gallager it was also voted that all expenses incurred by the committee should be paid by the treasurer of the district, on approval of the board of engineers of the fire district. This includes the stenographic expense; also that of the map-making.

A blue print map of the fire district, as drawn by Merton Lewis, was on exhibition. On this the business area was defined, extending easterly from the tracks of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad on the west to the Pawcatuck river on the east, and from Bigelow avenue on the south, almost to Noyes avenue on the north. A small business section was also indicated near the stillmanville bridge.

The meeting was attended by about 50 qualified voters of the Pawcatuck fire district. Adjournment was taken at 9.45 o'clock.

Why Birds Are Not Stung

Birds that eat wasps, bees and other stinging insects do not depend on chance to protect them from being stabbed inside their throats by the victims, according to recent observations by German ornithologists. Shrikes, flycatchers and titmice catch bees and wasps, but always crush them with their beaks before swallowing.

Stand High Pressure

Steel boilers 4 inches thick and 4 feet in diameter are being made by an American gun-boring firm of the best gun-steel. These boilers are designed for super-pressure steam at 1,200 pounds per square foot.

Make Elastic Glass

Two Austrian chemists have succeeded after years of patient experimenting in producing elastic glass. It is made of carbonmide and formaldehyde, and has all the properties of glass except its hardness. Its inventors call their material "Pollopas."

Rod May Find Stream

Because a peach tree limb, used as a divining rod, "tipped" for water at a spot in a Lynchburgh, Va., street, city forces are diging up that street in quest of a small stream which has been flowing through the basement of a bank for three months. If the peach limb divines correctly, the city will pay for the excavation and stop the leak, but if the "tip" is wrong and the digging futile, the bank is to pay for the digging.

Initials on Pigs

English farmers propose to tattoo their initials on their pigs after this, instead of marking them by notching their ears, using black pigment for Chesters and Tamworths and light colored pigment for Berkshires. Cattle also are to be marked in this fashion.

Your First View of the 1926 CHANDLER!

See this Car—it will show you New Values

The 1926 Chandler is bound to attract attention the country over.

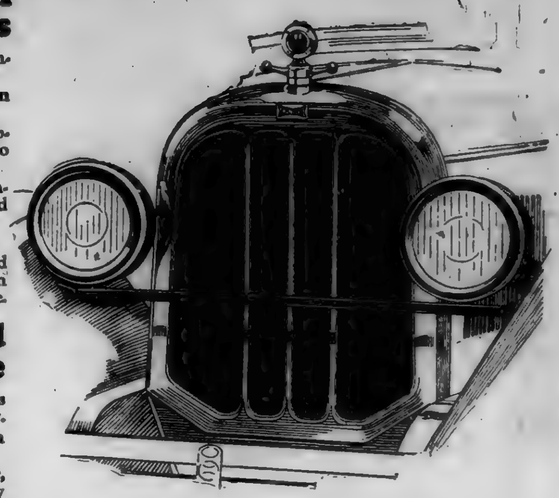
Such a distinctive and beautiful car has an assured welcome.

Every detail—body lines, appointments, equipment—has been developed to appeal to all who appreciate the smartness that is also artistic.

The feminine demand for luxurious environment is satisfied by this aristocratic beauty and perfection of detail.

The New Chandler is a car for the critical.

Even the radiator, usually only an exposed mechanical utility in American cars, is given an artistic touch suggested by latest foreign practice.



Unrivaled Power and Masterly Performance

This new beauty, dominating though it be, is only the partial expression of 1926 superiority.

Mechanically an already great car has been made still better.

Around the famous Pikes Peak Motor, Chandler engineers have developed an equally famous chassis.

Chandler's recent run of 1000 miles in 689 minutes, (an average of 86.96 miles per hour), established a new world's record for stock cars—a marvelous demonstration of power, speed and stamina.

No stock car, regardless of cost or class, now holds so many performance records.

Every important mechanical unit has been proved by thousands of users the country over,—a Chandler purchaser takes no chance on what his car will do.

It has the mastery of performance that makes a hill a thrill, that takes every advantage in congested traffic, that robs the long tour of its fatigue.

See and drive this greatest of all the great Chandlers before you decide on any car.

New Coach Imperial $1595

The 1926 Chandler is especially attractive in the low priced coach.

The highly aristocratic Metropolitan Sedan, Chummy Sedan and Comrade Roadster, are, for their types, equally impressive values.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Grubby Gopher

Beware of folks who scorn the light,
But love the darkness of the night.
—Old Mother Nature.

When Digger the Badger told Peter Rabbit that when he lived in the west had he depended on Prairie Dogs for his living he would have gone hungry most of the time, Peter's curiosity was aroused at once. You would know it would be. "If you please, Mr. Badger," said Peter, "what did you live on when you couldn't get Prairie Dog out there in the Far West?"

"Mice," replied Digger.

"Were Mice the only folks you hunted beside Yap Yap the Prairie Dog?" Peter asked.

"No," replied Digger, "I had many a good meal on Seek-Seek the Spermophile."

"Goodness me!" exclaimed Peter, "who under the sun is that?"

"That," replied Digger, "is a Ground Squirrel, own cousin to Striped Chipmunk, whom you know so well. It used to be great fun to dig out those squirrels."

"Was there anybody else that you hunted?" Peter persisted.

"Let me see," said Digger, scratching his head as if he couldn't remember. "Oh, yes there was grubby Gopher."

Peter looked more puzzled than ever. "Now, who under the sun is Grubby Gopher?" he asked. "I don't know any one around here by that name."

"Well, if you lived out where I came from you would know him," said Digger. "I must say he is no beauty, but how that fellow can dig!"

"Does he dig great deep holes like Yap Yap the Prairie Dog?" Peter asked.

"No," replied Digger; "no," he doesn't dig that kind of a hole at all. Have you ever seen where Miner the Mole has been at work."

"What a foolish question. Of course I have," retorted Peter. "Any one living on the Green Meadows as long as I have would have to be blind not to have seen the long ridges made by Miner when pushing his tunnels along just under the surface."

Digger nodded. "Just so," said he. "Well Grubby digs tunnels the same way Miner does, only he digs them a little deeper and they do not make ridges on the surface. But every little way he throws up a mound of earth."

"Huh, I don't see what he does that for," said Peter.

"To get rid of the dirt," replied Badger. "He has to put that dirt somewhere. So every little way he opens up the tunnel to the surface and pushes the dirt out until there is quite a mound."

"I must say he is no beauty, but how that fellow can dig!"

"He isn't very smart, is he?" said Peter.

"What do you mean, isn't smart?" asked Digger.

"Why, if he keeps making openings into his tunnel like that, what is to prevent enemies from coming in after him?" demanded Peter.

"He closes the door," replied Digger tartly. "Just as soon as he has pushed a load of dirt out he plugs up the hole. The only time he leaves a hole open is when he wants to air out. My, but that fellow has big pockets."

"Pockets!" exclaimed Peter. "Pockets! What kind of pockets?"

STATE ATTORNEY C. E. SEARLS DIES IN THOMPSON TUESDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Conn., July 14—Charles E. Searles, 78, state attorney for Windham county, who died at his home in Thompson this afternoon at 4:30, had been in failing health for two years. For the past two days he has been unconscious.

For 55 years Charles S. Searles has been a practicing lawyer in Putnam. He had acquired wealth, as wealth is rated in a city of this size, and high reputation as a lawyer of ability and probity. He could have won state and probably national prominence, had he so desired. Forty years ago he was offered and declined an appointment to the superior court bench. More than once since then he could have had his party's nomination; he was a republican, as congressman from this district, which would have been equivalent to an election. With his intellectual ability and his personality, a United States senatorship would have been a logical goal.

He persistently refused the urging of his friends to be a candidate for governor and at times when it was almost a certainty that he could have been nominated and would have been elected. Political preferment had no strong appeal for him. He had served three terms in the general assembly, he was secretary of state, he was a delegate to the national convention that nominated William McKinley the first time. He had been president of the State Bar association and was a member of the American Bar association. His appointment as state attorney for Windham county was made in 1903 and he had held the office ever since.

Mr. Searls was born in Pomfret, March 15, 1846, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Clark Searls. For a time his father was a stock broker in New York City and he received his first schooling there. He was graduated from Yale in 1868 and was admitted to the bar two years later. He began the practice of law in Putnam, where he always maintained his office. In 1892, he formed a partnership with Frank F. Russell and in 1910 Howard C. Bradford was admitted to the firm.

October 8, 1892 he married Miss Sarah Alice Fell, of Boston. They made their home in Thompson, about five miles from Putnam, where they have lived during all their married life. No children were born to them. For many years Mr. and Mrs. Searls spent two months every winter at Camden, S. C., and a like period in summer at a Massachusetts beach resort.

Several times during the past two years failing health had kept Mr. Searls confined to his home. His last illness dates back nearly three months. There was a gradual wearing away of the vital forces hardly perceptible from day to day, but a month ago his physicians realized that the end was approaching.

At the January term of the criminal superior court he conducted nearly all of the cases of an unusually large docket. He constantly read from his briefs and his law books without the aid of glasses.

When George M. Coffin of New Haven was appointed receiver of the First National Bank in August, 1924, he engaged Mr. Searls as his counsel. There has been a large amount of litigation resulting from the bank failure, many of the suits involving large sums, and to all of them Mr. Searls gave his personal attention.

He belonged to no organized society except three Greek letter fraternities Kappa Sigma Epsilon, Theta Psi and Psi Upsilon, nor was he a communicant of any church.

Mr. Searls represented the town of Thompson in the lower house of the General Assembly in 1871 and again in 1886. In 1880 he was elected Secretary of State, serving one term. During 1897 and 98 he was the legal adviser of the United States Comptroller of the Currency for the New England district.

He was elected a Senator from the 28th district in 1902 and was chairman of the judiciary committee.

Besides his wife, Attorney Searls leaves a nephew, Searls Dearington, a student at Yale, who spends his summers at the Searls home.

Gas Found in the Sun

Prof. Frederick Slocum, director of the Vanleck observatory at Wesleyan, tells of the discovery of a new gas as the result of observations made during the recent eclipse of the sun. He says the vapors around the sun are visible only at the time of a total eclipse and scientists have concluded as a result of their observations that they have discovered a new gas.

Prof. Slocum said they are not yet ready to announced what the gas is or to discuss its probable qualities.

Some people are so skeptical that they even doubt their own doubts.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

SOY-BEAN BUYERS VICTIMS OF "CHEAP" SEED

Because he thought that farmers "don't know beans," a certain exploiter of soy-bean seed is now revising his opinion while serving a term in the penitentiary for violation of a postal fraud law. Some farmers "do know beans," and when some of these better posted soy-bean growers recently received shipments of Tarheel Black instead of the Otootan which they had ordered, the matter was called to the attention of the post office department and the United States department of agriculture.

Investigation by the post office officials disclosed the fact that this lone operator was advertising the higher-priced variety Otootan, for sale at about one-half the regular market value and doing a tremendous business. His plan called for no shipment of beans of any variety until the customer became insistent, and then he substituted the cheaper Tarheel Black. He was brought to trial and convicted of fradulent use of the mails. Because of the high prices of Otootan and Laredo varieties there has been considerable substitution of the cheaper black varieties, such as Wilson, Ebony or Black Beauty, Peking, and Tarheel Black.

The moral in this little story, says the United States department of agriculture, is not only to know soy-bean varieties, but to buy soy-bean seed from reliable and established seedsmen or growers, and beware of "cheap seed." There are others still at large ready to exploit the farmer's inability to identify the numerous varieties of soy beans. The prospective purchaser of seed should obtain samples before buying, and if not sure of the identity of the seed should consult the county agent or the state agriculture college. Be sure you are getting the variety desired and not some cheap substitute.

LENGTH, SHAPE, OR WEIGHT OF EGG NO INDEX TO SEX OF CHICK

If you are one of the many who believe that the long, slim, heavy hen eggs are the ones which hatch out the male chicks, and that the smaller eggs are the ones which give birth to the future layers of the flock, you need to revise your opinion on the matter, says the United States department of agriculture. You may as well leave your tape measure, scales, calipers, and other units at home when you go forth to purchase a "setting of eggs" from your poultry breeder, and rely solely on mother nature to give you a fifty-fifty deal in the matter of sex.

In answer to the continuous stream of inquiries pouring into the department office relative to determining the sex of the chick in the shell by the size, shape, or weight of the egg, the department says "it just isn't being done." That is, not in a practical way, at least. The scientist is able to identify the sex of a chick in the shell after 7 or 8 days of incubation, however.

Because of the important bearing on the practical aspects of the poultry industry which the ability to select hatching eggs according to the sex desired would have, if such were possible, a number of investigators have made studies concerning the sex-ratio situation of the domestic fowl. Recently Dr. M. A. Jull, poultry husbandman of the United States department of agriculture, completed some observations in which he concludes that there is no correlation between the length, shape, or weight of the egg and the sex of the chick hatched from it. He has also made studies to determine whether or not there is a correlation between the weight of the egg yolk and the sex of the chick, or between the yolk water-content and sex ratio, with the same negative result.

It has been determined, however, says Dr. Jull, that the greater the number of eggs which a hen lays before being put into the breeding pen, the larger will be the proportion of females and the smaller proportion of males produced by her eggs. The practical poultryman may be able to take advantage of this fact to some extent by making his selection of eggs for hatching with reference to the hen's period of production.

PUREBRED LIVESTOCK BRINGS BETTER RETURNS

In every important point of comparison, purebred meat animals show superiority over grades and especially over scrubs, according to reports from farmers received by the bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture.

In the experience of stock owners who are in a position to make comparisons, purebred animals produce better meat, develop more rapidly, are more uniform in quality and appearance, sell better on dull markets, cost but little more to raise, and bring better prices. The following typical comments illustrate the success which many breeders have had in dressing of purebred stock as meat animals:

"I always find that purebreds are ready for market in far less time than scrubs and grades."

"Our bull veals at 2 weeks old are as large as scrub calves at 6 weeks."

"I find I can get around 2 cents a pound more, live weight, for purebreds, as they are more uniform."

"With hogs, purebred litters are more uniform in size, develop more evenly, and put on fat more quickly."

OTHER THAN MILK FOR FEEDING CALVES

Many dairy farmers would raise calves of their own breed if the cost of raising was not so excessive. Perhaps the principal obstacle to raising good calves economically has been the lack of some material to replace milk in the ration. The Massachusetts agricultural experiment station has recently published a bulletin on milk substitutes in the rearing of young calves. This is bulletin No. 223 of the experiment station publication and contains information on calf meals compounded from cereal grains, oil seeds, oil cakes and leguminous seeds; meals similar to these, but supplemented with such animal proteins as blood flour, skim-milk powder, also manufactured milk by products such as skim-milk powder, malted milk residue, semisolid buttermilk and buttermilk powder, infusions of clover hay, of flaxseed and of such meals as bean meal and linseed-oil meal.

The bulletin details their methods of feeding and summarizes the results secured and experiments with regard to gains in development of the calves and the costs or economy of the methods. The results of the trials confirmed previous experiments relative to the superior value for growth of feeding skim milk to young calves, providing it can be had for a price within 1 1-2 to 2 1-2 cents. At 1 1-2 cents a quart the food cost of growing calves to four months of age is considerably above that of the calf fed, but on the basis of growth produced the food cost is about the same as for the several meals. Only when liquid skim milk is not available at such prices should calf meals of skim-milk powder be substituted. These recent experiments have shown that skim-milk powder is a promising substitute. Although this bulletin should be considered as a report on progress only, a study of skim-milk powder for young calves is being conducted along somewhat different lines and further progress will be reported.

'STS "DON'TS" IN USING FEDERAL GRADES FOR ONIONS

A list of "don'ts" which apply to practices in the use of the United States grades for onions has been prepared by the department of agriculture with a view to preventing repetition of the confusion that existed in the produce trade last year through misinterpretation of the grade specifications.

The list is as follows:

1. Don't quote onions as "U. S. No. 1" without a statement of the minimum size unless stock meets the 1 1-2 inch minimum requirement. You may quote "U. S. No. 1 1-4 inch minimum," if such is the case.

2. Don't quote onions as "small," "medium," or "large" unless they have been especially sized to meet the terms specified. You may quote stock as "U. S. No. 1 small to medium, mostly medium;" "U. S. No. 1 mostly medium to large, few small." But remember that not more than 5 per cent may be below 1 1-2 inches unless some other minimum size is specified.

3. Don't think "small" means "boilers." "Small" means onions between 1 1-2 and 1 3-4 inches in diameter. "Boilers" are onions between 3-4 and 1 1-2 inches.

4. Don't expect to receive a minimum size larger than 1 1-2 inches, unless you specify it in your order. Get the habit of specifying the minimum size with your order, for U. S. No. 1 stock. If the shipper can not sell you stock of the miginum diameter you ask, he should notify you to that effect.

5. Get a sizing ring to check up your judgment.

The United States grades for onions have been established to provide a basis for wire orders and for future contracts. Copies of the grade specifications may be obtained free, as long as the supply lasts, upon request to the bureau of agricultural economics, United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

THREE MEN RECOVERING FROM LIGHTNING STROKE

The three men of the party of four who survived the bolt of lightning that struck the rowboat at Black Point, Niantic, Sunday afternoon, under which the quartet were huddled for protection against the rain were reported as considerably improved Tuesday. They are Eno Edwin Hanninen, 27, Arnas Kendrickson, 25, and Albert Hanninen, 23, all of Brooklyn, New York. The body of Tuedore Poibonen, 17, who was killed instantly by the lightning, has been shipped to his home in Brooklyn.

The four young men had come to Niantic to spend a happy vacation. They were out in a flat bottomed row boat when the storm suddenly came up. The four men took refuge on a small island near the mainland, making a landing with difficulty because of the rough sea. They pulled the boat up on shore and huddled under it till the storm abated. Then came a bolt of lightning which was the last any of the four remembered.

Philip Holden, 16, saw the bolt hit the rowboat and summoning three of his young friends he went to the island in a canoe and brought the prostrate forms of the lightning victims to the shore. Dr. F. H. Dart was summoned and he ordered Eno Hanninen and Kendrickson to the hospital in New London. Kendrickson had recovered sufficiently to be dismissed on Monday while Hanninen was dismissed Tuesday morning. As a result of the tragic affair Eno Hanninen was rendered temporarily violently insane. He had to be strapped when brought into the hospital. He quickly recovered however, and it is thought will be none the worse for the accident in a few days.

ORDERED TO APPEAR IN NORWICH COURT

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 14—Joseph Moranty, 114 Hempstead street, was ordered today to appear in the police court at Norwich tomorrow morning and defend a charge of violation of the automobile law in passing a standing trolley car that was receiving and discharging passengers last Saturday. The ordering of Moranty into court was at the request of Chief George Linton of the Norwich police department.

State Policeman Suspended

State Policeman Walter Kushner, stationed at the Centerbrook barracks has been suspended from duty indefinitely by Supt. Robert Hurley. No definite reason is given for the suspension, but it is understood that Kushner is relieved from active duty because of conduct unbecoming a policeman.

Man's greatest responsibility on the mundane sphere is woman—and she never lets him forget it, either.

MARKET WAS STRONG

NEW YORK, July 14—(A. P.)—Resumption of pool activity in a number of rubbers, motors, public utilities and specialties imparted a strong tone to today's stock market, net gains of 1 to 8 points being scattered throughout the list at the close. Trading was in slightly larger volume, the day's sales running over one million shares.

Trade news was largely constructive in character. It included publication of statistics showing that car loadings during the week of the fourth were the largest of any corresponding period on record; the announcement of an increase in gasoline prices by the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, and reports that premiums were being paid on Oklahoma crude, stiffening copper and rubber prices, and reports of large current earnings by several important industrial companies.

U. S. Rubber common was one of the outstanding features of the session, being run up over five points to 60 1-4, the highest price in two years, on buying based on reports of improved earnings, and marked appreciation in inventories through the recent sharp advance in crude rubber prices. The preferred touched a new top at 108 1-2. Good buying also was noted in the Fisk, Kelly-Springfield, Goodyear and Goodrich issues.

There was little inquiry for the so-called pivotal industrials although they maintained a strong undertone. to 196 3-4: Baldwin showed a small American Can moved up 1 1-2 points fractional gain at 115 1-4 and U. S. Steel common closed unchanged at 115 1-2 after having sold at 116.

Dodge Brothers A responded to the publication of the semi-annual earnings report, showing net income at the rate of nearly $9.50 a share, by moving up two points to a new record top at 31. It subsequently cancelled half its gain on profit taking. The preferred attained a new peak price at 84. Timken Roller Bearing broke through to a new maximum at 45.

Spirited bidding for Phoenix Hosiery, which was bid up five points to a new peak price at 41 1-2 on reports of an enormous increase in earnings in the late few months over the corresponding period last year, was one of the outstanding features of the specialty list among the two dozen or so other industrial issues to attain new maximum quotations were Sears Roebuck, Woolworth, General Railway Signal, Underwood Typewriter, Sterling products, Owens Bottle and Weston Electrical instrument.

North American assumed the leadership of the Public Utility group by moving up nearly two points to a new high at 55 on buying based on reports of fur thexaeprnsion. st di.bG- of further expansion. Niagara Falls Power moved up four points to 75, a new top, on one sale. A brisk inquiry for Montana Power sent that stock up over two points to 86.

Meagre rumors stimulated trading in the Wheeling and Lake Erie issues, which again established new high prices for the year, the preferred jumping ten points to 45 and then easing to 43 on profit taking. Net gains of a point or two also were recorded by Chicago and Northwestern, Delaware and Hudson, Denver, Rio Grande and Western preferred, Lackawanna, Erie first preferred, Missouri Pacific and a few others.

Call money opened at 4 1-2 per cent, but dropped to 1-4 when it became known that plant of funds were available at that figure in the "outside market." Time money and commercial paper rates held steady.

Strength of the Scandinavian exchanges featured the foreign exchange market. Danish kroner moved up about 16 points to around 17.95 cents. Demand sterling held firm around $4.85 3-4 and French francs at 4.70 cents. Other changes were largely nominal.

GREENEVILLE

Mrs. Schaufler of Jamaica, L. I., has been a visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kellar of 10 Hadley avenue. A delicious supper was served Sunday evening by Mrs. Kellar who was assisted by Mrs. Arthur Dayon, Mrs. Otto Rother and Mrs. Joseph Denker, after which the guests were entertained with Victrola music.

During the week, Rev. William A. Keefe, the popular pastor of St. Mary's Memorial church, has been receiving congratulations, since it became known that on Sunday last he reached the 25th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood. Rev. Father Keefe, who is a native of Waterbury, was ordained a priest at the famous seminary of Louvain, Belgium, July 12, 1900, by Bishop van der Strapyen. He first came to be known as a power for good in Eastern Connecticut when assigned by his bishop to service as a curate in neighboring parishes, doing active work in the old St. Mary's church, later as pastor in Plainfield and finally being assigned to the pastorate of Greeneville. How effectively he has employed his time and talents is best indicated by the magnificent St. Mary's Memorial church, with its tower as a tribute to the soldiers of all wars which was begun and completed by a fine devoted people were a big disappointed recently, when the rumor went round that there was a possibility of Father Keefe being advanced to the honor of Auxiliary Bishop, now Rev. Hasbon Murray has been made bishop of Portland, Maine; but Greeneville is not to lose its zealous pastor for it is now generally believed that the choice for Bishop will be Rt. Rev. Msgr. McAuliffe, president of St. Thomas' Seminary, Hartford. Father Keefe's generous work in every cause for public betterment, especially his war activities, is too well known to require comment. His loyal people are hoping that he will be permitted to remain with them as leader, friend and counselor, at least until he has attained his silver jubilee in 1928.

CHILD BADLY BURNED BY WATER FROM RADIATOR

Nellie Cafaro, 7, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Salvatore Cafaro of Poquonoc road, Groton, is a patient at the hospital in New London as the result of burns about the face and arms and a possible fracture of the skull, received in Groton Monday afternoon at about 3:30 o'clock, when she was struck by a Ford coupe driven by Leo M. Garrison of Thompson court, Boston. The little girl was burned by escaping steam and hot water from the radiator of the car when it burst when the car struck a bakery delivery truck owned by the American and European Bakery Co. of New London, and operated by Zeck Gurnett, an employe.

The bakery truck was at a standstill when the accident occurred. The girl, it is reported, stepped out into the road behind the truck as the car approached from the rear. The front end of the coupe, in an attempt to avoid hitting the girl, swerved to the right but the girl did not clear the space between the two cars and she was struck almost at the same instant that the collision between the two machines occurred. The child was thrown to the pavement, so that the front end of the coupe was directly over her. The impact caused the radiator of the coupe to burst and the hot water poured down upon the child.

Dr. Charles G. Barnum was summoned immediately and after giving necessary treatment ordered her removed to the hospital where her condition was reported to be critical.

Garrison, driver of the coupe, was placed under arrest by state policemen and was released in bonds of $100, pending the results of the child's injuries.

Fourth Birthday Party

Tuesday evening a birthday supper was held in honor of Master Benjamin Franklin Pendleton's fourth birthday at the home of his grandmother, Mrs. B. F. Pendleton, 25 Hobart avenue. Supper was served at 6:30, consisting of salad, sandwiches, fruit, melons and punch. A birthday cake was the center of attraction. During the evening games were played, which offered amusement for those present.

Zoning Commission Will Meet

Alderman P. F. Sweeney, who is chairman of the zoning commission, has called a meeting of the commission to be held Friday evening after the special council meeting. The members of the commission will discuss the scope of their work and other details incident to organization.

ANGUS PARK OF HANOVER ENTERTAINS FRIENDS OF HIS YOUTH IN SCOTLAND

Several interesting articles about Angus Park of Hanover, who is traveling in Scotland and England with his wife, married daughter, Mrs. F. G. Way, and granddaughter, Miss Elizabeth E. Way, appeared in the June 27 issue of The Border Standard, a newspaper published at Selkirk-Galashiels, Scotland.

The articles were as follows: Last week Galashiels was favored with a return visit from America of Mr. Angus Park, a native of Galashiels, who was employed as a boy at Buckholm Mill and who left the town in 1872 and is now the owner of four woolen factories in the state of Connecticut, U. S. A., where 1,000 people are employed. It will be remembered that in June of last year Mr. Park, on the occasion of a visit to his native town, the first time for over fifty years, spent much time in visiting the scenes of his boyhood, including Ladhope school, where he was a pupil under Mr. Wardrop, who was headmaster there until 1872, when he left town and subsequently went abroad. Last summer Mr. Park left a sum of money with Mr. Crerar (who has since died) for the purpose of entertaining the scholars and the entertainment took the form of a picnic and games in Wilder Park.

Last week Mr. Park again visited his school and left a sum of money for the purpose of giving the children some enjoyment. He also performed another thoughtful act. Assisted by his cousin, John Park, Galashiels, he made every effort to get in touch with the old boys who were at school in Mr. Wardrop's time, not less than 53 years ago. These numbered about twenty and there was a happy reunion in the Douglas hotel on Saturday evening, when Mr. Park received his old school chums and entertained them to a splendid and sumptuous dinner. Besides the old school chums there were present, Mr. John Park, Lord Alfred Douglas and W. Sorley Brown.

A. M. Grieve, headmaster of Gala High school, and a former pupil of Ladhope presided, and after dinner several toasts were proposed and honoured. Mr. Grieve gave "The King" and "President Coolidge."

Mr. Park then extended a hearty welcome and expressed great pleasure in seeing so many of his old school chums. He assured them that it was one of the happiest moments in his life for while his home was now in America, had never lost his love for dear old Scotland and the town in which he was born.

Several other speakers were heard and Mr. Sorley Brown expressed thanks on behalf of the company to Mr. Park for his great kindness and thoughtfulness in bringing together and entertaining them at dinner. Mr. Brown paid high tribute to Mr. Park's business abilities, which have won him a high position in America. Mr. Park, said Mr. Brown, was one of those few men whom success in life had not spoilt, and he hoped that the day was not far distant when their host would return to Galashiels to make his home among them once again.

Lord Douglas, direct descendant of the Douglas who was slain at the Battle of Otterburn nearly 540 years ago, who was a guest of Mr. Park for the dinner, spoke briefly, expressing a desire that his family might sometime return across the border to Scotland.

After making a stay at the Douglas hotel for several days Mr. Park and party returned to Edinburg and in July are to leave for London where they will remain for some time.

Another article touches upon a school excursion made possible by Mr. Park, as follows: Yesterday afternoon about 150 children attending Ladhope school were, through the generosity of Mr. Angus Park, Hanover, Conn., U. S. A., entertained to an excursion to Selkirk by motor charabanc. Four large cars were utilized to convey the party to Selkirk, where the youngsters had an enjoyable time on the Selkirk Hill.

On the front page of the paper is an interesting article touching on the early life of Mr. Park and concerning his travels in Scotland. The article reads: Over 50 years ago a lad of about twelve years of age named Angus Park, worked in the Buckholm mill, Galashiels, where his father was employed. Angus got eight shillings per week and thought himself well off. In 1872 his family emigrated to Canada and went from there to America. They prospered, and Mr. Angus Park now owns four woolen mills in the state of Connecticut, the fourth mill having been erected recently. Mr. Park by dint of hard work and business ability has made a considerable fortune, and he is now taking a little pleasure out of life.

He came back to Scotland last summer on holiday and stayed for a time in Galashiels looking up old acquaintances and visiting the scenes of his boyhood. He is back again this summer accompanied by his wife (a native of Glasgow); a married daughter and granddaughter. They spent the last week end touring the Borders. They have traveled far and wide, but they say they have seen nothing so beautiful as the Border Country as it has been revealed to them amid all the splendor of June. Certainly the Borderland is looking its best just now, following three weeks of glorious weather.

Success in life spoils many people, but it has not spoiled Mr. Angus Park. It was a kind and thoughtful act on his part to entertain his old Ladhope School chums to dinner at the Douglas hotel on Saturday night. Most of the talk concerned the school's old head-master, G. Wardhop, and from what was said he was evidently held in high respect and esteem. A. G. Grieve spoke interestingly on school days of over 50 years ago and the conversation between him and Lord Alfred Douglas, the poet, was most interesting.

Mr. Park told of meeting Mr. Wardrop in Canada one day about 35 years ago, where he had secured a very fine position with a school. Mr. Park and other school chums were unable to say whether or not their old head-master was still living.

DEFENDS CALIFORNIA IN SCARE OVER EARTHQUAKE

California people are quick to arise to the defense of their state against unfavorable impressions which the world outside may receive. Mrs. Catherine Spencer, of Los Angeles, writes The Bulletin that the principal cause of so much destruction from the earthquake at Santa Barbara was from faulty building construction and she encloses the following editorial from the Los Angeles Evening Express under the title of "Some Comparisons":

On the day of the Santa Barbara earthquake more persons were killed in the United States by falling from ladders than lost their lives in the earthquake.

Eleven were killed outright or died from injuries at Santa Barbara. These were the first victims of earthquake in Southern California in 113 years.

Last Friday night in a collapse of a single building in Boston 43 persons were killed and others injured, some so badly hurt doctors say they will die.

The Santa Barbara earthquake has been described over the world as a great catastrophe. A catastrophe it was. The loss of precious lives and destruction of property, the fruit of man's toil, always is catastrophic. But compared with other catastrophies this was small. The property loss was less than the value of an average half month's new building in Los Angeles.

The tornadoes which last spring swept Middle Western states took greater toll of life in a single village of the many towns and villages levelled by it, and destroyed infinitely more property.

Excessive heat in summer and cold in winter in Northern and Eastern states take more lives in a single day than have been lost in Southern California through earthquake in more than a century.

The earthquake emphasizes the security of California. Other parts of the country are visited annually by cyclones, tornadoes, floods or blizzards, all taking their toll of human lives. We are celebrating in California this year the seventy-fifth anniversary of admission of the state to the Union. In all that time, and nearly forty years before American occupation, not a life has been lost through earthquake in Southern California until the Santa Barbara shake. And here there are no cyclones, tornadoes, floods or blizzards, or prostrating heat or bitter cold. We escape so much we are apt to magnify the smaller things.

These facts loyal Californians should bear in mind, and make known to their friends elsewhere.

FINED AFTER COLLISION WITH NORWICH MACHINE

Four automobile cases were heard by Judge Frederick N. Dimmock in Waterford town court Monday afternoon. Charles Parks, taxi driver, of Poquonoc Bridge, Groton, was fined $25 and costs on a charge of reckless driving, $15 of the fine being remitted. Parks was arrested by State Policeman Bernard W. Kenerson Sunday, following a slight crash, in which Parks' car collided with a Buick roadster owned by Dr. Albert C. Freeman of Norwich and operated by Mrs. Freeman. Attorney Thomas F. Dorsey of New London represented the defendant. The fine and costs were paid.

Genaro Martino of Hartford was arrested Sunday by State Policeman Henry J. Albright and was placed under a charge of reckless driving after having passed seven automobiles on a grade curve of the Hartford turnpike. Martino was fined $25 and costs, totalling $34.91, which he paid.

Samuel Snitkin of Cutler street, New London, was fined $25 and costs on a charge of reckless driving. Upon recommendation of Prosecuting Attorney J. James Floyd, the fine was remitted. Snitkin paid the costs, amounting to $10.

B. P. Perry of Hartford, who was arrested by Waterford constables and charged with speeding, had his case nolled upon payment of costs amounting to $10.

WILL MAKE REPORT ON RESERVOIR PROJECT

Members of the court of common council have been notified by Mayor Milo R. Waters, that a special meeting of the council is to be called Friday evening at the council chamber to listen to a report on the reservoir project of Norwich.

It is expected that the report to be presented will recommend the Deep River watershed for the new Norwich reservoir, but no action will be taken on the matter at this meeting, for the report will be handed to every member of the council for study. Another special meeting will be called one week later. The report will be read to the members of the council and City Engineer Shepard B. GAS RATE REDUCTION ANNOUNCED IN NORWICH

A reduction of gas rates by the city of Norwich gas and electrical department, effective July 31st and to apply on bills of September 1st, was announced Tuesday by the department and will be received with pleasure by consumers of gas in Norwich. The new rates entail a reduction of about 10 per cent. to the small users of gas while a 20 per cent. reduction will be enjoyed by the larger users of gas.

The old 90 cent service charge of meter is done away with in the new rates and the first 100 cubic feet of gas will be charged 80 cents. The next 7,400 cubic feet per month will be 1 1-2 cents per 100 cu. feet; the next 22,500 cubic feet per month will be 12 cents per 100 cu. feet; the next 20,000 cubic feet per month; 11 1-2 cents per 100 cu. feet and all over 50,000 cubic feet per month a flat rate of 9 cents per 100 cu. feet. The minimum bill will be 80 cents under the new rate, which allows 100 cubic feet of gas to be used, thus doing away with the former 90 cent charge for service.

Consumers desiring to discontinue service for less than one year will be charged $2 for reinstallation of meter.

With this reduction it is claimed that Norwich gas consumers will enjoy rates as low as found in any city in Connecticut at least.

SUMMER WEATHER SUITS HENS IN STORRS CONTEST

The birds in the Storrs contest the past week have seemed to enjoy the mild summer weather we have been having by laying 204 more eggs than they did the previous week which is relatively 50 eggs more than for the same week last year. The total production for the thirty-sixth week was 5104 eggs or a yield of about fifty-two per cent. This brings the total production to date to 151,707 eggs. Keewaydin Farm's pen of Barred Rocks from Darien, Conn., and Hilltop Farm's pen of White Leghorns from Suffield, Conn., again emerged in a merry race for first honors for the week with the Barred Rocks, winning by one egg in the last trapping, making the total of 61 eggs for the week. While the White Leghorns took second honors for the week with 60 eggs, Barred Rocks owned by Purdue University from Lafayette, Ind., were a close third with 59 eggs with only nine of the ten birds laying. Hanson's Leghorn Farm from Corvallis, Ore., were in fourth place with 57 eggs.

The only change in the Barred Rock class for the week was Merritt M. Clark's pen from Darien, Conn., moving into second place by passing E. C. Foreman's pen from Lansing, Mich. In the Rhode Island Red class, F. S. Chapin's Reds from Longmeadow, Mass., moved up to tie for fourth place with I. W. Mitchell's Reds from Wallingford, Conn. The leaders in the other classes remained the same as for the previous week.

The following table shows the number of birds in each of the five classes in the contest and the average of each group; also the average for all breeds taken together.

160 White Wyandottes	43.7
200 Barred Rocks	61.9
360 Rhode Island Reds	46.2

TAFTVILLE

The second meeting of the committee which is arranging the Old Home Week celebration for the Pioneer Boys of Taftville, met Monday evening at Ponemah hall, with general chairman, John B. Benoit presiding. Delegates from most of the village organizations and societies were again present, and there is every reason to believe that every club and fraternal organization within the limits of the town are to ally themselves with those already working, in order to make the celebration a banner one for Taftville.

George W. Weller was elected treasurer of the event, and the captains of the teams who are out for money have practically all signed up their members. It is believed that with the generous donation of the Taftville Field Day association to the affair, the residents of the town will contribute a sum of money of generous proportions.

Already the events for the first two days of the gathering have been discussed and planned upon. The events for Monday, which is the third and final day of the reunion, can only be decided after the canvassing committee turn in their report. If the exchequer holds out, the Pioneers will have a three-day program with something doing every minute.

It was voted to send out notices and invitations to all the old residents of the village who now reside in other places and whose addresses are known to the committee, of which William C. Kendall is chairman. There are scores of families who resided in the village when the town was in its infancy, who have expressed their desire to return in September and renew their friendships as well as look over the changes and improvements of the village. Many others who now make their residences in other places will be looked up by the committee and invited to turn their footsteps toward Taftville for over Labor day. One of the committee estimated that about 1,000 Pioneers will take part in the big celebration.

William R. Booth, of Providence, R. I., was made chairman of the committee on badges, which are to be purple this year, and will bear the name of the organization, the date of the event, etc. All true Pioneers will wear a badge that they might be distinguished from those who visit the town out of curiosity. The entire population will take part in the welcome to be given the visitors and all are assured of a hospitable reception.

Mr. and Mrs. Alphonse White and son, James White, of Pratte avenue, have gone to Canada to spend a month with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Amede Pion, of Hunters avenue, leave Thursday for a short vacation trip to Canada.

A raft has been anchored in the waters of the old swimming hole on the Lisbon side of the mill dam, and is being greatly enjoyed by the youngsters of the town who frequent the place daily.

Miss Medore Rondeau has resigned her position with the spinning department of the Ponemah company.

Deputy Sheriff Oscar H. Main was a business caller in the village Tuesday.

Work has been completed on a store building owned by Theodore Kendall, in Lisbon.

Miss Elizabeth Sullivan, R. N., of Norwich, was a guest of Mrs. Earle M. Wood, of North Third avenue, Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Simeon Racette and family, who recently moved here from Canada, are occupying a tenement on South B street.

The A-o-wa-ki-ya Camp Fire group have leased the Pettibone cottage at Pine Grove, Niantic, and are to spend their vacation there the first two weeks of August.

William Jackson, of Baltic, was a visitor in town Tuesday.

The town of Lisbon is making an extensive addition to the Ames cemetery in that town. A large tract of land has been purchased from Joseph Desmarais, and is being prepared and divided into lots. The addition adjoins the old cemetery, and there are to be approximately 82 family lots and 33 single graves in the new section. A driveway 12 feet wide will run through the section, and all lots will front on the driveway. This is one of the advantages that the new tract will have over the present cemetery. Stone walls are to be built in the front and rear, with a wire fence on the west side. Trees and shrubs will be planted about the entrance. Blueprints of the property have already been prepared and the work of enlarging the cemetery has begun.

A Hartford Sunday paper published in its artgravure section last Sunday, a picture of the graduating class of St. Francis Hospital Training school of Hartford, of which three Taftville girls, Miss Mary Murphy, Miss Jennie McSheffery and Miss Isadora Caron, are members.

The Don't-Worry club of Taftville motored to Capitol Park, Hartford, Sunday afternoon.

NORWICH TOWN

Plans are being formulated for the Sunday school picnic of the First Methodist Episcopal church, Wednesday, July 29th, at Mohegan Park, Lewis Aldrich, and Mrs. Richard Carter is the committee in charge of the arrangements.

At the First M. E. Church, Sunday morning, the pastor, Rev. James B. Aldrich preached from Revelations 3:20. Behold I stand at the door and knock. If any man hear My voice and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him and he with me.

"Seeking Price" was the theme of the sermon.

Miss Theodora Brown, was the leader of the Young People's Christian Endeavor service in the evening when the topic was The Beatitudes of the New Testament, with Scripture references in Matthew, John and Romans.

In his sermon at the First Congregational church, Sunday morning, Rev. Charles E. Reeves who occupied the pulpit, preached on The God of Patience.

The Young People's Christian Endeavor society held a business meeting Sunday evening, preceding its service, which was in charge of Miss Margaret Chapin, who ably treated the topic, The Beatitudes of the New Testament.

Mrs. Mary Gaffney and Miss Marjory Gaffney of Danielson, were callers Sunday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin L. Kennedy of Town street.

Several Norwich Town parties went by automobile Sunday to various shore resorts to avoid the extreme heat, Atlantic Beach, being the preference in many cases.

Theodore Sterry of Norwich Town, motored to Quonochontaug Beach, Friday afternoon, and was a caller at the cottage of Rev. and Mrs. Gurdon P. Bailey, of Elm avenue, who with their daughters Miss Marion L. Bailey and Miss Louise P. Bailey have been spending some time there.

Concluding a visit of four days at the home of Mrs. Harriet E. Brainerd of Mystic, Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Lamb, returned Monday evening to their home on Town street.

During their stay, Mrs. Brainerd who is a sister of Dr. Lamb, with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Guile Gremley, accompanied by their guests, motored to several popular shore resorts in Rhode Island. All along the routes, Dorothy Perkins and red rambler roses in profusion, were admired, never having been more beautiful than this year. Sunday, a delightful trip to Narragansett Pier and Point Judith was enjoyed, when over this particular thoroughfare alone, thousands of automobiles were either passed in going to and fro, or were parked at the pier and on the point. Monday noon, Mrs. Brainerd entertained a dinner party.

When returning that evening, Dr. and Mrs. Lamb, who were conveyed to Norwich by their relatives, stopped en route and called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Staplin, of Burnett's corners. Their youngest daughter, Mrs. Hodgson (Marcia Staplin) and her infant son, the latter having been born at Panama, are spending the summer there.

NAMES STATE DELEGATES TO "BOOST NEW ENGLAND"

Governor Trumbull has appointed George B. Chandler, secretary of the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce, Charles L. Evanson, secretary of the Manufacturers' association of Connecticut, and Wilson H. Lee of Orange as delegates to represent Connecticut at a conference to be held at the State House, Boston, July 22, to devise plans for "boosting New England". Delegates will be present, also, from Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

The conference is the result of an informal talk which governors of the New England states had on the subject at the time of the governors' conference at Poland Spring, Me.

DEFENSE HAS OPENED IN SCOPES EVOLUTION CASE

With the Jury Absent, a Scientific Witness Was on the Stand For the Defense When Court Adjourned—Arguments as to the Competency of the Scientific Testimony Will Be Made Today—The Defense Aims to Prove That There is No Conflict Between Evolution Theories and Christianity.

DAYTON, Tenn., July 15—(A. P.)—Argument as to the competency of scientific testimony in the Scopes case will be made in the courtroom here tomorrow, a development eagerly expected by participants and lookers on in Dayton. The state had rested its case and one scientific witness, Dr. Maynard M. Metcalf, former Professor of Zoology at Oberlin College, Ohio, was on the witness stand for the defense when court adjourned late today.

His testimony has not been made a part of the record of the case, for prosecution attorneys voiced objection when questions concerning evolution were asked him and the jury was retired from the room. With the jury out of the courtroom defense attorneys were permitted to ask Dr. Metcalf a number of questions concerning the subject which he has made his life study.

When his examination has been completed the attorneys will argue the competency of such testimony. This was expected tomorrow. Whether the court would give his decision at once or defer it to a later court day was not known. Judge Raulston, presiding, said tonight that he has abandoned his practice of questions.

Dr. Metcalf's testimony will be heard in the absence of the jury as a test to show the line along which the defense hopes to proceed and to which emphatic objection is made by the state. Every indication pointed to a hard fight before the court on the question.

The defense hopes to prove by Dr. Metcalf and other scientists that there is no conflict between evolution theories and Christianity. One of the questions asked the witness this afternoon concerned his church affiliations. He testified that he is now a member of the Congregationalist church and formerly was a member of the Presbyterian church. He has taught two bible classes, he said.

Case Moved Rapidly.

The case moved rapidly after reaching the stage of actual testimony. The first witness took his place on the stand at the second session of the court today.

The more or less neglected jury was brought into the courtroom after an extended period of exclusion. A plea of "not guilty" was entered for John T. Scopes by one of his attorneys, the jury was sworn and at last was actually a part of the case.

The jurymen heard Walter White, Superintendent of Schools, two school boy students of Scopes and F. E. Robinson, chairman of the board of education testify for the state. They saw "a civic biology" by George W. Hunter, and a bible introduced in evidence. The state rested and the defense called Dr. Metcalf as its first witness. No objection came from Attorney General A. T. Stewart as the witness was led through a detailed account of his scientific activities since he was ten years of age.

At the first mention of "evolution" objection came from the state as to the admissibility of such testimony. It was finally agreed to exclude the jury, permit the witness to answer a number of questions and then argue the competency of his testimony.

The jury retired but not until Captain J. R. Thompson, one of the most striking figures on the jury and a former United States marshal had taken occasion to defend his fellow jurors against the suspicion that they might loiter about the grounds and hear the arguments from amplifiers scattered about the lawn. The court issued a gentle warning to the jurymen to leave the grounds. Captain Thompson, in emphatic language declared that a suggestion that any juryman at any time had been a long distance listener to argument or discussion in the courtroom was without foundation in fact. The court took occasion to express its full confidence in the integrity of the jury.

Mr. Metcalf told of his years of study and work as a teacher of zoology. He recounted his degrees and connections in scientific work. After this detail Clarence Darrow asked:

"Are you an evolutionist."

"Surley" replied the witness as the attorney general seemed about to interpose an objection.

"Do you know any scientific men who are not evolutionists?" was Mr. Darrow's next question and Mr. Stewart's objection was in this time before an answer could be made.

The court instructed the witness to whisper his answer to the court stenographer and admonished that court attache not to permit the press to get it. The answer was whispered and entered in the record.

Then Dr. Metcalf was asked to give his definition of evolution. The witness said that he was opposed to definitions but was willing to give descriptions. The question was finally lost in the shuffle but after the jury had walked away, Mr. Darrow was ready with another.

"Will you state what evolution is in regard to the origin of man?"

Finally it was agreed that certain questions on evolution might be answered to furnish the basis for the discussion to follow before the court.

Definition of Evolution

"Evolution," said Dr. Metcalf, "and the theories of evolution are fundamentally different things. The facts of evolution are all theory. There are dozens of theories of evolution, some of which are largely mistakes and some almost wholly untrue.

"We are in possession of scientific knowledge to answer flatly that evolution has occurred. Evolution in its final analysis means change of an organism from one character to a different character. The change of an organism from one set of characteristics to a form having a different set of characteristics may be found in general to be evolution.

"Starting with the inorganic world there has been a tremendous series of changes. The sun is comparatively young. The earth has gone through long courses of change. But in inorganic evolution we have to conceive earlier forms of life subsisting solely on inorganic food. Only plants can do that, no animal has been able to live solely on inorganic food."

"From the first living things developed series of forms in plant groups, gradually becoming more complex. These form a beautiful series as we study their bodies in the rocks.

"I am inclined to believe there may have been whole series of animals and plants in the earth completely wiped out.

"They were succeeded by other series of plants and animals on the earth. The evidence is insufficient to determine when the first life appeared. Geologists measure ages not in years and I am not an expert in that line. I would say 600,000,000 years is a modest guess.

"Alongside of plants whole series of animals were developing. Animals hustle to get their food and therefore developed locomotive organs. Plants have not. It is not so easy to tell the order in which plants evolved as to tell about this change in the higher animals. In plants there is a series of increasing perplexities.

"Animal life and plant life probably began at the border line between the water and the land. For a long period in early life all living things were marine. When terrestrial lines began conditions were more difficult and needs to meet these difficulties of existence have been the occasion of developing conditions to supply these needs. Considerable portions of life on the land have gone back to the sea."

Dr. Metcalf in describing a mammal said hair developed or rudimentary, is a feature and that mammals also suckle their young. They have a vertebral column and two pairs of limbs which always have a shoulder hip girdle.

Man, said the witness, is classed among the primates. He is not so highly developed in his body as some other animals. His hand is not so skillful as the claw of a bird. Primates include monkeys, tailed and tailless, man and others of which fossil forms have been found.

Fundamental proofs of evolution, Dr. Metcalf declared, are found not in man so much as in lower animals. Various proofs found throughout the universe make a tremendous probability in favor of evolution of man.

"The series of proofs are so convincing that any informed man cannot doubt the probability of man's evolution," Dr. Metcalf concluded for the day.

Five school boy witnesses, and F. E. Robinson and Walter White, were sworn in en masse after Judge Raulston had overruled the defense motion to quash the indictment, Mr. White, the prosecutor, was the first witness to take the stand.

The witnes said Scopes had told him he could not teach biology without violating the anti evolution law and that the law was unconstitutional. This statement was made during the course of a conversation between George W. Rappleyea and White, the witness testified.

"He admitted he had taught the theory of evolution as expounded in Hunter's biology and said that he could not teach the book without violating the law," White testified.

Protest from Defense

The attorney general then announced his intention of introducing the biological text book and a Bible into the evidence. This brought a vigorous protest from Arthur Garfield Hays of the defense, who declared that the prosecution must prove what was the theory of the creation taught in the Bible before they could convict Scopes.

"Where in the law do you find that the prosecution must prove that Scopes violated the law by teaching a theory in conflict with the King James version of the Bible" he asked, declaring there is no comment necessary in scientific work. After this detail Clarence Darrow asked:

"Are you an evolutionist."

"Surley" replied the witness as the attorney general seemed about to interpose an objection.

"Do you know any scientific men who are not evolutionists?" was Mr. Darrow's next question and Mr. Stewart's objection was in this time before an answer could be made.

CAUSE OF DISPUTE BETWEEN BRICKLAYERS AND PLASTERERS

WASHINGTON, July 15—(A. P.)—The jurisdictional dispute between bricklayers' and plasterers' unions which has threatened cessation of construction activity in many cities was caused by an act of bad faith on the part of the plasterers, William J. Bowen, President of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International union, charged in a statement tonight.

In 1911, Mr. Bowen said, an agreement was signed by the Bricklayers' Union and the Operative Plasterers and Cement Finishers International Association providing a division of territory. The latter union, he charged broke the agreement by invading territory of the bricklayers in Florida.

The bricklayers, the statement said, will not consent to arbitration as long as the locals established in Florida by the Operative Plasterers are in existence. A return to the 1911 agreement was suggested by Mr. Bowen as the best settlement of the dispute.

Denying charges of the operative plasterers that he is attempting to absorb their union and become a building trades "Czar," Mr. Bowen said that he plans to retire from union activities very soon.

President Party On Sightseeing Trip

Visited City of Quincy and Viewed the Birthplace of John Quincy Adams; Also Shipyard.

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., July 15—(A. P.)—In the role of sight seers, President and Mrs. Coolidge today visited the 300 year old city of Quincy, where John Adams and John Quincy Adams, the only two other residents of Massachusetts to become president were born and buried.

Cruising down the coast from Marblehead on the Mayflower, the President and Mrs. Coolidge with a small party of guests, debarked at the Fore River yard of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, a stone's throw from the new airplane carrier Lexington, which is nearing completion.

From the deck of his yacht, the president viewed with interest the huge red hull of the Lexington but did not go over to its ways to inspect the craft.

Leaving the ship yard by motor, Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge first went to a small frame house, the birthplace of John Quincy Adams, sixth president of the United States and the home during the Revolutionary war of John Adams, signer of the Declaration of Independence and second president.

Later the presidential party crossed modest frame dwelling where John Adams was born.

Before going back to the yacht for the return cruise to Marblehead, the President and Mrs. Coolidge visited the First Parish church, in the basement of which is the resting place of both John and John Quincy Adams.

Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge were accompanied by Melville E. Stone, their house guest, Secretary Sanders and a dozen photographers who made the trip at the express invitation of the president.

Mr. Coolidge evidenced great interest in the historical spots in Quincy which last month celebrated its 200th anniversary. In the John Quincy Adams birth place he studied numerous prints and old pictures which covered the walls, gazed at the planked ceiling with cross beams, and walked up a creaky flight of stairs to take a look at the four posted canopy bed, covered with patch quilts. Both houses have been restored as much as possible to their condition in the late 18th century.

The president was particularly interested in the Adams' homestead because of his distant relationship to Abigail wife of John and the mother of John Quincy Adams.

During his visit to the church, which was built in 1828 as the fourth structure on the site since establishment of the church in 1639, the president was taken into the basement and for several moments stood in silence as he gazed at the tomb of the two former presidents.

On his cruise from Marblehead to Quincy, the president gave photographers free run of the ship. Wearing a yachting cap, he was photographed looking through binoculars, using various nautical instruments and standing behind the wheel.

As he stepped from the yacht at Quincy the president was greeted by Capt. Felipe Fleish commander of the Rividavia one of the two Argentine dreadnaughts being conditioned at the ship yard. The Rividavia dreadnaught, the Moreno were berthed near the Mayflower's dock.

The president's visit to Quincy afforded Walter Ferguson one of the White House secret service men, the honor of having to bring a president to his home town. Ferguson who preceded the yacht to make arrangements was greeted by hundreds of old friends who seemed as anxious to see him as the president.

RAILROADS NOTIFIED TO FILE COPIES OF CONTRACTS

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(A. P.)—Railroads were notified today by the interstate commission that hereafter they must file copies of any contracts they may make with business concerns for repair or rebuilding of equipment.

The commission directed also that it be furnished immediately copies of such contracts now outstanding. Copies of future contracts are to be filed within ten days after they are effected.

All Class I railroads, which operate 90 per cent. of the country's rail mileage, were named in the order. No comment accompanied the action, but since 1922, the year of the national strike of railroad shopworkers, railroad expenditures for performance of work on equipment outside their own shops have been under examination several times by the commission.

The order also touched indirectly upon a situation complained of this week by seventeen equipment construction companies, which told the commission that railroad expenditures inside railroad shops have been unjustifiably high, and asked that railroad accounting on the subject be investigated.

His shop and business, however, were worth $500.

POSTCARD CAMPAIGN FOR PROHIBITION IN GERMANY

BERLIN, July 15.—(AP)—Today 466,000 votes for prohibition the result of a post card campaign were placed on the table in front of the speaker's stand of the Reichstag, by promoters of local option who are seeking the enactment of a law which it is hoped will eventually place Germany in the dry column.

Speed up Anthracite Wage Scale Parleys

Negotiators Have Reached Question Whether Wages Are to Be Increased or Decreased.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 15—(A. P.)—Smarting under charges they had been proceeding too "leisurely," the anthracite scale negotiators moved into full speed today.

Alvan Markle, chairman of the joint sub-committee of twelve, announced that hereafter it "will meet every day at 10 a. m., holding two sessions (instead of one) or more daily."

The committee also waived the expected adjournment of one week which would have accommodated the members of district one attending the district convention at Wilkes-Barre on Monday. Adjournment will be had only from Friday to Tuesday, according to Mr. Markle.

Meanwhile the rival teams of miners and mine owners, which comprise the joint committee, came to grips with the question of wages; whether the men's demand for an increase, or the operators' plea for a decrease, should be incorporated in renewal of the contract which expires August 31. No decision was reached.

The discussion developed charges on the part of operators that miners were restricting output in some circumstances. Miners said this was not so. They said that with miners paid by the ton such restriction would be too much at their own expense. The operators insisted however there were actual cases in parts of district one in the Scranton and Wilkes-Barre fields.

Samuel D. Warriner, President of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation company, replying to an editorial charge that the conference was not making good time and that the operators were "more leisurely" than the miners, said:

"The miners, who in a sense are the plaintiffs in the case, are entitled to an opportunity to take up their demands in order and discuss them. We expect to give them that opportunity but when it comes to a situation where the president goes to Indianapolis on more important business and the vice president, although here, asserts himself while the leaders of the industry are here and in attendance at the meetings, it can hardly be charged that we are leisurely."

Mr. Warriner referred to yesterday's meeting at which substitutes served in places of President John L. Lewis and Vice President Philip Murray.

Philip Murray in taking exception to the Warringer statement said:

"The only recess this wage conference has taken was last week, from Friday to Tuesday and it was asked for by the operators, not the miners."

Mr. Murray said that the miners had had no intention of even asking for adjournment next week. As to the authority his elegation carried in the absence of President Lewis, he said:

"We have scale sub-committee to handle any development that may arise."

A NEW POLITICAL PARTY HAS BEEN ORGANIZED IN SPAIN

BARCELONA, Spain, July 15.—(A. P.)—A new political party has been organized under the name of "The National Regionalist Party," the leaders, members of the monarchic and autonomist. Federations are aiming to bring about a union between the policy of the military directorate and regionalist aspirations. The new party is expected to work independently of the patriotic union sponsored by General Primo De Rivera, head of the military directorate.

Since the advent of the military directorate Spain has virtually been deprived of political parties. The great liberal party has disappeared; the conservatives are split and all the minor parties, the socialists, syndicalists and republicans have been inactive for sometime.

General Primo De Rivera organized the patriotic union in order, as he explained, to develop leaders capable of taking over the reigns of the government when the directorate decided to withdraw.

This is estimated at about $100 and consists of a smashed rear wheel, fender and dented body.

EVICTED FAMILIES MOVE TO NEW TENT CITY

(Special to the Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, July 15.—While hundreds of former operatives of the American Thread Company looked on, the household effects of families of evicted strikers were taken from the company tenements in Lower Village and piled on the sidewalk, by a band of half a dozen men, under Deputy Sheriffs John H. Fitts of Hampton and Frank W. Tillinghast, of Central Village. Two local trucks were secured to remove the furniture to the Tent City on Natchaug street. Eviction warrants issued Wednesday were served on: Joseph Aubin, 235 Main street. Moise Morrisette, 248 Main street; Nelson Chamberland, 241 Main street; Marie Theroux, 230 Main street and William Chalifoux, 264 Main street.

The home of Nelson Chamberland was entered first and the Morrisette home, where there are seven children, came next; so the work proceeded during the day.

There are still thirty-five families living in company tenements, who have either refused to vacate upon order or were unable to secure other tenements in the city. There are four or five families in addition to this number who have been granted extensions until August 17.

The evictions were carried on with officers who patrolled the walks while the furniture was being removed found that their duty consisted merely in keeping open a clear path for pedestrian traffic.

With the evictions under way and no other tenements available about the city the Tented City received its first occupants Wednesday. The strikers set to work arranging personal effects in orderly manner and the history-making first meal in the open many of these people.

AGENT CURTIS DECLARES STRIKE VIRTUALLY ENDED

WILLIMANTIC, July 15.—"The strike at the American Thread Company is over and on this, its seventeenth week, can be put down in full on the pages of history, leaving but a closing chapter for the fate of the employes who entered the controversy," was the strong language in which Don H. Curtis, agent of the local mills of the American Thread Company, voiced his opinion of the situation, when questioned Wednesday. The statement was followed by questions which brought out the answer that the manufacturing mills, No. 4 and No. 2 started in operation Tuesday morning and that there are now approximately 700 operatives at the plant. In addition the one in this city, Agent Curtis stated, that the plants in New York City and at Mt. Kisco, which were started since the local strike, are employing about 250 hands. The company reports that it has been found necessary to temporarily suspend the employment offices at Lowell, Mass., Providence, R. I., and Boston because the application from experienced cotton mill operatives were coming in in numbers too large for present conditions. The company is still suffering from the business depression and is approaching the point where it will offer no further employment at its local mills.

This version of the company's standpoint in the strike would tend to convey a general impression that it considers the strike ended, insomuch as it now employes as many operatives as are wanted at this time, although 700 is about 1500 employes less than the company required to operate the plant in previous years.

The old operatives are meeting as usual every morning to receive words of encouragement and advice from the labor leaders. Horace Riviere has been in this city considerably of late and remains an ever popular speaker.

A special meeting of the board of aldermen has been called for this (Thursday) evening to transact the July business which was to have come up Monday night, when the meeting was postponed due to the lack of a quorum.

TO FAT WOMEN WHO WISH TO SAFELY REDUCE

Beautiful New York Model Tells

HER SECRET

Miss Peg Evans, who is today recognized as one of New York's most beautiful artist's models, tells below of her experience in attaining a figure which everyone admires—ALL FAT WOMEN should read it because it explains how to get slender and possess a beautiful, slim figure without the use of diets—exercises—dangerous drugs or painful reducing garments.

"When I noticed that I was putting on flesh," says this beautiful young lady, "I realized that something had to be done which would take off the excess weight without altering my looks. Diets I knew were too weakening, leaving one wrinkled and old looking after the reducing, exercises had no effect on me, and I had been warned by my physician about dangerous drugs and reducing garments. A friend recommended SAN-GRI-NA with which she, herself had taken off 48 pounds. But before trying it I decided to ask the opinion of a physician-member of my family. He thoroughly investigated SAN-GRI-NA and advised me that it was safe to try it. I used it and by taking only two small tablets a day I am now back to my normal weight. I think SAN-GRI-NA is perfectly wonderful, and why so many fat women choose to remain so now that such a reliable and safe reducer is on the market, I cannot see. I am glad to have my photograph and letter used in connection with this marvelous life saver for FAT PEOPLE."—Peg Evans, N. Y. C.

What this beautiful, young lady says is only one instance of hundreds of similar cases—SAN-GRI-NA does really work wonders and takes off fat safely and quickly when everything else fails! It is recommended by leading physicians and druggists. Dr. Rudolph, former Health Commissioner, advises it, and hundreds of patients who have reduced are every day recommending it to their fat friends.

If you are too fat, be it 10 or 100 pounds, make this simple test! Buy a package of SAN-GRI-NA (do not accept any substitute called just as good, as you will be disappointed). Weigh yourself before starting the treatment, then notice how different you feel and how quick you can take off those rolls of fat—SAN-GRI-NA is guaranteed ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS; not only does it eliminate excess fat but it acts as a general tonic on the system of fat people. SAN-GRI-NA is ideal to relieve high blood pressure, puffing, and do away with that horrid "tired feeling," well known to FAT PEOPLE.

On sale at any good drug or department store. If your druggist does not carry San-Gri-Na in stock he can get it from his wholesaler or you can send a money order or check for $1.50 direct to the Scientific Research Laboratories, 1841 Broadway, N. Y. City.

Now—a One-Profit Car in the Quality Field

STUDEBAKER has achieved one-profit manufacture in the quality field. This marks a new era in the automobile industry. Studebaker's achievement eliminates unnecessary profits running up to $500 on a single car. It banishes double overhead. It results in quantity production of quality cars. It vitally affects pricing by establishing a new criterion of value in the fine car field.

TWENTY-FIVE years ago practically all "manufacturers" of automobiles were nothing more than assemblers. They purchased motors, bodies, tops, axles, etc., from parts makers who were the manufacturers in reality.

On this basis it was easy to become an automobile "manufacturer," and more than five hundred makes of automobiles have had their day in the American market and disappeared. They are represented only by "orphan cars" with practically no resale value.

Notwithstanding this writing on the wall many manufacturers still assemble their product, piling profit upon profit for the ultimate purchaser to pay. Each profit which a maker pays to a body builder or parts supplier enters into his costs just as though he had spent the money for steel or plate glass or upholstery. Although it represents no value he not only passes it on to the purchaser but figures his own profit on top of it.

• • • •

The Ford is a one-profit car and reigns supreme in its field.

In the fine car field Studebaker—and Studebaker alone—now offers the American public one-profit values.

During the past seven years, when demand exceeded supply, Studebaker has been plowing earnings back into plants and machinery until we are now able to make this announcement.

Foundries, stamping mills, machine shops, are now complete. As final links in the chain of one-profit production, the enormous Studebaker body plants have been operating for months at peak capacity. Resources totaling one hundred million dollars are concentrated on the production of this one-profit car.

No other individual manufacturer in the world (except Ford) possesses such facilities for the complete manufacture of automobiles.

That is why Studebaker is able to put finer steel, finer wood, finer upholstery, better workmanship, hundreds of thousands of miles of reserve transportation; into every car—yet keep down the price to you.

This sound manufacturing principle not only holds down price, but it insures a better car regardless of price. The car is not a patchwork, but a unit.

Last year at the New York and Chicago automobile shows four well-known automobile manufacturers exhibited coaches mounted with the same body—a body made from the identical dies, jigs and fixtures. Certainly these manufacturers must have sacrificed engineering advantages in chassis construction to accommodate this "standardized" coach body built by an outside supplier.

Why Studebaker is the "one-profit" car

There are more than 60 makes of passenger cars built in the United States, but very few are manufactured complete in the plants of the producers who sell them.

Only 42 build all their own motors—and one of the 42 is Studebaker.

Of the 42 which claim to make their own motors only 14 make the iron castings, stampings and forgings which go into their motors—and one of the 14 is Studebaker.

Only 5 make all their own bodies and one of the 5 is Studebaker.

Only 2 make all their own motors, bodies, clutches, springs, axles, gear sets, differentials and steering gear. One of these 2 is Studebaker and the other is Ford.

Contrast this with Studebaker, where the entire car is designed and built as a unit—and engineered complete. This construction means (1) longer life—(2) greater comfort in riding—(3) greater freedom from repair expense—(4) greater resale value.

With the advent of this one-profit-one-overhead plan of motor car manufacture, it is folly today to buy a car by the same comparisons you used yesterday. Today you must measure all cars with this "one-profit" Studebaker.

One-fourth of all American passenger cars built today belong in the fine car field—a total of 57 different makes selling above one thousand dollars.

There are 21 Studebaker body styles available on three different chassis. The Standard Six Models, 113-inch wheelbase, 50 h.p. engine, $1125 to $1600 f.o.b. factory. The Special Six Models, 120-inch wheelbase, 65 h.p. engine, $1450 to $2120 f.o.b. factory. And the Big Six Models, 127-inch wheelbase, 75 h.p. engine, $1875 to $2650 f.o.b. factory.

And you may buy your Studebaker today with the assurance that it will not be arbitrarily stigmatized by any act of ours as a "last year's model." Instead of spectacular annual announcements of "new yearly models," Studebaker has adopted the policy of keeping its cars up-to-date in body styles and chassis design every day in the year. Therefore, buy your Studebaker now!

A New Anesthetic

This newly synthesized substance is claimed to be both a local anesthetic and an antiseptic. Chemically it is the normal butyl ester of paraaminobenzoic acid, and is a yellow solid with no odor and a slightly bitter taste. It dissolves in water and organic solvents. An extremely weak aqueous solution flooded into a rabbit's eyes so numbs it that a pencil may be drawn across the cornea without sign of winking for 15 to 20 minutes, after which time the eye recovers its normal condition. The same solution is an effective germ-killer, killing for example, Staphylococcus aureus in 5 minutes.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre.

Mix one reckless young man with a heartless, but beautiful siren. Add a cautious friend who wishes to save the aforementioned youth from himself and stir in a liberal portion of passion, with a pinch of jealousy and a dash of youthful egotism. The result will be a movie.

It is showing at the Breed theatre, where William Fox' "Flames of Desire" opened a two-day run yesterday.

The picture is an adaptation of Ouida's "Strathmore." Denison Clift, the director, had followed the great old romance faithfully in his screen version and the result is an excellent example of entertainment.

Wyndham Standing, as "Strathmore" is the typical reckless lover, who sacrifices friends, money and self respect for the cynical and certain Marion Vavasour, who is portrayed by Diana Miller. She is so beautiful that you don't blame him, half the time. The other half you wonder if some woman of your own acquaintance isn't like that a little bit.

A good cast helps the principals. Richard Thorpe, Frank Leigh, George K. Arthur, Jackie Saunders, Frances Beaumont, Hayford Hobbs, Charles Clary and Engenia Gilbert, have the important parts secondary to Mr. Standing and Miss Miller. There isn't a weak characterization in the lot.

Coming to the Breed.

Richard Barthelmess, who comes to the Breed theatre on Sunday in his newest production, "Soul Fire," has had only two directors in the making of his twelve motion picture dramas for Inspiration Pictures.

John S. Robertson, who directed "Soul Fire," has made seven of Barthelmess' most recent productions. Robertson started the young star in "The Bright Shawl" and continued through "The Fighting Blade," "Twenty-One," "The Enchanted Cottage," "Classmates," "New Toys" and "Soul Fire." These provided Barthelmess with a wide gamut of roles.

Before "The Bright Shawl," Henry King directed Barthelmess. King made the star's highly successful first starring vehicle, "Tol'able David," and directed him in "The Seventh Day," "Sonny," "The Bond Boy" and "Fury."

"Soul Fire" is an adaptation from "Great Music," the stage play.

Broadway Theatre.

This is special inducement day at the popular Broadway theatre, the day on which the management is offering the usual standard program of entertainment and guarantee of a real show. There will be a two-for-one matinee, two people being admitted for 25c and the evening prices will be Orchestra, 35c and the Balcony 25c. The management is looking forward to capacity houses at these prices and we advise you not to pass by this opportunity.

The B. F. Keith Vaudeville scheduled on this program follows: Sis and Buddy Roberts in A Study in Youth. Evelyn Weaver, singing comedienne. William Morrow and Co. in "Sometime, Somewhere." Lew Charlotte and Billy in a comedy singing and musical offering. And last but not least, Loretta and Baltus, "Dainty and Different."

The Paramount picture, "Salome of the Tenements," adapted from the novel by Anzia Yezierska, who wrote "Hungry Hearts," and featuring Jetta Goudal, Godfrey Tearle and Jose Ruben, opens today at the Broadway theatre to remain for three days.

Sidney Olcott, director of "The Green Goddess," "The Humming Bird" and other big screen hits, produced the picture, which tells of a beautiful girl of the slums who sets her mind on bigger and better things and doesn't stop until she has attained her ambition.

Miss Goudal, seen in "Open All Night," plays Sonya Mendel, waif of New York's tenement district, who loves beautiful clothes and longs for the "feel" of romance more than life itself. She marries a multi-millionaire philanthropist in the picture and all ends happily. It has the same universal appeal as "Humoresque," so you know what that means.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Henri L. Baer has set August 9 as the date for the annual field day at the Palisade kennels at East Killingly. This event is expected to bring together from all parts of southern New England hundreds of dog fanciers and owners of police dogs, and in coming they will visit one of the most important kennels in the East—the greatest of all the police dogs kennels. Captain Engerer, noted animal trainer, is coming out from New York, and will have his trained pony and trained police dogs doing unusual stunts for the entertainment of the visitors.

It will not be bad news at all, or anything approximating it, that the state highway construction work that has been under way in Plainfield since early last fall will be so far completed within a week as to allow of uninterrupted passage of traffic. About four miles of splendid concrete highway has been constructed in Plainfield in the contract now nearing completion.

The ashes of Miss Clara B. Stevens, 68, a former resident of Danielson, who died in Glendale, Calif., June 24, arrived in Danielson and will be interred in Westfield cemetery, as announced in the funeral column of The Bulletin, this (Thursday) morning. Miss Stevens for many years lived on Spring street and was of a family long identified with the affairs of Danielson.

Miss Leona Krans, of Hartford, has been appointed to be supervisor of music in the town of Killingly, for the school year beginning in September, Supt. William E. Parker of Killingly schools announced Wednesday. Miss Krans is a graduate of the public schools of Hartford, studied two years at Yale university and two years at the Institute of Music Pedagogy, at Northampton. Miss Krans comes here as successor to Miss Lda M. Dunham. Miss I. Virginia Wakeman, of Westfield, Mass., Supt. Parker also announces has been engaged as a teacher of English and history at Killingly High school, to succeed Miss Edna Shepard who is to study this fall at the University of Wisconsin.

Town Clerk Frank T. Preston has received detailed notice of the regulations passed by the last legislature relative to fishing and hunting licenses. Fishing licenses are to cost $2.75 next year for residents and $5.75 for non-residents. A combination hunting and fishing license for a citizen of Connecticut will cost $3.75, and a similar license for a non-resident will cost $11.25.

Incidentally a button will go with these licenses, and those who have them will be required to wear them when hunting or fishing—as an evidence that they have complied with the law.

BROOKLYN SAVINGS BANK HAS MOST SUCCESSFUL YEAR

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, July 15.—Wednesday afternoon the annual meeting of the corporators of the Brooklyn Savings Bank was held at the banking rooms of the institution. J. Arthur Atwood, president of the bank, presided, and secretary-treasurer, Sidney W. Bard acted as secretary.

The corporators listened to reports showing one of the most successful years in the institution's history, the report prepared and presented by Mr. Bard. During the past year the bank's earnings, above all dividends and expenses, was in excess of $40,000. In the period the deposits of the bank have increased by more than $200,000 and now amount to $4,486,000. During the year $50,000 was added to the surplus fund of the bank, which has nearly 7,000 depositors, representative of all the communities in this corner of the state and more distant points. Figures contained in Secretary Bard's report show that this bank, established in 1872, has handled nearly $15,000,000 in deposits and that it has paid dividends totaling an excess of $2,500,000.

The officers elected were: President, J. Arthur Atwood; vice-president, Frederick A. Jacobs; secretary-treasurer, Sidney W. Bard; assistant treasurer, J. Dyer Potter; trustees, Charles Seagar, George H. Call, Fayette L. Wright, Dr. George M. Burroughs, Frederick E. Bitgood, Ernest R. Warren, Joseph N. Lavallee, Herman M. Walter, Irving W. Davis, Fred W. Tillinghast, Thomas J. Seaton, Edward A. Burnham.

Following the meeting of the corporators there was a meeting of the trustees at which routine business was transacted.

FORTNIGHT DAY OFF FOR CHIEF OF POLICE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, July 15.—The warden and court of burgesses have very graciously decided that it will be well to allow Chief John McFarland, on duty days to have a day off every two weeks, and that Night Officer John Gilbert be given a night off every two weeks, with pay.

Heretofore officers of the borough of Danielson—police officers—have worked steadily, day in and day out, week after week and month after month, with no provision for relaxation from duty, not even on Sundays. In the case of Chief MacFarland, he has worked steadily, without days off and on day and night duty since 1917. This is really a remarkably fine record of devotion to duty.

The officials of the borough also have authorized the installation of a hydrant in Salisbury or Humphrey street—some calling the thoroughfare by one name and some by the other—in accordance with the plans of Chief A. P. Woodward for better fire protection, as outlined in this column Wednesday morning. They also have authorized the appointment of four fire police, these to be selected from the list of special borough police.

At the July meeting of the borough officials, the borough tax collector, Sidney Perry, appeared and made a statement as to tax collections covering the assessments of 1924. Mr. Perry reported uncollected taxes of $775.61. Of this amount collections in the amount of $661.50 will be assured by placing liens on the involved properties. Mr. Perry reported that $137.36 of the uncollected assessments on his lists are impossible of collection—due to errors in making the grand list of the borough, duplicate assessments and for other reasons. These particular items the borough officials voted to abate.

Henry Leche appeared before the meeting to discuss the matter of extinguished street lights. From time to time street lights go out of commission throughout the borough and the borough has had no definite means of checking up this loss of service, which is purchased by the borough at a contract figure for so many lights throughout the year. It was voted to inaugurate a checking-up system that it is anticipated will bring the borough rebates for lights that happen to be out of commission.

It was voted to allow a request of the Girls' club for permission to sell lemonade in Davis park on such evenings as band concerts are given there during the remainder of the summer. The meeting also approved numerous building permit applications and voted to purchase a generator, to be installed in the central fire station for the purpose of charging storage batteries used in connection with the maintenance of the fire alarm telegraph system.

LAMBERT DELMETER DROWNED IN BEACHMONT RESERVOIR

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, July 15.—Lambert Delmeter, 28, was drowned this afternoon in the reservoir above the mills of the Beachmont Worsted company. His home is in North Grosvenordale and he and two young boys of that town were bathing. None of them could swim. He sank without any outcry and without being noticed by his companions. As soon as they realized that he had disappeared they went after help and employes of the Beachmont company searched for two hours before they recovered the body. Delmeter was of rugged build and in normal health.

The body was viewed by Dr. R. C. Paine, medical examiner for the town of Thompson, and was then taken to a Putnam undertaker's. The young man was unmarried.

JOHN BURNS BOUND OVER FOR ALBERT PAJAK'S DEATH

(Special to the Bulletin)

Jewett City, July 15—John Burns, George Cyr and William Liberty, were presented in Judge John T. Barry's Griswold town court, Tuesday morning, by Prosecuting Attorney Richard J. Dudkowski, in connection with the death of Albert Pajak of Slater Hill, which occurred Sunday night, June 15th. They were originally arrested for breach of the peace a month ago.

The evidence presented showed sufficient cause so that Burns was bound over to the next term of the superior court, charged with manslaughter. The cases against Cyr and Liberty were nolled.

Burns is under $5,000 bonds which were furnished by Patrick F. Driscoll.

There were six witnesses for the state, Helne Pajak, a step-daughter of the dead man, Joseph Minoski, Michael Nowakowski, John Scmitka, Officer Henry Vegiarde and Medical Examiner Dr. C. H. Jennings. There was no statement direct from Coroner Jeremiah J. Desmond, of Norwich.

The facts brought out show that Pajak had been drinking that day. That evening he received at somebody's hands a terrible beating. He went to Officer Vegiarde at 9 p. m. that Sunday evening and complained that he had been beaten.

He was given all possible treatment by Dr. C. H. Jennings, but he died at 11:45 that night.

Dr. Jennings performed an autopsy and in his statement declared that he foundthe man's gall bladder ruptured. A rib was splintered and had pierced one lung. The immediate cause of death was given as pneumonia, which it is possible was superinduced by the injuries the man received.

According ot his own testimony, Burns asked Pajak for a drink, but was refused. No one actually saw the blows struck which caused Pajak's death a few hours after they were received. Attorney Thomas M. Shields of Norwich appeared for the defence.

A person found guilty of manslaughter may be fined $1,000 or given 10 years in state prison, or both.

Ages of Fish

How long does a fish live? Major E. S. Fowler in a recent lecture before the London Zoological Society gave some interesting data on a special study he has just conducted on this subject. An electric eel in the London Zoo, it was reported, lived twelve years. A European cat fish in the private aquarium of the duke of Bedford now is 50 years old, and shows little indication of weakness. Other fish age figures given by Major Fowler were as follows: Carp, 17 years; minnow, from 24 years; gold fish, 12 years; whitefish, 20 years, dole, 8 years; sucker, 38 years; herring, 4 years; crucian toad, 11 years; salmon 3 years; brown trout, 6 years; thunder fish, 21 years; bullfrog, 17 years; Natterjack toad, 13 years; tree frog, 14 years; female Spanish newt, 18 years; giant salamander, 52 years. The 12-year-old gold fish was reported authentically from Egypt. The sterlet that lived to the ripe old age of 38 was in the Brighton (England) aquarium. The giant salamander was at the University of Leyden in Holland.

WOMEN KEEP FLOWERS ON BLUESEARD'S GRAVE

Memories of Landru, the French bluebeard, who was convicted of having slain 11 wives and was executed 4 years ago, are very vivid in Paris. Many women believe that he was not guilty and was improperly convicted. He was buried near Versailles, where "unknown admirers" have put over his grave a marble tombstone on which are engraved the words "Henri Desirie."

The grave is seldom without fresh flowers, especially Landru's favorite violets, brought by women who continue to believe in his innocence.

POLLUTED AIR

While much attention is being given to the prevention of the pollution of the water the situation is developing where it is necessary to devote a bit of thought along that same line to the air. Ventilation has always been regarded as being important but that has had to do with inside conditions for the most part. Today it is a case of determining just how harmful the effects of so much exhaust from motor vehicles are in the streets. There isn't any question concerning the monoxide gas in a garage for instance where the doors are shut. Death comes to human beings in a very short time from it, but New York has been testing the air in the streets where automobile traffic is especially heavy and where many people are required to breath it for a considerable period of the day.

Most people know how unwelcome the exhaust of an auto is, and only recently, special tests have been made concerning the fumes of a particular fluid combined with gasoline to make it more efficient, which it is claimed seriously affects the health.

New York's problem doesn't concern that particular fluid but the common exhaust of so many vehicles filling the air in narrow streets and congested areas with poison which many are forced to breath and it desires to know whether the carbon monoxide in the air in such streets is harmful and if so what is necessary to overcome it.

Fresh air is supposed to dilute this poison so that it loses its harmful properties, but the question is whether the saturation is so great that the fresh air fails to get a chance to do its work.

This is a new situation when the automobile, and the steadily increasing number of them, presents. If the decision discloses the air to be so seriously polluted as to be really dangerous then there will be something new to fight, regulate and relieve.

GASOLINE AND FLAMES

It had been supposed that enough people had been burned to death from bringing kerosene or gasoline in contact with flames to educate others to the importance of avoiding such a combination. But every now and then there are those who don't know any better or forget where they are and the story is enacted over again.

What must cause a mild amount of surprise, at least, is the report of a Massachusetts garage owner who so forgot himself, or failed to recognize the danger involved, as to throw a lighted match on the oily floor of his garage. The act didn't cause him his life but he had a close call. He was badly burned in his successful escape and the interior of the garage was wrecked, all of which serves to furnish him that personal experience which a man in his line of business ought not to have required.

There are those who insist upon smoking while machines are being filled, others who are disposed to light a match near the guage on their gasoline tanks and others who throw lighted matches into oily waste or other inflammable material. Perhaps the wonder is that there are not more cases where explosions resulting from such causes do not bring dreams of large property losses. No greater chance taking could be imagined. It is like pouring kerosene on a slow fire to speed it up. Those who get away with it are lucky but the time usually comes when such chance taking has its serious if not fatal results, and then the great cry because something happens which there was every reason to expect.

Those who play with fire cannot expect much sympathy if they get burnt. Those who try to combine lighted matches and gasoline or oil are in much the same class. Those who have anything to do with gasoline should be sufficiently warned against its explosive qualities to recognize the necessity of keeping fire just as far away from it as possible. The Massachusetts garage keeper is lucky indeed that he has a chance to give closer attention to safety provisions in the future.

CAILLAUX COMES BACK

Caillaux is one of the leaders in France who can make claim to having come back. A few years ago it might have been believed impossible. The position he occupies today and the confidence which is expressed in the plans he urges makes it evident that there is no question about it. It is not a case of, can he come back? he is already there.

Caillaux was elected to parliament and then called upon to take the post at the head of the department of finance, not because it was a task without anything to do, but because it was one of the hardest ministries in the cabinet. Dealing with French financial affairs is by no means a honorary position. It requires ability and a thorough knowledge of conditions, it calls for stabilizing the currency, balancing the budget and the adjustment of foreign debts. Caillaux has not only presented a plan for this work but he had been able to get the support of parliament relative to taxation, and this has been followed by a large vote in his favor as a member of the senate. He has steadily climbed the ladder since he began the effort, and he has got his votes of confidence despite plenty of opposition.

Conditions in France have been such that it has not been the easiest kind of a job to deal with the financial problems. Much dependence has been placed upon the reparations for the solution of many problems, but the minister of finance has been able to convince parliament, and therefore the people, that the difficulties could not be met without taxation and he has carried his plans into effect.

There is no question but what France is now headed for a much healthier financial condition. It is grappling with the facts under the leadership of a master who not only knows how to deal with the conditions but is getting the necessary support to put his plans into operation. That is where he towers over others who have tried, and it is all the more surprising inasmuch as he had to overcome the fact that during the war he was found guilty of treasonable relations with the enemy.

BASIS OF ADJUSTMENT

Several of the European countries have given notice that they desire to arrange for the funding of the debts owed this country. In that connection and in anticipation of the fact that these negotiations will be underway during the next several months there is interest in the statement which has been made by Under Secretary Winston of the treasury department to the effect that in the funding of the war debts consideration will be given to the capacity to pay of the respective nations.

That, it will be remembered, was the basis upon which the British debt adjustment was made. It was the policy in connection with the Dawes plan and it is only what might be expected in connection with other debt adjustments.

This would be adhering to the same policy that was pursued in connection with the British even though it should be disclosed that other nations were not able to make their payments within the same period of time fixed in the British arrangement. The capacity to pay of the respective nations takes into consideration the particular conditions which govern each one.

There can be no disposition to collect by making it easy for one and hard for another by stating that payments must all be made by a certain date. What would be reasonable for one would be hard for another. The purpose of this government is to make the adjustment relatively easy to all nations, and the justice of such a plan must seemingly make a favorable impression upon all the debtor nations, even including Great Britain which has already made arrangements and is paying its indebtedness.

TARIFF COMMISSIONERS

Two appointments have been recently made to the tariff commission. Porter J. McCumber of North Dakota and Edgar B. Brossard of Utah are men who have been chosen from the agricultural section of the country. They have been selected by President Coolidge, and the policy which has been followed by the president in the filling of positions has been to select men who are fitted for the particular duties they are expected to discharge.

Mr. McCumber has been a member of the upper house of congress and Mr. Brossard is recognized as a man who is thoroughly versed in political economy. Both are tariff authorities and have been chosen for the purpose of giving strength to the tariff commission.

That commission has been suffering from a condition within its midst which did not permit it to function properly, or to work in harmony with the administration. That has served to handicap its activity and to prevent it from rendering the service that was expected of it. It is not a commission that was expected to work at cross purposes with the administration, but rather in accord with it, inasmuch as the administration represents the sentiments of the people and its aim is to work for their welfare it is to be expected that its tariff commission should do its part. When it is deadlocked or when it balks it is standing in the way of accomplishment. There may be some question as to whether there should be a tariff commission, but as long as there is one it should be in accord with the administration. Otherwise it has been found that it handicaps instead of helps.

WHAT SHE STARTED

"What do you think!" said the girl in the other half of the seat of the spiky roadster which was eating up the miles along the north shore. "Pauline came to see me today, simply bursting with pride because Bob had written a poem about her, and she wanted to read it to me!"

"Did you have to listen?" commiserated the young man, who was playing a game of tag with he other cars.

"Women never listen to things they find bore them," the pretty girl instructed him. "They just smile intelligently and think about something else! But this was quite a nice poem, and Pauline was so upstage about it that it made me mad, especially as I hadn't a thing from you I could show her—"

"I should hope not!" barked the young man, narrowly missing a limousine in his excitement. "The idea of showing around stuff that was written for one person only—"

"Oh, don't worry!" the pretty girl told him distantly. "The notes you write read as though composed by a man who had been sued for breach of promise at least three times! They are as lively as the Congressional Record, and nobody would be the least interested in them! You can't understand how insufferable Pauline was about her poem, and unless you get busy right away and do one for me that is better than Bob's, I'd hate to say what is going to happen to you!"

"Aren't girls the limit!" growled the young man, slowing down a bit. "I believe you are serious! You want one of these pale-lavender effects with a long line to start and little lines dripping down from it that have not any beginning and not especially much ending, and every once in a while a previous line gets itself repeated. I could copy you a poem out of a book if you must have one—"

"Why, you won't even make an effort to do what I ask you!" declared the young woman, with intense indignation. "Then all the nice things you have said to me were merely conversation, and I certainly am glad that this has come up and I have learned in time how casually you regard our engagement! Why, if I had gone on and married you I have no doubt that you would—"

"Whoaaaa!" the young man interrupted her, turning down a side street and stopping. "Let's get this straight—you are really mad because I'm not crazy about bursting into rhyme for you? Don't you realize that I can earn a living; but heaven knows what it would do to my brain if I tried to turn literary! I might never be the same man again. I think it would do just as well if you named my income tax to Pauline instead of flourishing a poem. But if nothing but a poem will heal this breach I'll see what I can do.

"How would something like this: 'A bird sat on the branch of a catalpa tree and he was singing his heart out to thee.' No that limps. Well, try this on your radio: 'Under the starry night I ran up the front steps and rang your doorbell.' There is something about that I like, for a starter. It could be one of those rhymeless, formless concoctions that read as though written by the janitor. I could go on in uneven lines: 'Your father's hat hung on the hatrack, the Pekingese waddled through the door.' "

"Richard!" the pretty girl, who had been staring at him fascinated, finally got out, "the more I consider it the more I believe that a poem won't be at all necessary. I will attend to Pauline some other way. I'm afraid it would be too painful to everybody concerned if you developed your—er—ideas. Heavens, what if you got the habit!"

"Well, you never can tell till you try," the young man assured her, with the light of a venture in his eye. "I'll bet if I worked at it I could lick Bob to a frazzle. It's kind of fun—c'mon home, sis, I can get hold of a pencil and paper! Say, you've started something!"—Exchange.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Effectual Prayer

Mr. Editor: Wonders, seemingly, will never cease. A strangely inconsistent contention of some of the ministry is on hand, as to who will ask God's wise guidance in the case now under trial before a court in Dayton, Tenn.

This contention under the plea of "fair play" as urged by the defense betokens to us a moral misconception of his as to the objects and function designed and embodied in prayer. This reflects, to say it reverently and with mildness, great turpitude on the part of the clergymen named and which we trust is not general among the ministry.

Referring these few men to the proper meaning of prayer, they will find it defined in the "Shorter Catechism," which is standard Presbyterianism and likewise good Biblical theology and it reads: Prayer is the offering up of our desires unto God for things agreeable to his will, in the name of Christ, with confession of our sins, and thankful acknowledgment of his mercy.

Here we see, if one does not get it out of his Bible himself, he can learn that prayer, in a court or even in a church, is something addressed to God and not to the audience although perhaps, the latter may be the form often apparent, and which is seemingly the view held by the clergymen and attorneys in defense. Nothing in the definition assumes coloring prayer with the personal opinion of the petitioner nor does it avail. The prayer is addressed to God and for things agreeable to his will.

Some years ago we read a newspaper skit on a public performance in which the headline described it as "The most eloquent prayer ever delivered before a Boston audience." Prayers of this class, for reasons, may be passed in the case of laymen but from clergymen it is inexcusable: and a little examination and instruction on this point might add to the efficacy of their petitions, if provided, Judge Raulston gives them a chance to open court. He has already had too many irrelevant points to decide in connection with this case. The form laid down to his disciples by the Master, might not be a bad guide for the clergy to follow.

JOHN TROLAND

Norwich, July 15, 1925.

The People of Tennessee

Mr. Editor: Though Mr. Troland agrees with Mr. Montgomery, that I am wrong, does not convince me. Mr. Troland seems to suspect that Mr. Montgomery's 100 per cent. yard stick is a very peculiar one. One which allowed Mr. Montgomery to put in anything that he wants, while eliminating anything or anyone that he does not want. That some of the men that he mentions as 100 per centers, did not or do not regard dollars is very peculiar, to say the least. I don't think Mr. Montgomery talked that way last fall.

I still maintain that I am justified by facts when I claim the inhabitants of Tennessee as 100 per cent. Americans (leaving out the American Indians). I am sure that Tennesseans would be surprised to think that there could be any question about it. These people are direct descendants of the early English, Scotch and Scotch-Irish settlers of Virginia and the Carolinas. Then Mr. Montgomery drags in the Presbyterians, who certainly are in the same class ruled by ancient dogmas and outgrown beliefs. But the bulk of the people who were responsible for this law are Methodists and Baptists. My encyclopedia gives the following facts about Tennessee:

Denominations	Churches	Members
Methodist	2,416	273,643
Baptist	2,141	176,484
Presbyterian	221	21,156
Disciples of Christ	313	41,125
Roman Catholic	60	17,950

These are doubtless not the latest statistics but I think the proportion would not be materially changed.

I reiterate that the intelligent politicians, legislators and teachers (Mr. Montgomery's 100 per centers) were too cowardly to oppose it.

Joseph Wood Krutch, writing in the Nation says, "In Tennessee bigotry is militant and sincere; intelligence is timid and hypocritical, and in that fact lies the explanation of the sorry role which she is playing in contemporary history." How well this might apply to many of us.

He goes on to say, "not even those who voted for the bill wanted it to pass. As a member of the legislature told me, he thought he might as well win the favor of a few fundamentalist constituents by saying "aye" because he felt sure the senate would reject so preposterous a measure." The senate followed the same course of reasoning and passed it on to the governor. The governor said, "They've got their nerve to pass the buck to me when they know I want to be United States senator."

I cannot agree with Mr. Montgomery that argument is useless and has not changed anyone's beliefs in 2,000 years. I can thank two men with whom I worked, in the Boston store, many years ago, for the time which they doubtless thought was wasted in arguing with me. It surely started me thinking. One of them I have since been able to see and to express to him my thanks and appreciation of his efforts.

ALBERT BOARDMAN

Norwich, July 14, 1925.

E. Byron Gallup of Ekonk, an appreciation.

Mr. Editor: On June 18, the friends of E. Byron Gallup gathered at his home on Sterling Hill to honor his memory and to look for the last time upon his wonderful face. It is yet too soon for his friends to forget any of the noble qualities of his really beautiful life. He was for many years a teacher and there are many men and women who are sure that he was the most upstanding man they ever knew and are fortified in this belief by what his life, character and influence has meant and still means to them. By his quiet speech and balanced life he was always an example to those who daily came in contact with him. In the school room he was firmness itself. No scholar was ever permitted to shirk his tasks, nor to in any way forget the purpose for which he came to school. Perhaps the greatest service he rendered his friends was to show them a well balanced life. No matter where you met him there was a brightness in his face and a smile that warmed your heart and drew you to him. He was interested in what you were interested in, and listened with the closest attention until you had finished. He was a pure reverent unselfish man. The longer you knew him the more you were impressed with the effacement of himself from all conversation. He never angled for praise, which cries out so loudly in all men. He never asked for sympathy and would not in any sense brook pity. When near 70 years old he lost sight of one eye. "Yes," he said in reply to the expressed sympathy of a friend, "it is indeed a great loss, and if the other eye goes as the doctor says is possible in sympathy with the last vision of the dead eye, I shall indeed be unfortunate, but I will remember how beautiful the world has always been, and will see the green fields of spring and summer and the golden glory of the autumn and the stern beauty of the snow clad hills, and try not to be a burden to my family, nor a bore to my friends. I have seen many wonderful things in my life and I shall see them always. I have loved work for its own sake, and some of my family think I have gone about it in the most clumsy way; but I got the work done." About his religious struggles he always kept silent. He would often say to his pastor, "That was a very helpful and heartening sermon. It did me good. I will have something to think of all week. I want to thank you." In reply as to why he did not join the Congregational church which he attended the greater part of his life he said: "Mrs. Gallup and the family are members of the Baptist church and the teaching of George Fox is very satisfactory to me. I try not to look always on my own things but to look on the things of others, and help where I can." This was his religion.

It goes without saying, that he was honored and trusted by his friends and fellow-citizens in every walk of life. They believed in his ability and integrity and chose him as their representative in the legislature of the state and as selectman of the town, and as a member of the school board for many years, and when he passed to his reward a great company both young and aged came together to show their love and honor his memory.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Daniel A. Poling, selected to succeed "Father" Clark as president of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, is a resident of Boston. Oregon is his native state and Dallas college his alma mater. Early enlisted in the fight for temperance he soon became prominent in phases of the drive against the saloon as it was fought in the far and mid-west; and in course of time his administrative capacity won him important posts with strong organizations with centers in the east. Thus he became associate president of the Christian Endeavor national organization, president of the National Temperance Council of America and a vice-president of the National Anti-Saloon League. Dr. Poling is a driving, persuasive sort of a propagandist, with much "punch" in his words and acts; and any cause he gets back of moves ahead. During the war he served as chairman of the United Committee on War Temperance activities.

From Small Beginnings

Niels Poulson, the Tobacco Worker, Builder of International Friendship

In 1911, at the age of 68, there died a man who had worked his way up from being a worker in a tobacco factory to being a man of such international prominence that he did much to bring the United States and other nations to closer friendship. At the same time, remembering how he himself had worked his way upward without the advantages of college or special technical training he did an immense amount of work to help boys like himself, who were earnest and who were willing to work hard in order to succeed. That man was Niels Poulson, one of the great iron manufacturers of the United States. It is one of the glories of human nature that when men succeed they wish to do and that they can to help others likewise to mount the ladder of success.

"Who's the boy?" a man in a Danish tobacco factory asked of one of the other workmen, as he pointed at a new boy who had come to the works. "That boy? Oh, his name is Poulson —Niels Poulson. He wanted a job and he got it there." What a contrast in the career from the Niels Poulson of some years later—the president of the Heela Iron Works; the giver of $100,000 to bring about better acquaintance between Denmark, Scandinavia and the United States; the founder of a great school where even the humblest workman might obtain the opportunity to gain an education while he continued his work; the founder of free scholarships in Yale and Harvard and Columbia Universities; the benefactor of institutes of technology so that poor boys might learn science! Look upon and boy who works faithfully, even in a tobacco factory, and you may be looking upon one of the world's greatest benefactions in years to come. The tobacco boy, Niels Poulson, went into other work became interested in material for builders and himself became a builder.

At 21, full of high spirit, he came to the United States and went on with his builder's work. He had made himself an expert, and he had no trouble in finding a position. Then after some years he established an iron works for the making of architectural iron, and his energy and determination made the place a great success. He literally turned iron into gold, and brought together a great fortune. That he expended it for good has already been mentioned. That he thought of poor boys during his life was self-evident. On his death he left his fortune to the purposes of giving education to those who wish it.

Stories That Recall Others

Picking Minces.

Tom, aged five, was not very familiar with mince pie. The other day his mother made one and while eating a piece, he stopped and looked at his mother and asked: "Mother, did you ever see a mince before it was picked?"

Darling Little Eddie.

She was a buxom woman about 30 and was peering out into the darkness about her, behind her and on the ground. "Oh, I am so worried," she said. "Where could darling little Eddie be?"

She was sitting in a group about a bonfire. The others were toasting marshmallows, but she was too worried for that. Mary joined the circle just then and said, "Oh, little Eddie will come back surely. May I look for him?" Mrs. —— gave her offer a rude stare and said, "I guess not."

Up until then Mary had thought that "Little Eddie" was a young child. Now she was convinced that it was a puppy dog and she didn't concern herself further until Mrs. —— said, "If little Eddie should come there won't be any place for him."

Mary wasn't going to offer her chair for any mere dog but she sweetly said, "Why I'll hold Eddie in my lap."

At that instant a tall, nice looking young man, Mrs. —— newly acquired husband, stepped out of the dark and Mrs. —— said, "Oh, my darling little Eddie. I was so worried about you."

Mary made a hasty exit. And "darling little Eddie" had a chair all to himself.

Ears Grow Tired, Too

Science always has maintained that the human ear, unlike the eye, cannot be fatigued, says Popular Science. Now, though, as a result of some interesting experiments with radio apparatus, Prof. Albert Sidney Langfeld, director of the laboratory of experimental psychology at Princeton University, asserts that the ear apparently does become physically tired.

Prof. Langfeld led the sound from oscillating vacuum tubes to headphones that were adjusted until the wearer declared the sounds reached each ear with absolutely equal volume. Then one phone was removed and the hearer required to listen with one ear for a minute. At the end of that time both phones were used again, and invariably the subject reported hearing the sounds more loudly for a time in the ear to which the phone had just been added.

Air Turbine

In a New Jersey meadow tract there is a windmill that rotates on a vertical axis and is known as an air turbine. The blades or sails, made of heavy canvas and brought about automatically come up to the wind edgewise to the sheet.

The sheets are held to the outside of the frame by metal clips that straighten out and release the sheets in an excessive wind. This allows the sheets to rip or blow away entirely, thus leaving the metal frame intact in every part.

Each tier of blades is termed a unit and is calculated to generate five or six horsepower per unit in a 25-mile wind. A system of automatic brakes is installed to regulate the speed of the machinery.

In South Africa messages are signaled by means of drums made of bark, the tappings on which can be heard many miles away. It is by this method that the defeat of Sir Redvers Buller at Colenso was made known to natives sixty miles distant in the space of two hours.

FINANCIAL CONTEST THE OUTCOME OF "RIPPER" BILL

BRIDGEPORT, July 15.—(AP)—Tomorrow will be the first municipal pay day under the "ripper" law regime. Pay checks have not been prepared for thirteen officials and employes and will not be in the cases of twelve of these until the board of apportionment transfers funds from the board of assessors to the tax assessor and makes money available to pay Harry H. Pritchard, clerk of the tax board, City Auditor Walter W. Garrity declared today.

City Attorney A. L. De Laney today ruled that Tax Attorney Edward L. Kelly is not entitled to compensation until he has been sworn in and no official notice that the oath has been administered has yet been received by the auditor. Therefore no check has been drawn for Kelly.

City Attorney De Laney also held that no employe in the tax assessors' office could be paid until the funds are transferred from the old board of assessors. Tax Assessor William F. Connelly, Deputy Tax Assessor Lawrence J. Gill and nine other employeys in the assessors' office are affected.

It is understood the board of apportionment will meet tomorrow afternoon to act on the appropriations in question.

A check was made out today for Howard S. Challenger, tax collector, in the amount of $87.50 for nine days' pay at the rate of $3,500 annually, instead of two weeks' pay at $7,500 per year. He was appointed July 4.

When the tax board acts on appropriations checks will be made out for the "ripper" appointees on the basis of salaries set by the common council, rather than the "ripper" law. Pay will be accepted under protest pending court fight.

Each deposed assessor will receive a check for $9.78, one day's pay for July 1.

WILL GIVE FLAG TO GREENEVILLE PLAYGROUNDS

At the last regular meeting of Clara Barton Tent, No. 7, Daughters of Veterans, which was held with the president, Mrs. Alice Brinkman presiding, it was voted to give an American flag to the Greenville playgrounds as soon as arrangements have been made for erecting the new flag pole. A good amount was received from the members who had been urged to earn $1 each and their recital of the way the money had been earned created much merriment. The next meeting of the tent will be August 18, when it is expected that those who have not responded will turn in their money.

Two mystery packages, one of writing paper and the other containing a string of beads, were awarded respectively to Mrs. Alice Brinkman and Mrs. Cora Botham. A picnic for the tent is one of the future activities to be expected.

Ice cream and wafers were served at the recess in the meeting.

DRIVES FOR HELP WITH ARTERY CUT IN LISBON AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

While working about a headlight on his truck at his home in Lisbon Wednesday afternoon Henry Helm severed an artery in his left wrist. He started to drive to Taftville in search of a doctor to stop the flow of blood but upon reaching the corner of Providence street and Norwich avenue, he lost control of the car and it jumped the curb, coming to a stop against one of the heavy iron benches, near the Lonemah house. Unable to locate a doctor, Mr. Helm was rushed to the W. W. Backus hospital by George W. Weller, Jr., and received attention there that stopped the bleeding. The truck had a broken windshield and bent springs. The bench was broken at the base and was taken away by the repairmen later in the afternoon.

Collision on Curve

A Graham truck owned by Arthur L. and Ernest Smith of Franklin, and used in their milk delivery business, was struck head on Wednesday morning at the curve near Sacred Heart church, Norwich Town, by a Maxwell touring car owned by Joseph Piezzo of 216 Cliff street extension, this city. No one was injured but the Graham truck had a badly damaged front end, dented radiator, broken headlights and crushed mudguards. The Maxwell car was a complete wreck. Constable L. A. Fenton and the state police investigated the accident.

While the state policeman was there making his investigation the driver of the Camp Mowean truck came along with his cutout open. The state policeman stopped him to find out the reason for this violation of the law and then discovered that the man had no operator's license.

Hit Pole and Turned Over

A large touring car driven by its owner, Battista Botinelli, 19 Reed Street, New London, struck a pole and then the stump of a tree on the curve at the brow of the West Thames street hill Wednesday afternoon about 4 o'clock, the force of the blow knocking the automobile over on its side across the trolley track. Botinelli and a man with him in the machine were not injured, but the trolley track was blocked for 15 minutes while a wrecker was summoned to get the automobile out of the way. The machine was taken to a Norwich garage with the steering gear out of order, right mudguard crushed and base probably cracked.

Botinelli was driving towards New London and was reported to have been making high speed up the West Thames street hill from High street. On the curve at the top he cut too close to the right, scraping a pole and hooking into a dead tree stump on the bank a few feet beyond the pole. Rocks, stones and dirt were brought down from the bank into the street, as the machine swung around and lay on its side across the trolley track.

OWNER OF COUNTERFEIT MONEY SHIELDED BY GIRL

HARTFORD, July 15.—(AP)—The owner of a bundle of counterfeit money, who was heard by a 17 year old girl to mention the name of a notorious counterfeiter, is being shielded by the girl and is still in hiding in Connecticut in this vicinity, Divisional Chief Joseph Palma, of the United States secret service, who directed the arrest of eighty in New York today in connection with what secret service men characterize as one of the most extensive counterfeiting plots in the history of the United States.

The girl was arrested when she attempted two weeks ago to pass a counterfeit bill at a local department store. When questioned by local police, together with District Attorney John Buckley, Assistant District Attorney George Cohen, she confessed that she had stolen $200 from a "bundle of money" in a room to which she had access. The occupants, she naively told the officers had talked of various men and among the names she repeated to the authorities of were those of counterfeiters long known to secret service men.

Although the office of the district attorney here believes the girl to be innocent, she is being investigated by James Callaghan, of Providence, head of the secret service for this district, according to Divisional Chief Palma. Federal authorities say the person named by the girl as having possession of the money from which she stole has not been connected by them with any counterfeiting so far, and Division Chief Palma amplified this by expressing the opinion that the girl was shielding someone, the real owner of the money, whom he believes to be in this vicinity.

INFORMATION ON PLANTING TO VEGETABLE GROWERS

Information relative to planting and what is best to plant this year was given to Norwich vegetable growers Wednesday night, when Albert E. Wilkinson of the Connecticut Agricultural College, vegetable extension department, spoke on Vegetables and Proper Growing, at a meeting held in the office of the New London County Farm bureau in the Shannon building.

Mr. Wilkinson's talk was given with the use of slides which showed farmers costs of labor and income and he also mentioned crop prospects from various states. Among the vegetables mentioned were potatoes and Mr. Wilkinson informed his audience that New Jersey would be 6,000,000 bushels short this year, the crop in that state being about 5,000,000 bushels instead of 11,000,000. Maine is reporting 10,000,000 bushels less than last year and the figure will likely be doubled.

Less celery is being planted in New York state than in past years as the farmers have gone into lettuce growing, some 6,000 acres being devoted to lettuce, it is said. There is an increase in lettuce of about 15 per cent. in the northeastern states of the United States. Celery and late cabbage are therefore good things to raise. Cauliflower is also scarce this year, fewer plants having been set out than ever before.

Onions are showing a big increase in the country and the crop is in perfect condition. This outside yield will not affect Connecticut growers before the middle of August or first of September, said Mr. Wilkinson.

Other crops were mentioned but the speaker laid special emphasis on reasons for growing potatoes, celery and late cabbage, taking the view that decrease in crops and lack of planting will give local growers a better opportunity to realize on their yield.

A general discussion of vegetable growing and costs of labor followed the illustrated talk.

LONG DISTANCE HIKER GOES THROUGH NORWICH

Bronzed and looking entirely fit for the life he most enjoys, John Moon, long distance hiker, of Moosick Falls, N. Y., arrived in Norwich and stopped at The Bulletin office at 5:20 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, having made the hike from five miles above Colchester during the day, passing through New London and then coming up the west side of the river, a distance for the day of about 43 miles.

After a brief stop at The Bulletin office to have his official time registered, Mr. Moon started out in hopes to make Jewett City before dark, thus making approximately 50 miles in one day's hiking, one of the longest hikes he has ever made, his longest hike previously being 46 miles in one day.

Mr. Moon began his hike from Troy, N. Y., leaving that city on Saturday, June 11, at 10:30 o'clock from Franklin square. During his hike he has passed through Troy, Pittsfield, Great Barrington, Hartford, New London and thence to Norwich, other smaller places being visited along the route. Leaving Norwich the hiker will go to Jewett City, through to Putnam, then to Worcester, Boston, Keene, N. H., Rutland, Vt., Bellows Falls, N. Y., and back to Troy, N. Y. The distance on the trip is nearly 600 miles.

Mr. Moon averages about 35 miles a day in his hiking but his longest hike was from Worcester to Boston, a distance of 46 miles, made from 7:30 a. m. to 5:27 p. m. Two inches of ice covered the road on this trip and at one time between Danielson and Dedham the hiker was held up by the girl bandit and robbed of money and a diamond ring.

The longest hike Mr. Moon ever made was last winter, when he walked from Bennington, Vt., to Oakland, Calif., a distance of 3,111 miles by way of the Lincoln highway. On June 6 of this year he hiked from Troy, N. Y., to Cave City, a distance of 1,050 miles. The trip home was by train and a few days later he started on the hike which brought him to Norwich. Mr. Moon has been hiking for nine years and has probably covered thousands of miles in his walking.

He accepts no rides or gifts while hiking and starts his trip with but one dollar. All expenses are met as he goes along and in every city he purchases a savings stamp.

Speaking of the hospitality of people, Mr. Moon stated that he has never been refused shelter for the night wherever he stops his day's hiking.

BIBLE STUDY CLASS CONTINUES AT Y. M. C. A.

Even though the weather is warm, the interest in the Bible Study at the local Y. M. C. A. continues unabated. Wednesday evening the topic was "Jesus with an audience of one," the scripture used was the story of Christ and the woman at the well. The discussion was full of interest and among others the following points were brought out: John the Baptist had won many disciples and when Jesus came upon the scene, some of his disciples left to follow the Christ, but John was big enough to recognize his superior, and said, "He must increase but I must decrease."

On account of the rather embarrassing conditions in Judea, Jesus left for Galilee, and in due time reached Samaria, where at high noon, he and his disciples arrived, and while the disciples went to town to buy food there came a woman of Samaria to draw water, she was not a high type of woman, but Jesus saw an opportunity to help her, and he broke over all custom in order to serve even one so low. She could not understand Jesus, failing to see anything but the material. It has always been difficult to lead men to lessen their interest in material things in order to become more interested in spiritual things. Jesus method of dealing with this woman is really a good suggestion in salesmanship; he started at the right point by asking her for a drink of water and when she expressed surprise that he should condescend to thus deal with her, Jesus took advantage of the opportunity to continue the discussion, and he became as it were, a dual Christ, one moment, weary and tired and thirsty he was asking for a drink of physical water, and the next moment he was offering her the spiritual water for her soul's hunger.

In a large sense Jesus knew no social distinctions, that is, he was here to serve and serve he did wherever it carried him, and the man who pretends to follow him must follow his example. Jesus led the woman gently along until she hurried to the town and looked up her friends and said, "come see a man that told me all things that I ever did; is not this the Christ." Jesus probably never preached a stronger sermon than to this one poor woman, and his words had wonderful effect.

JUDGE BROWN SUPPORTS COMPENSATION FINDING

James Cormican's compensation case has proceeded another step and Mr. Cormican has won a decision from Judge Brown of the superior court this week. James Cormican is the actor who a few years ago headed the Cormican Players, favorites in New Britain, and later on Mr. Cormican by an unusual run of circumstances became manager of the Hotel Bronson in New Britain and that is why there is a compensation case.

Mr. Cormican was a close friend of the late Patrick S. McMahon, theatre owner and also owner of the Hotel Bronson, and after Mr. McMahon's funeral in early 1923, Mr. Cormican stayed on as a guest at the hotel until James Murphy, the manager, who was paid $15 a week and his board, severed his connection, April 20, 1923. It has been found that McMahon's widow and children invited Cormican to assume the duties of running the hotel, but salary was not mentioned at that time. Then on June 4, while carrying a boy away from the vicinity of the refrigerator Cormican fell through an open doorway and sustained a compound fracture of his right leg. He was laid up for many months and he claimed compensation from Mrs. Margaret McMahon, but curiously enough he first brought suit in January, 1924, against the New Britain Trust company, as operator of the hotel, alleging that he was a guest of the place when he was hurt.

Mr. Cormican has been having some experience trying to get the compensation—$585.57—which was awarded to him on July 18, 1924, it being at the rate of $15 a week up to February 29, 1924.

Mrs. McMahon appealed to superior court, where on Dec. 23, 1924, Judge Jennings affirmed the award and dismissed her appeal. Then she appealed to the supreme court, which on April 3 of this year sent the case back to the compensation commissioner for a rehearing to find out whether Cormican's injury was the result of horseplay or work done in the course of his employment. The commissioner found that food had been missed from the refrigerator some two weeks before Cormican's injury and that his experience with the boy was with the desire to protect Mrs. McMahon's property, was not due to horse play of skylarking but the injuries arose out of and in the course of his employment.

And then Mr. Cormican did not get his award. Mrs. McMahon appealed again to the superior court, her lawyer, contending that the subordinate facts found by the commissioner did not support the conclusion which he arrived at and on which he based the award. In Judge Brown's opinion the commissioner's supplementary findings supply the facts called for by the court. Possibly the case will be carried up there again to find out whether they did or not.

GIRL DISAPPEARS AT NEW LONDON STATION

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 15—The police this forenoon were requested by Charles C. Showalter, chief petty officer attached to the U. S. S. 21, stationed at the submarine base, to make a search for his daughter, Irene, who disappeared at the union station this forenoon in a mysterious manner. The girl is described as being 13, about five feet, six inches in height, slim, has black hair and wore a lavender voile dress, orange colored coat, white leather hat. The girl and her sister, together with her parents went to the union station about 10.45 o'clock, where Showalter purchased tickets that would provide transportation for himself and family to Chicago Heights, Ill., and it was intended that the family board the 11.06 o'clock train. While awaiting the arrival of the train Irene made an excuse for leaving her parents and sister and when she failed to return a search of the station and the depot platform failed to locate the girl. It was then that the police were asked to institute a search for her. When the girl disappeared she was without funds.

Showalter requested the authorities to notify Mrs. George Richmond, 361 West Main street, Norwich, if the girl was located.

Girl Found in This City

Word that the girl was missing in New London was conveyed to the Norwich police in the afternoon and a watch was set for her in the early evening. It was learned by the police that she was in the city and that she was to go out for a motorcycle ride with a boy friend. Capt. Thomas Murphy posted Officer Patrick Murphy to watch a house on Summit street occupied by the Zalinski family, where Irene had girl friends. His watch was rewarded by seeing her come out of the house and he at once took her in charge and brought her to the woman's room at police headquarters where he detained her until her grandmother, Mrs. Richmond, could come after her.

The girl's name is Irene Savage the navy man being her stepfather. She told the police that she got to Norwich through the kindliness of a taxi driver who gave her a ride from New London.

SICK WOMEN ATTENTION!

Read this Remarkable Testimony Regarding Results from Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Norfolk, Virginia. — "If you only knew how many women and girls have taken your medicine by hearing my testimony, it would seem wonderful to you. Every day and every chance I have I advise some one to try it. It was in June, 1904, when I had given up over getting well, that I wrote to you. My husband went to the drug-store and brought the Vegetable Compound home to me. In a few days I began to improve and I have often taken it since. I am now passing through the Change of Life and still stick by it and am enjoying wonderful health. When I first started with your medicines I was a mere shadow. My health seemed to be gone. The last doctor I had said he would give me no more local treatments unless I went to the hospital and was operated on. That was when I gave the doctors up. Now I am a healthy robust woman. I wish I could tell the world what a wonderful medicine Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is." — Mrs. J. A. JONES, 317 Colley Avenue, Norfolk, Virginia.

COURTLAND WHITNEY TO BE FOOTBALL COACH AT NORWICH FREE ACADEMY

Courtland Whitney, a local boy and a graduate of the Norwich Free Academy, returns to the local Academy this fall as coach of the football squad and also will become a member of the faculty. Whitney succeeds William Aitken who has resigned from the faculty.

Whitney has been a student at Middlebury college playing both football and baseball on the varsity team and was one of the mainstays of the team last year. Whitney is an all-around good athlete and his work against Harvard last year marked him as one of the leading backfield men among the smaller colleges. He was a drop-kicker and punter of no mean ability, doing the greater part of the punting in the game against Harvard in which he showed even better than Harvard's star man.

While at the Academy Whitney was a star athlete, playing both baseball and football. On the baseball team he played third base and on the football squad was quarterback, being one of the snappiest signal callers ever turned out at the local school.

With his knowledge of football and with the material that is at the Academy this fall it is expected that he will be able to turn out a team that will capture the football honors of the eastern part of the state. He is very popular locally and will be given the undivided support of the followers of the Academy football teams. In baseball he will be a valuable assistant to Coach Earl Brigham and with two good men directing the baseball squad next year much is expected in this department of athletics.

ROSEDALES BEAT TIGERS IN PITCHING BATTLE

Wednesday saw two well matched twirlers pit their all in a superb seven inning duel, last night, at the Academy Campus, the much-favored Tigers accepted the less pleasant portion of a 2-0 score. Krass and Edwards, the rival pitchers certainly had the "hole" high sign written on their respective pills as the forlorn five hits attest.

The game was featured by its snappy play and fast fielding, although the seven errors "chalked up" might lead one to the opposite belief.

In the future, if it is convenient for the faculty members of the Twi league, any efforts at promptness in arriving at N. F. A. campus would be appreciated. It is realized that, for some people, absent-mindedness is a drawback and for others, the intricacies of Daylight Saving are hard to fathom, nevertheless the face remains that Junior Twi games are scheduled to start at 6:30 p. m. D. S. T.

TILDEN EASILY WINS FOURTH ROUND MATCH

ST. LOUIS, July 15.—(AP)—William T. Tilden, second of Philadelphia, defending champion, easily won his fourth round match in the National Clay Court tennis championship today by defeating Louis Thalheimer of Dallas in straight sets. The score was 6-3, 6-1, 6-4.

Harvey Snodgrass of Los Angeles, who ranks number six among United States players, lost the first set to Fred Jostle of St. Louis, but took the next three sets handily. The score was 4-6, 6-2, 6-1, 6-1.

Howard Kinsey of San Francisco, number four ranking player, defeated Karl Kammap, St. Louis, 6-2, 6-4, 6-4.

MISS WILLS WINS HER MATCH VERY EASILY

BROOKLINE, Mass., July 15—Developments in the 33rd annual Longwood bowl men's singles tournament were overshadowed today by a girl out of the golden west. Competing in her first eastern tournament of this summer on her fifth annual visit to the Atlantic seaboard, 19 year old Helen Wills of Berkeley, California, easily defeated Mrs. Charles J. Hubbard, the local player who as Anna Fuller was runner up for the national indoor singles title here last March.

The seeded teams moved along in the Longwood doubles without much undue excitement.

The six other remaining seeded players gained brackets in the round before the semi-finals and will begin to meet tomorrow. Gerald L. Patterson of Australia, top seeded foreigner, appeared satisfied to coast along in his match with Sidney L. Beals, for he dropped ten games to the Longwood man. On Thursday afternoon Patterson will oppose Frederick Siercer of Bethlehem, Pa., winner of this tournament a year ago. Mercur played his best tennis of the week in blasting the aspirations of Clifton Haynes from Baylor University.

The Mercur-Patterson match will determine whether the highest seeded American or foreigner will gain the semi-final round.

Zenzo Shimizu played tennis of a dazzling type in vanquishing Josiah Wheelwright of Longwood. The Japanese Davis cup captain tomorrow will play F. L. Luce, Jr., Massachusetts junior champion, who seemed hopelessly beaten when he trailed Karl g. Pfaffman, 2-5 in games and 15-40 in points in the third set, yet gathered himself to take three sets in a row. Pfaffman it was who defeated Cranston Holman of Sanford University, a seeded player on the opening day.

Arnold Jones, the Yale captain, Jack Hawes, left handed Australian; Carl Fischer and Takechi Harada of Japan are the survivors in the lower half.

Today's doubles play marked the first appearance of two Davis cup combinations which may figure in the American zone final. These were Patterson and Hawkes of Australia and the newly formed Japanese team of Shimizu and Harada. Patterson is playing more keenly than last year and is serving with terrific velocity.

DONOHUE HEARS MANY SUGGESTIONS ON BOXING

NEW HAVEN, July 15—(A. P.)—Many suggestions and complaints were poured into the ears of Thomas E. Donohue, state boxing commissioner, here today at the meeting of fans, promoters, managers, sport writers, referees and announcers, which he had called. Miss E. M. McLaughlin, the commissioner's secretary, took copious notes, and from the mass presented Mr. Donohue expects to wield a new set of rules and regulations which will govern boxing and wrestling in Connecticut. In addition to the suggestions given here today, the commissioner will consider the rules and regulations of other states.

Izzy Winters, Yale wrestling coach, opened the informal discussion, with an argument in favor of the two-judges system which is in force in some states. Under this system a vote of the two judges and a referee decides the contest. The Yale coach also suggested that the doctor's decision on whether a man was physically fit to enter the ring, should not be final, but that someone familiar with training conditions should also be consulted.

Lou Brown, local manager, and George Mulligan, Waterbury promoter, discussed the "poor manager" who also gets the short end of the gate receipts. Mr. Mulligan then reviewed his efforts to match Kid Kaplan and Babe Herman for the world's featherweight championship.

One suggestion made was that the commissioner should issue permanent passes which would be good for all bouts.

CUBS TAKE SHORT GAME FROM PHILLIES

PHILADELPHIA, July 15.—(AP)—The Chicago Cubs opened a four-game series here today with an 8 to 3 victory. A heavy rain forced the calling of the game in the seventh inning just as the Cubs finished their turn at bat and the score reverting to the sixth inning robbed Tom Griffith of a home run. MacFARLANE WITHDRAWS FROM METRO OPEN TOURNEY

NEW YORK, July 15.—(AP)—Withdrawal of Willie MacFarlane from the Metropolitan open golf championship starting tomorrow over the Grassy Sprain course at Bronxville, N. Y., today made Johnny Farrell of Quaker Ridge, the favorite.

MacFarlane wired that his hands had become so blistered he would be unable to compete.

An anticipated post entry from Walter Hagen also failed to arrive today, while MacDonald Smith will be missing. An abundance of good golf remains, however, in the field of 170.

BARNES WINS LAST MATCH IN ENGLAND

ST. ALBANS, England, July 15.—(AP)—Jim Barnes's farewell appearance before leaving for America with the British open championship cup was made today when paired with Abe Mitchell. The Anglo-American pair defeated A. E. V. Compston and Ted Ray one up in a 36-hole exhibition match.

Ray, putting in a touch almost magical in its accuracy, had an approximate score of 67 for the afternoon round, or five below par.

POWER TEAM SLUGGERS POUND OUT EASY VICTORY OVER YANTIC TEAM

In another heavy-hitting contest, the Eastern Connecticut Power Company defeated Yantic, Wednesday evening 12 to 5. The large crowd that was present witnessed more hitting of the extra-base variety in last night's battle than in any other game thus far. Twenty-two hits were made in all, the E. C. P. outhitting their rivals in this respect by 15 to 7, while the batsmen fattened their averages to the extent of nine doubles, one triple and a home run.

Tillie Daniels, star Bulkeley High school twirler, started in the box for Yantic and during his stay on the mound was hit unmercifully. Although he escaped in the first without any scoring, the E. C. P. launched a terrific attack in the second and drove Tillie from the mound when they hit him for seven hits and nine runs. In justice to Daniels however, it should be stated that he came into the game cold which might have had something to do with his ineffectiveness. Steve Posick relieved Daniels, and although not hit quite as hard, he was no puzzle to the Power Company's hitters who made their remaining three runs off his delivery.

Tommy Simcox pitched for the E. C. P. and was hit hard at times. He allowed seven hits, six of which were for extra bases, but considering the way his mates were hitting the ball, Tommy hurled plenty good enough to come out ahead.

After wasting two hits in the first, the E. C. P. went after Daniels in the second and drove him from the mound. With one out Ringland shot a double to left. Cormier singled to the same field, stole second and both he and Ringland scored on Simcox's hit to center for a base. Both Whitney and H. Hull walked and the bases were filled. Davis kept up the attack with another single, and Whitney and Simcox counted. Davis going to second on the play on Whitney at the plate. Chick Stanley singled to left and Jack Clabby doubled to the same sector and two more runs came in. Joe Hull came through with the seventh hit of the inning, scoring Clabby. At this point, Steve singled to left, scoring Hull. Posick then fanned Cormier and Whitney and the massacre was over for a short time at least.

Yantic, in their half of the second showed the fans that they likewise could sock the old apple when they tallied four times on doubles by Couillard and McKiernan, a triple by Daniels, and an error by Stanley, in the next frame, the team from uptown revived interest in the game by counting twice more. Smith singled to left as a starter, and both he and McKiernan scored when the latter hit over the left field fence for the circuit. The blow of McKiernan's was a terrific clout and would have been good for a homer on any field.

There was no more scoring until the fifth when the E. C. P. brought the score up to 12 to 6 which was the final count. In this stanza, Whitney's double and Stanley's single, sandwitched in between a couple of infield errors were good for three runs.

In winning last night's game the Power nine proved themselves to be about the heaviest hitting team in the league, and with such hitters as Clabby, Stanley, Davis and Ringland will make a lot of trouble for the opposing twirlers before the season is over. Stanley led the E. C. P. at the bat, with two doubles, and a single out of four attempts while Davis was close behind with three singles out of the same number of trips to the plate. For Yantic, McKiernan in addition to his home-run, also made a two-bagger, while Couillard hit Simcox for two doubles out of three attempts. The score:

Tonight's Game.

The boys continued to fatten their batting averages last night at the E. C. P. and Yantic game, piling hit after hit into the swamp and when the dust had settled the Power Co. team had piled up 12 runs to Yantic's 6. To appreciate the game one had to be present as it sure was a wild game from beginning to end. Those E. C. P. boys are sure playing great ball, hitting hard and fielding well and the way they lineup now, look like the best team in the league. Not only do they play good ball but clean ball and every minute that they are on the field they act like real gentlemen, which has won for them the approval of the fans and it would be a great thing for the league if the other teams would follow in their footsteps.

Tonight the fans will have a chance to see Mgr. Oney's St. Joseph team perform in their drive from the cellar to the top of the league against the East Ends. Oney's team in the last week has been transformed from the weakest team in the league to one of the strongest now on the field and it would be no surprise if tonight they bowled the East Ends out of their path to the top. In "Spike" Liberty, who last week allowed the Nuggets only two scattered hits, "Toney" West of the State Hospital, who last year performed in the International league for Baltimore, and Zemke, the old timer from the Hospital, the Saints have about the strongest pitching staff in the league. As tonight's game is considered a real hard one, Mgr. Oney will in all probability start "Toney" West, but that may not mean a thing as the boys are all hitting hard and in three games this week have driven five of the leading pitchers in the league from the box, including "Tillie" Daniels, Johnny Greene, "Speed" Gaudette, "Buck" Shahan and "Zip" Gere and perhaps after tonight the list may be increased a bit. The remainder of the Saints' lineup includes Allard of the State Hospital, Nap Liberty and Ed. Clair of Ashland, "Dinty" Moore of the State Hospital, Bush and Koslowski. This aggregation represents a world of power and should break many a pitcher's heart during the remainder of the season.

The East Ends have a real good team but have been followed by a jinx all through the season and will try hard to chase it tonight. In their lineup they have Bill Austin, who is leading the league in hitting, Harry Noel who is second and Jimmy Murphy, Normandin and Harry Mills, who are close to the top. The East Ends stand third in team averages which proves that the old breaks are against them. In their last game against the Centrals, Harry Mills wasn't up to true form owing to a split finger which since then has gotten better and tonight it wouldn't be a bit surprising if Harry turned in a good game.

The East Ends will lineup as follows: White, c; Mills, p; Coughlin, 1b; Murphy, 2b; Normandin, ss; Leonard, 3b, and Noel, Duffy, Gaudette and Bill Austin in the outfield. These boys are all good and if they get half the breaks tonight will make a strong bid for the game.

NATIONAL OWNERS DECIDE TO RETAIN LIVELY BALL

NEW YORK, July 15—(A. P.)—Decision to continue use of the so-called lively baseball and the unanimous ratification of the advisory council's amendment to the world's series rules which provides for including fourth places teams as participants in the players' share of the world series receipts were of the chief transactions at the national league meeting here at the National League meeting here today.

Action to retain the present ball was decided upon after Professor Harold A. Fales of Columbia University reported on the chemical analysis of the ball. President Julian Curtis of the A. G. Spaulding Co., which manufactures the ball, said that the ball is the same as the one used before 1914 with the exception of a better grade of material.

In regards to the world's series receipts, such distribution calls for a reduction of the player's shares from 75 to 70 per cent. of the players' pool. The new rule would give the teams finishing second and third exactly the same proportion as they have received heretofore, the five per cent. taken from the world's series teams going to the fourth place teams. Figures for the last five years showed that under the new plan of distribution, a single winning player's share would be reduced approximately $350 and a single losing player's share $250.

Every club, with the exception of Philadelphia was represented at the meeting.

LEFTY DUGAS BLANKS GEER'S ALL-STARS WITH 6 HITS

With Lefty Dugas in the box, the Taftville A. A. team defeated Geer's All-Stars, 9 to 0, in a six-inning game at the Providence street grounds, last evening. Dugas was in good form, keeping the six hits well scattered and striking out six of the opposing hitters. Murphy yielded 11 hits which came behind errors. To Dugas goes practically all the credit of winning and all who have seen this boy pitch predict a great future for him. He is not only a star boxman but can hit and play the outfield well. TIN TOYS IN NEW LONDON COURT ILLUSTRATE AUTOMOBILE COLLISION

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 15—Freida Wallace, wife of a chief petty officer, was prosecuted for reckless driving of an automobile, when last Friday, she ran into a Hudson coach operated by Henry B. Lee, on Montauk avenue and left the latter car in a condition for a repair shop. Lee was buried in the wreck, but he escaped with cuts on the forehead. Originally Mrs. Wallace was prosecuted for operating a car without a license, for she did not possess that necessary paper when the crash occurred. Then it was represented to the prosecutor by some policeman that Mr. Lee did not desire the prosecution of the woman for recklessness. That statement was denied by Lee, as soon as he got about and the second arrest followed. Today there was a demonstration of the manner in which the collision occurred, for tin autos and a tin trolley car were brought in to the court and exhibited on a table in front of the judge's bench all the details of the case were gone into. Eleven witnesses were called. They were residents near the location of the collision and either witnessed the collision or heard the sound of the crash and went to see what had occurred. Lee said his machine was damaged to the extent of $800. He said he upbraided Mrs. Wallace when the smash came by asking her why she was driving so fast, and that she replied that she was not going at a fast pace, as her car was only in second gear. Then Lee asked her why she was over on the left side of the road and she replied that someone told her "to step on it." The substance of the testimony was that the trolley car obstructed the vision of Mrs. Wallace till her car showed out by the trolley and that then she could not avoid the collision. Mrs. Wallace was driving the car, an Overland, and beside her was Florence Flobert, a portly woman. In Mrs Flobert's lap was another woman, and there were four children in the rear of the Wallace car. Mrs. Wallace admitted that she came up School street from Pequot avenue and that she did not reduce the speed of her car as she crossed Montauk avenue. She said she did not see the Lee car at all. The toy autos and the tin trolley car were used with good effect to demonstrate what occurred and coins were made use in show the persons who left the trolley car when it stopped to discharge passengers. The witnesses were, besides Mr. Lee and Mrs. Wallace, George Bannigan, George S. Gadbois, Policeman Ray, Graham Keeney, Walter Keany, Frank Highmore, Frank Bentley, Harry Crowell, Florence Flobert and Petty Officer Wallace. Mrs. Dixon wanted to tell what she knows about the accident, but she is ill and the case went over to get her into court next Wednesday.

Charles Schuman was fined $5 for parking his car on the east side of Bank street for more than an hour. He said he saw there were customers in his store and he left the car that he might wait on them. As he had been three times before been warned not to leave the machine where he did, Police Prince fined him, deeming that there was no excuse for his defiance of the ordinance.

Carl Smith, a porter at the Griswold was charged with intoxication. He said he had a bad cold and took a drink to get relief. He didn't know what he drank, he said, but it floored him. He drew a suspension of judgment, as he had never been in the court until today.

New London hasn't yet got in the competition of competing with New York in the matter of electric signs, but it is striving that way. Immense signs are being erected at various points on the principal business streets and two more are to come to tell all who pass that there are first class restaurants in the city.

Contributions for the Near East are being solicited in this city where it is hoped to raise $4,000, but there must be a speeding up if the hopes of the promoters of the plan are realized.

Both licenses were suspended some time ago, the former following conviction in the police court of a charge of reckless driving.

An automobile owned and driven by A. G. Descoteaux, 1 Oak street, Saco, Me., was struck by an automobile bearing New York registration, 6K-32-92, this morning, on the New London approach to the Thames river highway bridge. When Descoteaux requested the driver of the colliding machine to show his operator's license and registration, the driver refused to do so and drove his machine away. Descoteaux's car was slightly damaged.

Mrs. George H. Goldthwaite, 69 West Main street, lodged complaint with the police late this afternoon that a dog owned by Mrs. George E. Beebe, 38 Hempstead street, attacked her today night and fastened its teeth on her leg. The complaint was referred to Dog Warden John Sweezy for investigation.

Huntley, 61 Franklin street, lodged a complaint with the police this evening that a pocketbook containing $34 was either stolen from her room last night or else she lost it in her travels about the city, although Miss Huntley was reasonably positive she placed the pocketbook on a bureau, when she returned home last evening. The police are inclined to the belief that the woman lost the money about the streets.

Miss Helen H. Dunbar, 1501 Beacon street, Brookline, Mass., and 584 Montauk avenue, this city, complained to the police this evening that while her automobile was parked at Ocean Beach earlier in the day, a car owned and driven by Fernando Zeppieri, of Groton, backed against the former machine and damaged it.

STOLEN MONEY ORDERS HELP DEFRAUD TWO MERCHANTS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 15—It developed today that a sleek crook who operated in New London a few days ago, negotiated two stolen money orders on merchants, each merchant being victimized out of $50. The revealing of the fraud resulted this morning when the two money orders were returned to the merchants as being a portion of a quantity of blanks stolen several weeks ago from the post office, at Jamaica, N. Y. At the time of the robbery of the Jamaica post office, the New London police received the information, together with the serial number of the blanks.

The crook, who represented himself as "U. Grant," which name were endorsed on the orders, visited two stores and purchased a small order of furnishings, thendering the money orders in payment of the goods and receiving the difference between the purchase price and face of the order in cash. When the fraud was revealed today the post office officials here were notified and an inspector from Boston is expected to reach here to endeavor to obtain clues that may lead to the arrest of the crook.

MISSING GALES FERRY YOUTH SOUGHT BY RELATIVES

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 15—Believing that his brother-in-law, Durwood Maynard, of Gales Ferry, might be in New London and in company of an element that would not be for the good morals of the youth, Gerard Prince, also of Gales Ferry, appeared at the police station today and requested the police to maintain a lookout for Maynard. The latter is but 16 years and disappeared from his home a week ago. Since that time his relatives have had no knowledge of his movements. When Maynard disappeared he wore khaki clothes and a gray cap. He is described as being about 5½ feet, eight inches in height, medium build, chestnut hair and blue eyes.

LIQUOR THROWN OVERBOARD BY RUM-RUNNING CREW

NEW LONDON, July 15—Speed launch G-214, belonging in Providence, and with two men, Leif Nelson and Edward Scanlon, of Providence, comprising her crew, were captured in Block Island sound this morning, by the crew of one of the patrol boats of the local section base of the United States Coast Guard. While the two men are charged with violation of the prohibition laws, no liquor was found aboard the craft for the whiskey was thrown overboard before the speed craft was halted by gun fire.

The patrol boat was scouring the New England coast early this morning and when a short distance east of Block Island the launch was observed proceeding eastward and from the direction where a rum-supply ship is at anchor. The patrol boat gave chase to the launch, but because of the speed of the latter craft, the G-214 could not be overtaken. Finally a couple of shots were fired at the fleeing boat and at the same time Nelson and Scanlon started throwing the liquor cargo into the Sound. When this task had been accomplished, the launch was brought to a stop and with the arrival of the patrol boat alongside, the rum-runner and her crew were taken in charge and brought into port. The launch is now moored at the state pier and Nelson and Scanlon are prisoners at the New London police station.

FERTILIZER FACTS TOLD AT STORRS CONFERENCE

STORRS, Conn., July 15.—Fertilizer dealers and manufacturers of the state opened their fourth annual conference at the Connecticut Agricultural college here this afternoon. Today's program included talks on the soils of Connecticut and their needs, tobacco fertilizers, facts affecting the economical use of fertilizers, and an inspection of the college experimental fields. Approximately fifty men of the fertilizer industry are in attendance at the conference, which will last until tomorrow noon.

"Connecticut Soils and Their Needs" was the subject of the talk given by George Scarseth, assistant in soils at the New Haven experiment station. Mr. Scarseth outlined the various soil series found in Connecticut, describing their origin and characteristics, and telling the type of agriculture best adapted to them. A four-year program of the experiment station, embracing work in economic and soil surveys, a chemical study of soil types, soils and greenhouse work, and the establishment of test plots for fertilizers throughout the state was described by Mr. Scarseth. He also took up the question of liming as a means of correcting soil acidity, mentioning some mistakes made in this practice.

Connecticut's most important soils were divided by Mr. Scarseth into series called Gloucester, Beckett, Charlton, Wethersfield and Merrimac. The Gloucester series, found in both the eastern and western parts of the state was described as a very droughty soil due to its loose subsoil. It is low in fertility, and very strongly acid. Applications of acid phosphate and limestone are usually effective in restoring fertility to this soil. This type of soil especially the stony phase, is well adapted to forestry.

Predominating in the southwestern part of the state is what Mr. Scarseth termed the Beckett series, a glacial till soil derived from granite. This soil has a very compact hard pan, and is inclined to be acid. It is well adapted to dairy farming.

Soils of the Charlton series is found throughout the hill regions of eastern Connecticut, according to Mr. Scarseth, and it is interspersed with soils of the Gloucester and Beckett type. It has a compact subsoil, and is high in its plant food content. The Wethersfield series, a glacial till soil derived from red sandstone is found in the lower Connecticut valley, and is well adapted to truck farming. Soil of the tobacco growing regions was described by Mr. Scarseth as of the Merrimac series, which is found on the river and lake outwash plains.

Announcement of a four-year experiment station program, the completed work of which will serve as a basis for the farmer to better adjust his business to the conditions under which he operates, was made today by Mr. Scarseth. This includes a detailed soil and economic survey of Connecticut, with the New Haven station making the soil survey, and the Storrs station making the economic survey. Chemical studies of soils and soil types will be continued; soils for greenhouse work will be studied; and fertilizer test plots will be established throughout the state, which will supplement the chemical studies and verify the greenhouse experiments.

The greatest need of Connecticut soils is lime and soluble phosphates, according to Mr. Scarseth. These serve to correct soil acidity and add a necessary plant food, which is unavailable to a large extent in Connecticut soils.

In some cases, crops on acid soils are poorer after liming, a condition that has puzzled many farmers who consider lime a cure-all for an acid soil. Mr. Scarseth explained that in some cases of this kind, a heavy application of lime will cause chemical reactions to be started, which will render phosphorus unavailable. This is one of the essential plant foods, and when the supply of phosphorus is limited, the crop will be poor.

"Tobacco Fertilizers" was the subject of the talk given by P. J. Anderson, pathologist in charge of the Windsor tobacco sub-station. That the tobacco growers of New England pay an annual fertilizer bill of $3,000,000 was the contention of Mr. Anderson, who said that in Connecticut alone, three-fourths of all the fertilizer sold is for tobacco. The prosperity of the fertilizer industry depends upon the prosperity of the tobacco grower, as evinced by the depression in the industry in the past few years.

Despite the enormous expenditure of the tobacco men for fertilizers, very little real experimental work in tobacco fertilizers in New England has been done. Mr. Anderson related how the whole experimental basis of our present fertilizer usage rests on two sets of experiments performed thirty years ago. Much of the data from these experiments is not applicable today because of changes in fertilizer practices, changes in methods of sorting tobacco, and in the tastes of smokers. Data from other states bearing on this problem is useless when applied to Connecticut conditions.

Mr. Anderson outlined a third set of experiments under way at the Windsor sub-station which, when completed, it is hoped will serve as a basis for a more thorough program of tobacco fertilization. Mr. Anderson reviewed the work of tobacco fertilizers of E. H. Jenkins of the Connecticut station, and Goessman of the Massachusetts Experiment station.

An inspection of the college experimental fields was made by the fertilizer dealers following the afternoon meeting in Hawley Armory, with B. A. Brown, assistant agronomist of the Storrs station in charge. "Some Facts that Affect the Economical Use of Fertilizers" was the subject of an address by Dr. H. R. Smalley, acting director of the soil improvement committee, in tonight's meeting in Hawley Armory. This was followed by a round table discussion of the problems of the fertilizer manufacturer, with all present participating.

The conference of the fertilizer dealers will be brought to a close tomorrow morning with the following program: 9 a. m., "Fertilizers for Truck Crops," A. E. Wilkinson, Gardening Specialist, C. A. C. Extension Service; 10 a. m., "Fertilizers for Field Crops," J. Stanley Owens, Soils and Field Crop Specialist, C. A. C. Extension Service; 12 a. m., Round Table discussion.

STATE POLICE EXPLAIN NEW BILL BOARD LAW

Signifying its intention of enforcing with as little friction as possible the new law concerning licenses for advertisement, which was passed by the 1925 session of the legislature, the state police department has sent out a circular letter to all holders of advertising licenses, drawing their attention to some of the changes in the new act.

The major change in the law is the requirement that advertisers procure a license before the use of real estate is granted. "No owner or lessee of real estate or any interest therein shall lease or license any part of such real estate situated in this state to any person, for the display of advertising matter until such proposed lessee shall have obtained a license in accordance with this act," according to the new law.

The license fee is changed from five mills per square foot to $.03 per square foot, and the minimum fee for any one sign is $1. Every advertiser must imprint the number and date of his license in such size and manner that it can be seen from the railway or highway that it faces. A separate application form will be used for each sign or advertisement.

Previous to the enactment of the new act, the state did not attempt to control advertisement on signs less than four feet square and no license was required for a sign of dimensions smaller than that. It is not now required that licenses be secured for signs that are displayed on the property on which the goods are manufactured or offered for sale or on which the business advertised is carried on in whole or in part.

The penalty for violating any provision of the act is a fine of not more than $30 or imprisonment for not more than 30 days. "Each month that any advertisement is displayed in violation of any provision of this act shall constitute a separate offense," according to the law.

FACTS

VALUES in all things are based on the law of supply and demand. Of Shore Property, you have a decreasing supply and increasing demand, so the only possible result is higher prices. That is what makes Shore Property different from other properties from the standpoint of investment.

That is why every man who invests in Shore Property is investing in a monopoly. There is no safer investment on earth.

BLACK PT. is full of glorious spots on which to build your cottage. Velvety green lawns extending to the very water's edge, sunlit woods, the light green of birches, the darker green of oaks, and rolling hills with the cool blue waters of the Sound stretching far away into the distance.

Rebuild your health, spirit and appetite. A plunge in the water in the early morning and then how good the tempting bacon smells! Get out your old clothes and your fishing tackle for the best vacation you ever had. Make your start now—let us help you. WESTERLY

Under direction of Highway Engineer Adolph L. Leon, workmen in the highway department of the town of Westerly are engaged in building and repairing shoulders on the Westerly-Watch Hill highway. This part of the road near the junction of the Shore road with the Westerly-Watch Hill highway is especially in need of attention, for the removing of the rails and ties of the old Pawcatuck Valley, later the Shore Line Electric railroad, left a dangerous condition, especially if automobiles were forced off the metal part of the highway. With increasing traffic on the roadways due to half-hour bus service to Watch Hill and hourly trips to Pleasant View and Atlantic Beach, together with the many pleasure automobiles and tradesmen's vehicles to the beaches, the chances of serious accidents are greatly multiplied. The building of the shoulders protects the edge of the hard road, which has a tendency to break off when heavy trucks run off and on to the pavement surface.

Ocean View avenue, extending from the entrance to the Misquamicut Golf club on the Atlantic ocean side to the Shore road, is an excellent piece of highway work put in by the Westerly highway department at a cost of a little more than $10,000. With this improvement one of the heavily traveled and formerly hazardous highways has become one over which autoists delight to travel in increasing numbers. The highway put in here was by the penetration method.

Atlantic avenue at the east end of Pleasant View, at the rear of the cottages of Councilmen Campbell, Utter and Fowler, has come in for its share of attention from the Atlantic Beach Casino to the Weekapaug breachway bridge. Here the sum of $5,000 has been expended in smoothing up the well-rutted service, filling in with gravel, the sand holes left between the highway and Winnapaug pond where electric car rails and ties had been pulled out. The entire stretch has been oiled and the result is a smooth highway, although not of such a permanent character as some desire.

At the west end of Pleasant View Beach, the condition of Atlantic avenue is such that surface water stands in the highway and at one place where there is a turn, near Watch Hill pond, there is not room for two cars to pass. The sentiment of the residents of this end of the beach was made known at Tuesday night's meeting of the Pleasant View Fire district when it was voted to ask the members of the Westerly town council to appropriate at the annual budget meeting of the town of Westerly, the sum of $25,000 and instructed the moderator, clerk and treasurer of the Pleasant View Fire district to be in attendance to see that the matter is not overlooked. Previous to taking up the matter in this manner the Westerly highway commissioners are to be approached by the proper committee to see if some relief cannot be secured before that time.

The work on Nepun road, leading off of the Westerly road by the cottages of W. W. Tapley, of Springfield, Mass., and R. B. Mellon, of Pittsburgh, has been completed and rocks have been taken out of the roadway, the surface of which has been smoothed, graded and straightened.

In Westerly, the work of oiling the road surfaces has been in progress, the big oiling machine of the C. C. Plumb Contracting company of Providence having gone over much of the road surfaces that are not to be torn up for the installation of the new sewage system pipe mains.

When the details of maintenance are cared for work will be begun constructing the new highway for Pierce street, the preliminary surveying for this work having already been accomplished.

Leaving Westerly, Wednesday afternoon and evening, were many members of Lady Leslie lodge, Daughters of Scotia, and Craigilea lodge, also of Westerly, who were guests of Lady Strathcona lodge, in Groton. Grand Deputy Elizabeth Stillman, of Westerly, was among the grand officers in attendance. These included Mary W. Spears, of Worcester, Mass., grand chief daughter of the order, who made a recent visit to the Westerly lodges. A supper was served in the dining room of Odd Fellows hall. The evening session began at 8 o'clock.

Westerly observers who occupied elevated places Wednesday afternoon at about 5 o'clock, caught another glimpse of the giant navy dirigible Shenandoah, as it passed Watch Hill point, bound westward.

Mr. and Mrs. Bennett Chappel and son Dewitt left Pleasant View Wednesday to return to their home in Middletown, Ohio.

The automobile department of the State Board of Public Roads is conducting its usual summer campaign to have summer residents from other states register their machines in Rhode Island. In accordance with an agreement between Rhode Island and practically every other state, owners of cars licensed in one state must have their machines registered in another state if they maintain residence in the second state for more than 30 days.

An inspector from the automobile department was at Westerly Tuesday questioning operators of machines bearing license plates issued in other states. The campaign will be conducted in other summer resorts throughout the state as in past years, officials of the department stated today.

To the Pleasant View Fire district story should be added the names of James Collins, to tax assessors; Court B. Bliven, to fire prevention committee; Howard C. Babcock, to police protection committee, and Otis Chapman to the improvement committee.

PLEASANT VIEW FIRE DIST. HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING

(Special to the Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., July 15—The annual meeting of the Pleasant View fire district was held Tuesday evening at 8:30 o'clock in the Wigwam hotel, Pleasant View with Frank A. Sullivan moderator and Herbert P. Clark clerk. For the nominating committee, Mrs. F. E. Fowler, chairman, presented the following names and they were voted elected: Moderator, Frank A. Sullivan; clerk, Herbert P. Clark; treasurer, Arthur L. Perry; tax collector, Merton L. Stott; fire chief, Charles M. Lamb; with authority to name his subordiantes; tax asssesors, Albert F. Clark, William F. Saunders; fire prevention committee, S. A. Sullivan, James Collins, Charles M. Lamb, George E. Phillips; police protection J. B. Utter, R. B. Meikle; sanitation H. P. Clark, S. H. Davis, R. L. Briggs; improvement, F. A. Sullivan, R. B. Meikle, H. A. Dunning, C. W. Campbell.

The tax collector's report, presented by Merton L. Scott, showed 1925 tax collected amounting to $3,587.53; collected from assesment, $3,381.37, the report was voted approved and recorded.

District Treasurer Albert H. Spicer's report showed balance on hand, June 15, 1924, $699.21; received from taxes $3,760.87; from sidewalk assessments, $3,381.37, interest from bank, $15.39, Interest from bank, $17.50 from note $5,000. Total $13,074.53. Expenditures, $5,978.65. Miscellaneous, $448.52. Note paid $5000. Total $16,047.46. The report was voted approved.

The report of the improvement committee showed 5,386 square yeards of concrete laid, at a cost of $12,638.01, for a cost of $2.35 per square yard. Added to a previous amount expended for sidewalks of $2,073.65, this makes a total expenditure for sidewalks, $14,711.66. Of this amount $6,319 is paid for by the fire district and $6,319 by the abutting property owners. The cost to the fire district for sidewalks was $7,355.82.

The authority given to the Pleasant View fire district and $6,319 by the abutting property owners. The cost to the fire district for sidewalks was $7,355.82.

The report of Fire Chief Charles M. Lamb showed five fires responded to, four of which were grass fires and one during the winter, a small house near Atlantic beach casino. Fire Chief Lamb thanked the Westerly and Watch Hill fire departments for assistance given the Pleasant View district. He encouraged the use of wire baskets for burning rubbish. Picnic parties are now required to get permits for building fires on the beach.

The garbage contract called for the collection of rubbish every other Saturday. Next Saturday, to be one of the collection days, has been designated for a general cleanup day for the beach. Frank G. Cahoone was given the contract for one year to collect garbage, three times a week, or as much oftener as necessary. He is to receive $800 for the work.

Moderator Sullivan stated that outside toilets were unlawful at the beach, and directed that attention be called to any such nuisance that might exist.

The tax collector was voter a salary of $100 a year. Small bills were authorized to be paid by the district treasurer, on approval of the moderator and clerk.

The tax rate for the coming year, as last year, was voted 70 cents on each $100 of ratable property, due on or before April 1, with rebate of 5 per cent if paid before March 31 and after that time interest added at the rate of 12 per cent per annum.

The public improvement committee reported that, acting under authority voted at the last annual meeting, the Pleasant View beach property lots had been numbered, beginning at the west end of the beach. The work has been done by Thomas McKenzie, superintendent of the Westerly water works, who had four blue prints on exhibition, showing the renumbered properties.

The sum of $250 was voted appropriated to pay the interest in money hired to build sidewalks. Authority was voted to appropriate $2,100 for the payment of sidewalk construction.

The matter of rights of way to the beach was taken up and the taxpayers were urged to have such rights of way deeded to the Pleasant View fire district, so that they could have control over them. Authority was voted to have public improvement committee to accept land and sign deeds therefor. It developed that there were no rights of way to the beach, as such, west of the Atlantic beach casino.

The fire fighting apparatus of the Pleasant View district consisting of a hose wheel, which has been housed on the property of George E. Phillips, it was decided should be located on property belonging to the fire district. The sum of $3,000 was voted appropriated to procure a suitable site and to construct a building for fire apparatus, it being the intention of the district before long to secure a real piece of fire apparatus.

It was voted to call the attention of the Westerly highway commission to surface water standing on the highway near recently built sidewalks and to the condition of the highway at the west end of the beach and other places. Also to petition the Westerly town council to set aside $25,000 for the repair of highways in the Pleasant View fire district. At the annual budget meeting previous to the February Westerly financial town meeting, the moderator, treasurer and clerk, were directed to attend the budget session. Figures show that the tax valuation of the Pleasant View district amounts to several hundred thousand dollars, on which $15,000 tax is paid to the town of Westerly.

A vote of thanks was extended Albert H. Spicer retiring treasurer, who has held that office since the fire district was organized. Thanks was voted C. B. Bliven, for the use of the Wigwam hotel as a meeting place.

George E. Egger, Westerly fire chief, addressed the fire district on the subject of automobile traffic congestion, which occurs when seashore property takes fire. He urged that the Pleasant View chief appoint an officer to divert traffic so that the Westerly, Watch Hill, New London and Norwich departments which would have to be called upon in case of a big fire, could reach the beach. George E. Phillips directed attention to the parking of automobiles near hydrants and Chief Lamb was directed to paint a ten foot mark on each side. Authority was granted him to secure district supplies.

FRENCHMEN ARE SHAVING AS NEVER BEFORE IN HISTORY

Among Frenchmen the fashion is coming to be to follow the example of American men and have beards and mustaches shaved off. In government offices, banks and shops foreigners now meet the new type of Frenchmen, clean-shaved young men, wearing horn rimmed spectacles. French artists and writers, however, do not follow this fashion. They continue to wear waved, short beards and pointed mustaches. "The tradition of French literature demands it," says Tristan Bernard, one of the most popular French playwrights. "All our predecessors have cultivated long hair on their faces. Can you imagine Victor Hugo, Verlaine, Zola, Jules Verne, Alphonso Daudet and all the other great writers of the last century without their manes or their beards?" Modern writers want to keep the tradition and look as much as possible like their famous predecessors.

LONG-COVERED BEAUTIES OF LONDON REVEALED

Experiments carried out by an architect have restored to light long-covered beauties in London's oldest buildings, many of which have become sad specimens in their drab coverings of stucco or plaster. Lincoln's Inn Hall was stripped of its sheath of dirty gray stucco by an architect who was seeking a new method of exterior adornment. To his delight, the architect found the warm red brickwork underneath as fresh and colorful as it was hundreds of years ago. The same method was adopted with the famous old gatehouse of Lambeth Palace, believed by antiquaries to be the oldest specimen of red brick in London. Its rich color had been hidden for more than 800 years under a thick covering of plaster, which, when removed, left the gate as it was designed by Archbishop Morton in 1490.

Emergency Hose Coupler

During many great fires, fire fighting equipment from neighboring cities has proved useless because the threads in the hose couplings did not fit the local hydrants. In order to remedy this, the United States bureau of standards has perfected a set of tools enabling new threads to be cut on the spot, says the Popular Science Monthly. Fire departments in many large cities now are being equipped with these.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Grubby Gopher's Pockets

Big pockets are of thrift a sign;
To all them frequently is fine.
Grubby Gopher.

Peter Rabbit always is interested in pockets. He always has been. The only people of his acquaintance with bizzable pockets are Striped Chipmunk, with a big pocket on the inside of each cheek, and Mrs. Possum, with a great, big pocket in which she carries her babies. So the moment Digger the Badger mentioned the fact that Grubb Gopher has big pockets, Peter's curiosity fairly boiled over. He wanted to know right away what kind of pockets they were.

"What kind of pockets?" repeated Badger, pretending he didn't understand. "Why, just pockets—big pockets."

"How many?" cried Peter.

"Two," replied Digger.

"Then they must be in his cheeks," cried Peter. "Tell me, Mr. Badger, are they in his cheeks?"

"Of course," replied Digger testily, "where else would they be?"

"Well," said Peter, "Mrs. Possum has a big pocket and it isn't in either cheek. What does Grubby use his pockets for?"

"For the same purpose that Striped Chipmunk uses his," said Digger. "Goose pockets are for carrying food."

"I suppose," said Peter, "that they're on the insides of his cheeks."

"Then you suppose something that isn't so," retorted Digger.

"You should have seen Peter's eyes open then. "You say that Grubby has pockets in his cheeks, yet they are not on the inside of his cheeks. Then how can they be in his cheeks?" demanded Peter.

"Any reason that you know of why they shouldn't be on the outside of his cheeks?" inquired Digger.

"No-o," said Peter slowly and a bit doubtfully. "No, I don't know that there is, only I never heard of such a thing."

"Huh," retorted Digger. "There really are quite a number of things you haven't heard about, Peter Rabbit."

Peter admitted that this might be so. But just then he wasn't interested in anything but those pockets that belonged to Grubby Gopher. "Really and truly are they on the outside of his cheeks, Mr. Badger?" he asked.

"Really and truly they are," replied Digger. "They open from the outside from close by the mouth, and each pocket is fur lined."

Peter's eyes were growing bigger and bigger. "You mean that those pockets have hair growing on the inside?" he cried.

"That's just what I mean," replied Digger. "Those are very handy pockets. They are so big that they extend way back along his neck. What Striped Chipmunk can carry in his pockets is nothing compared to what Grubby Gopher can carry in his pockets. Grubby is no beauty at best, but when he has those pockets stuffed full of food he is about the worst looking fellow I know of."

"How does he put the food in his pockets?" demanded Peter.

"Pushes it in with his hands, of course," replied Digger. "Some folks seem to think that he used these pockets for carrying the dirt out of his tunnels. But that isn't so. He pushes the dirt ahead of him, and so out. His pockets are simply for carrying food. My, but that fellow has a short temper. He is positively ugly."

"My, but that fellow has a short temper! He is positively ugly"

BEGGARS CROWD PORCH OF MASSIMO PALACE

Massimo Palace, in the Corso Vittorio Emmanuele, in Rome, is one of the guide book signs. But most tourists know it as the nameless porch that is packed with beggars at night. They do not know that the beggars are there by virtue of a property right as solemnly granted as any oil concession ever granted to the predatory rich.

Hundreds of years ago Prince Massimo, being of pious mind and charitable disposition, gave to the beggars of Rome the right to sleep on his front porch, which was elegantly adorned with marble columns and tracery. The said beggars bequested the said right to their heirs and assigns to all eternity.

So every night the visitor may see the porch occupied by scantily dressed old gentlemen and their wives, cooking their supper over alcohol lamps, or taking their ease on pillows of burlap and straw.

Doctor's Work Appreciated

Dr. Isabel Kerr, an English woman who has served many years as medical superintendent of one of the great leper hospitals in Calcutta, has been awarded the Kaiser-i-Hind medal by the Indian government in token of its appreciation of her work.

An Uncrowded Profession

Growing cocoanuts in the West Indies is not a profession that has attracted many women. But Miss Nellie Hamel-Smith, a young English woman, says it is "the ideal life." She employs 60 native laborers and operates over a 100 acres devoted to cocoanuts.

Advice is something that people relish only when it confirms their own opinions.

MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS MARKING TIME ON TAX

Motion picture exhibitors around the state are marking time on the question of paying the motion picture tax recently imposed by the state. The law requiring payment of $10 for every reel of 1,000 feet or less, and 50 cents for every extra hundred feet per reel brought into the state is now technically in effect, but the state has as yet made no endeavor to collect it. Every theatre manager has received notice from the state to keep a careful record of the footage of all films playing his house since the law went into effect. If the law is held constitutional by the United States district court, it is expected that the tax will then be collected.

Just how the tax will be paid is a question, but the distributors, with headquarters at New Haven, have declared they will not pay it. The distributors consider that it is up to the individual exhibitors throughout the state to devise some means of distributing equitably the payment upon each film brought into the state. This will probably take the form of a zoning of the state so that cities of a certain population will pay a certain fraction of the tax on each individual picture, while the smaller towns will pay a smaller proportion of the tax.

The average feature picture of seven reels of 1,000 feet each is liable to a tax of $70 when it is brought over the state line into Connecticut. This tax, under the law, must be paid immediately and then it will have to be distributed among the exhibitors planning to show the picture. Connecticut is what is called two-print territory, and all the larger motion picture companies bring two prints of every film into this state. This means that for every new feature picture that crosses the line into Connecticut they are owing a tax of $140.

All the big companies have headquarters for distributing in this territory in New Haven, though many of the smaller independent companies deal through Boston. Pictures released by the large companies are stored in New Haven pending distribution throughout the territory. There are already many films there on which the tax must be paid, when the state commences to enforce it, before they can legally be shown on any screen in the state.

Would Hit Small Houses

What the small houses throughout the state fear is that many pictures now in the state, which have played the first run houses in the large cities will now be liable to tax before, they can display them. If these small houses have to pay a full tax of $70 on their feature films a while they will be heavy losers. For many of the smaller movie theatres in the state $30 is a large sum to take in in a day.

Consider Zoning Plan

Many means by which the exhibitors might distribute the tax among themselves have been suggested, including a tax on theatre capacity or average business, but the zoning plan seems likely to be adopted and cities of the size of New Haven, Hartford and Bridgeport will undoubtedly have to pay a greater share of the tax than the smaller communities.

Critical of New Law

Motion picture house managers deplore the law while having differing views on the subject of its collection. On claims that the law will never be enforced, while another feels equally certain that it will be. There is much questioning as to why, if the state simply wished a source of revenue from film theatres, it could not levy a straight tax upon the number of seats in each theatre. Some such tax, say the film men, would be much easier to collect and would be free of the many complications that they claim abound in the present law.

It is thought that the motion picture tax law will greatly cripple the independent producers who deal through Boston. They have not the resources that the big companies dealing through New Haven possess. Local film men ridicule the claim advanced by attorneys for the state that houses in small towns will receive feature films sooner than formerly under the new law because the pictures will go direct to the small towns from the large cities without going outside the state and being liable to the state tax when they reenter Connecticut. According to a theater manager when the state tax is imposed upon the films on their first entrance into Connecticut that ends the matter. Films once taxed, are not, in his opinion, liable to further taxation.

It is said that very few films leave the state and re-enter it. Local theater men say that the small towns of Connecticut show feature films very soon after the large cities anyway!

It was argued by Former United States Attorney General Wickersham when the hearing on the bill was held in New Haven that all films brought into the state would be taxable and that the fact that a film had been previously taxed by the state, even though it were the same print previously shown, would not exempt it. The law exempts news reels from the tax and makes it possible for educational films to be untaxed also.

So far there has been no talk of passing the tax along to the public.

State Tax Commissioner Blodgett stated Wednesday that the same print of a film could be taxed but once, and that if a print were brought back into the state after being shown in other places it could not be taxed again if it bore the stamp of the state tax commissioner showing that the tax had been paid when the print first came into the state. Mr. Blodgett stated that if another print of a film formerly shown in the state, were brought into Connecticut it would be liable to taxation.

State's Brief

The film tax law that is now under review by a federal constitutional court applies only to exhibitors of motion pictures within the state, according to the argument set forth in the defendants' brief in the cases of the American Feature Film company and the Fox Film Corporation against John H. Trumbull, governor of the state of Connecticut and others. The brief was presented Friday at the hearing in a special federal constitutional court in New Haven, on the plaintiffs' motions for preliminary injunctions. It is signed by Attorney-General Frank E. Healy and Arthur Shipman, special state counsel in the case. After revision by Mr. Shipman, it is to be sent to Judges Rogers, Hilliard and Thacher, who constituted the court.

In part the brief reads, "The act must be interpreted in connection with the other statutes of the state relating to the exhibition of moving pictures and moving picture operators. No moving picture can be exhibited in Connecticut under the law, except by a licensed operator of a moving picture machine. Connecticut treats the business of exhibiting moving pictures as dangerous. No out-of-state manufacturer or distributor is referred to in the act. It concerns simply the business of exhibiting moving pictures in this state. It is true that moving pictures are not manufactured as a business in Connecticut. It is also true in general that as the films come into the state they are moving in interstate commerce.

"The tax, by section 1, is to be paid by the person, etc., who delivers the motion picture film or copy for the purpose of exhibiting in this state any motion picture therefrom. He is the man who, therefore, has the purpose of exhibiting. If the plaintiffs in these cases have the purpose of exhibiting their motion pictures in Connecticut, they must register the same. If they deliver, or cause to be delivered without any purpose, as actors, of exhibiting motion pictures in this state, they are free of tax. Their respective bills of complaint explain their business, but are seductously silent on the important question or have any purpose in the delivery which is connected with their exhibiting, or not. If the plaintiffs are delivering in pursuance of their purpose of exhibiting, how can they complain of the law on a constitutional ground? If they have no purpose of delivering in connection with exhibiting as actors, they are free of the law. Under either horn of the dilemma, the plaintiffs are out of court."

The brief then considers the power of taxation vested in the state, and offers answers to individual objections offered to the law in the bills of complaint.

NANCY.

There was no lass like Nancy—
She was the sweetest girl!
Her eyes were blue, her locks were black,
With many a glossy curl;
And, oh, she had a dimple,
And when it used to peep
Up at me shyly, I was dumb,
So high my heart would leap.

Ah, little blue-eyed Nancy—
From her I've had no word
It must be now quite thirty years,
But one grim fact I've heard;
Another man she married!
I might have known 'twould be;
And yet—I sometimes wonder if
She ever thinks of me.

And sometimes at the mirror
I stand and gaze a while,
Though what I see before me there
Awakes a rueful smile:
The locks are gray and scanty
My wrinkled brow above—
I'd be ashamed to have one know
I ever think of love.

But still—when I am lonely
'Tis pleasant to recall,
For sentiment, like ivy green,
Loves best a ruined wall;
And who knows Nancy's husband
A greater wreck may be—
Say, is that not a shameful thought
To sneak up into me?

And Nancy too—good gracious!—
I never thought of that—
The demon, Time, he may have brought
Her nigh a ton of fat!
Yet, if my hopes were blighted,
One solace soothes the smart;
The vision fair that Nancy was Still reigns within my heart.

HELIOS.

Oh, I am weary of a heart that brings
Star-worship even to the shining sun:
Rather a savage whose whole heart hail
Radiance and joy from sunlight that
Flutter and fade before the twilight
Why should we falter when the night is
Dream-weavers, trembling in dim mist
All things divorced from thought, and
I am thy child, O Sun, as Julian was;
I crouch not in the shadows of my soul,
And grapple with dark terrors; nor re
Drink I of darkness when the shadows
Even at death, when nearest is the goal,
I shall cry out to heaven, "The sun! the

FRENCH CLERGYMEN LIVE LONGER THAN OTHERS

Statistics which reached the labor department recently indicate that French clergymen and business men live longer than men in other professions, their average being 65 years for clergymen and 64 for men in business. Next come the farmers, with an average of 61 years of life, while soldiers, lawyers and workers, though living under entirely different conditions, average 57 years. School teachers and physicians show the lowest average, 52 years. This is explained by the fact that educators, from the university professor down to the country schoolmaster, are underpaid. The report does not seem flattering to the government. It says: "Officials are as underpaid as the professors, but while the latter have to furnish strenuous mental effort, which should be supplemented by better food and less material worry, the former lead a sedentary, carefree existence and material worries do not shorten their lives."

These cave pictures were probably the earliest fashion plates in the world, and were drawn about 20,000 years ago, declared Mr. Brand. Another illustration from Spain showed a costume very much akin to that of the flapper.

MARKET WAS STRONG

NEW YORK, July 15—(A. P.)—Constructive forces were again at work in today's stock market, which witnessed a broad, upward movement under the leadership of the standard industrials. Trading was in substantially increased volume, closing quotations disclosing a large number of gains ranging from one to three points in the active issues.

The buying movement apparently was influenced by a lowering of call money rates, resumption of dividends on Vanadium Steel, publication of favorable weekly steel trade reviews and reports of expanding public participation by the larger commission houses.

Predictions of the long awaited revival of railroad buying stimulated the demand for the steel shares, U. S. Steel common closed more than two points higher at 117 5-8; Republic, Replogle and Gulf states each moved up about two points and Crucible and Ludlum one.

U. S. Rubber common continued its remarkable advance by climbing more than four points to a new 1925 high at 64 3-4, slipping back 64 at the subsequent profit taking. Goodrich, Fisk and Keystone also attained new peak prices. The strong crude rubber position of the larger companies was an important factor in the buying of these issues.

American Can again came to the fore by crossing 200 to a new record price. In all, about twenty issues exceeded their previous peak quotations of the year, the industrial list including Utah copper, American Agricultural Chemical preferred, General Railway Signal, Certained Products, Dodge Brothers preferred, Nash Motors preferred, Onyx Hosiery, Phoenix Hosiery and Gimbel company.

With Public Utility companies reporting a long succession o frecord breaking earnings statements, the public imagination fired by proposed super-power projects, there was a good demand for Power and Light stocks. Montana Power, North American company, International Telephone and Standard Gas all broke through to new highs.

Oils changed hands in large blocks at the opening and it looked as though the widely predicted boom in the oil shares was underway, but the upward movement quickly petered out and most of the popular issues showed only small fractional changes on the day. Wall street heard talk that the leaders of the oil industry frowned on any bullish demonstrations in the oils at the present time on the theory that such a movement would stimulate "wild catting" and probably lead to new and increased production which would again disorganize the industry.

Recent sluggishness of the equipment issues was attributed to the sharp falling off in new orders and reports that several of the leading systems were batching their own equipment. A better inquiry was noted dfor these issues today, Baldwin and Lima locomotives each closing a point or so higher.

Rails, particularly the western coal carriers, developed a show of strength at the opening, but the rally was not sustained. The Wheeling and Lake Erie issues again established new maximum quotations, but shares of most of the tank line systems showed only fractional changes.

Call money renewed at four per cent. and then eased to 3 3-4 with some loans reported in the "outside market" as low as 3 1-2. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

With the exception of heavy profit taking in the Scandinavian currencies which resulted in Norwegian and Danish kroner falling back about 15 points, there was little of interest in the foreign exchange market. Demand sterling ruled slightly easier around $4.85 5-8, but the other allied currencies were firm, French francs being quoted slightly higher around 4.72 cents.

Berlin Stops Raphael Sale
An American, whose name is being withheld, weighed to purchase a Raphael, Giuliano de Medici, from a citizen of Berlin. The city board has just voted to ask the minister of the interior to refuse to permit to export the picture. According to a law passed December 11, 1919, a permit is necessary, and as a protest has been made it appears that the American will not be able to remove the painting, and therefore will not make the purchase.

NEW BUILDING FOR THE SHELTERING ARMS

GROUND IS BROKEN FOR NEW BUILDING FOR SHELTERING ARMS

Ground was broken Wednesday afternoon for the handsome new building for the Sheltering Arms, which is to be erected on the lot at the corner of Rockwell street and McKinley avenue extension. Contractor W. S. Spencer, who was awarded the general contract on his bid of $85,888, had men and teams on the lot taking off the top sod, and from now on the work will be pushed so that it is expected to have the building covered in by cold weather and have the building finished so that it can be occupied in the spring.

Plans for the well arranged and commodious new building have been worked out through the special building committee of the United Workers which consisted of Wallace S. Ellis, chairman, Miss Adelaide L. Butts, Mrs. Charles H. Preston, Miss Mary Paddock, and Mrs. Charles Tyler Bard, president of the organization, with Shepard B. Palmer as resident architect associated with the committee.

The accommodations provided the new Sheltering Arms building will practically double the number of aged and worthy persons for whom it affords comfortable homes in the declining years of their lives. An extension too is contemplated in the work over what has previously been done as it will be possible for aged couples man and wife, to find accommodations at the new Sheltering Arms building. This is arranged for by providing a number of two-bed rooms, which are designed to be occupied by two persons. There are eight of these two-bed rooms, and about 20 private rooms, the latter designed to be used by one person.

A resident staff of about five persons will be needed to administer the home and quarters have been provided for them.

The United Workers, it was stated Wednesday night by the president, Mrs. Charles Tyler Bard, would have no further use for the old Sheltering Arms building on Harland road, Norwich Town, but it will probably be sold. It is adapted to be converted easily into a three tenement house as there is plumbing on every floor.

CROPS IN CONNECTICUT ARE SHOWING DECREASE

"The season of 1924 was quite unfavorable to some crops in Connecticut," according to a crop and livestock review in a booklet on Connecticut agriculture just published by the board of agriculture. The review continues:

"Early spring rains and snows provided sufficient moisture to start plant growth, but the cold, cloudy weather which prevailed until mid-June, hindered growth seriously. After that date temperatures were seasonable but were accompanied by severe drought which remained unbroken until early August.

"The area devoted to the principal crops showed little change and totalled 477,078 acres in 1924. The estimated value of these crops was $34,735,446 compared with $42,753,258 in 1923, a decrease of 18.8 per cent. About 47 per cent. of these values come wholly from crops which are almost wholly fed to livestock on the farm grown.

Unfavorable for Tobacco.

"Tobacco, Connecticut's leading cash crop in per cent. of value, had a very unfavorable season. Rainfall over most of the tobacco area was acutely deficient during July and August. Numerous hailstorms damaged the crop in many localities. A hailstorm of great intensity occurred early in August, centering over the towns of South and East Windsor in the broadleaf district, causing heavy damage. Rains came late in the growing season which aided late set tobacco to make heavy yields in many instances. A survey of the acreage showed a total of 30,682 acres set in 1924 as compared with 29,256 acres in 1923. Hail entirely destroyed 1,904 acres, leaving 28,778 acres which were finally harvested. Much of the harvested acreage, however, was hail cut.

Hay Crop Lower.

"Hay, the second crop in point of value in Connecticut, furnished 29.8 per cent. of the crop values, and is grown on 320,000 acres, or 67.1 per cent. of the total acreage in 1924. This crop is almost wholly consumed by livestock on the farm where grown. Dry weather reduced the average yield per acre slightly below that of 1923. The total value of the tame hay crop in Connecticut was $10,400,000, compared with $10,128,000 a year ago. Litchfield county leads in the production of hay in Connecticut.

Same Corn Acreage.

"Corn, an important crop to the Connecticut dairyman, was grown on 76,000 acres, the same as in 1923. Yields of both corn for grain and corn for silage, were slightly better than a year ago. These crops with a total value of $5,133,450 had 14.8 per cent. of the total crop values in Connecticut in 1924. Hartford county leads in the production of both corn for grain and corn for silage. Prices of grain corn have remained at unusually high levels due to the very short corn crop in the corn belt states."

L. P. M. Hickey, field agent of the Connecticut Valley Tobacco association, has an article on tobacco in the booklet, in which he declares that the total value of the tobacco crop of the valley will not be much in excess of $15,000,000 for the past year; for Connecticut, about $10,000,000 to $12,000,000. He points out that the growers are endeavoring by changing of fertilizer, the planting of cover crops, and even crop rotation in some instances, to produce a larger number of pounds per acre.

In an article on the interdependence of agriculture and industry, E. Kent Hubbard, of the Manufacturers' association of Connecticut, declares: "True agriculture had its birth in New England, but was allowed to decline. The time has come, however, when those with vision are beginning to give due consideration to the necessity for the promotion of agricultural enterprises. This is especially true of the attitude of industrial leaders."

A woman may listen to the advice of her husband, but she invariably does as she pleases just the same.

DRINK SAFE WATER DURING SUMMER SEASON

"Water, water everywhere and not a drop to drink."

This line from the "Ancient Mariner" might well be charged to "water, water everywhere and many a drop not safe to drink" in the case of our automobile or camping trips during the summer according to the advisory bulletin this week of the state department of health.

It is a temptation when water is close at hand and our throats are parched from the heat of a warm summer day, to "take a chance" and drink the water. Anyone, however, who has lain for many weary weeks in bed with typhoid fever or who has lost dear ones by the ravages at this disease, will warn you to "look before you leap."

The safest water to use on an automobile trip is water from a public supply. These supplies are under the constant supervision of local and state authorities and are analyzed frequently. Water can be carried in any clean container or even in thermos bottles.

If it is necessary to drink water from wells or springs, at least look over the surroundings before using such water. Water from streams in general is unsafe without some form of purification. The automobile results in persons visiting otherwise uninhabited watersheds. Careless methods of sewage disposal by these visitors may mean pollution of pure streams.

Remember that the "old oken bucket" type of well is dangerous as well as picturesque. If the man who uses such a well just before you is a typhoid carrier and has unclean hands, the germs of the disease may reach you via the contact of bucket and water, or chain and water. Wells of the chain and sprocket type may also be contaminated by handling when the chain slips off the sprockets.

You cannot make certain of the quality of a water without an analysis, but there are many wells which can be ruled out because of location or construction. A well on lower ground than surrounding sources of pollution such as a privy is dangerous, as ground water generally follows the slope of the land. A well allowing the entrance of surface wash or waste water from the pump should not be used. Waste water may introduce contamination from the well platform.

A pipe discharging above a watering trough may not be supplying water from a safe source. Natural springs in sparsely settled regions are generally safe, if protected from surface wash and dipping of utensils into the water. Tight covers and overflow pipes should be provided.

The state department of health is endeavoring to inspect and analyze roadside supplies in so far as available funds permit. Such supplies are then posted with notices which indicate whether the water is safe or unsafe for drinking purposes.

Inoculation is a sure way to prevent typhoid fever, but only internal disorders may be caused by water. Therefore, remember the danger of impure water on vacation trips. Avoid, too, the common drinking cup, which is forbidden by law.

ARTIFICIAL RESPIRATION IN CASE OF DROWNING

One of the greatest tragedies is to stand by at shore or lake when the water delivers up a person apparently drowned, and be helpless in the emergency. It is at this moment that artificial respiration should be begun, and kept up continually for many houre, the case not being declared hopeless until every effort has been made, says the weekly bulletin of the board of health.

The Schaeffer or prone pressure method is the simplest and most effective one, since it can be kept up for hours without taxing the strength of the rescuer. It is now the accepted method, having superseded all others, in cases of resuscitation from electric shock, asphyxiation from gases, or from drowning.

Following are the rules to be observed:

(1) Remove any foreign object from the mouth or throat but do not let this delay matters since every moment is precious.

(2) Lay patient on his stomach, one arm extended above head, one under the face which should be turned to allow for free breathing; and begin at once.

(3) Kneel, straddle patient's hips, placing palms of hands on small of back—little finger touching the last rib.

(4) Leaning back at arm's length swing slowly forward so that weight of body is brought to bear on patient (not violently).

(5) Swing backward at once to remove pressure, bringing the body upright, but with hands still in position on patient's ribs. (By releasing the pressure the chest wall expands, the diaphragm descends and the lungs are filled with air.)

(6) Hold this position for two counts.

(7) Repeat, using the same rythm, two counts downward, one count backward, two counts pause. Time by own breathing—a complete respiration in four or five seconds. This should be repeated about twelve to fifteen times each minute.

This prone pressure method should be continued for many hours. Natural breathing will not develop quickly. Keeping up artificial respiration over a long period may be the means of saving a life which otherwise might be lost had treatment been discontinued too soon.

Meanwhile the patient should be kept warm by covering the limbs, or gently rubbing them. An assistant, if at hand, should loosen any tight clothing.

A physician should be called as soon as possible.

The patient should be treated as near the accident as possible, and should not be moved too quickly after natural breathing begins. Artificial respiration should be continued if breathing stops again.

When breathing is restored, patient should be moved on a flat surface to a place of shelter where he can be kept quiet and receive medical attention.

SONS OF HERMANN BUY CADILLAC HALL

The Cadillac hall building on the easterly side of Market street, south of Water street, was bought Wednesday from Max Sternlieb by the Sons of Hermann, Inc., and will be used in part as a lodge meeting room and a club room. The price paid is reported to have been $20,000, of which $10,000 is represented by a bank mortgage and the balance was raised by the members of the Sons of Hermann. Negotiations for the purchase were conducted on behalf of the Sons of Hermann by John M. Hoelck.

The property is a three story brick building with four stores on the main floor, three tenements above the stores and a hall on the top floor. The size of the building is 75x48.

The hall is in excellent shape with hardwood floor for dancing and will be used as the lodge room by Germania lodge and affiliated organizations. Later one of the tenements will be taken for a club room.

Possession is to be at once, but Germania lodge still has a lease to run until April 1, 1926, on its present lodge room in the Bushnell building on Shetucket street.

The property will be held in the name of the Sons of Hermann of Norwich, Inc., of which the officers are Max Braun, president; Martin Wenzel, secretary and Henry Liepold, treasurer.

TWO PAY FINES FOR MOTOR LAW VIOLATIONS

Leon Gadbois, 17, was fined $25 and costs in the city court Wednesday morning for driving without a license. He is below the legal age to secure a license but was operating a truck on Norton Main street, which ran into a touring car. He paid $37.24 into the court treasury.

Joseph Beyrouty, 21, of New London was fined $50 and costs for passing a standing trolley car on Thames street last Saturday. He paid $62.66.

The case of Joseph Cormier who was arrested on the night of the 10th on Roath street, was again continued to secure the presence of a witness. Cormier is charged with operating an automobile under the influence of liquor. His arrest followed a complaint that a man was operating a machine on Roath street without lights. Sergeant Casey and McAvoy and P. Murphy found Cormier in the machine with a burlap bag full of empty bottles. They charged him with intoxication.

NORWICH BUILDERS GET BIG MANCHESTER CONTRACT

The Peck-McWilliams company of Norwich with a bid of $161,149 has been awarded the contract to construct the beautiful new municipal building at Manchester, which will be located on the site of the old town building on Manchester Green, overlooking the park, one of the most ideal locations in Manchester.

The bids were opened Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Manchester town hall by Robert Waddell, clerk of the town committee, and in the presence of the six bidders for the construction work. The bid of the Peck-McWilliams Co., was $5,151 under the next lowest bid and $25,671 lower than the highest bid submitted for the work. The bids submitted were as follows: Morrissey-Stovell Co., Springfield, Mass., $186,820; Schrieber Co., Manchester $177,760; Interstate Construction Co., New Haven, $169,900; Manchester Construction Co., Manchester, $169,307; Central Engineering Co., Pawtucket, R. I., $166,300; Peck-McWilliams Co., Norwich, $161,149.

The new Manchester municipal building is to be one of the most up to date structures in the state, the latest and most modern materials being used for its construction, while selected marble, brick, granite and other materials are intended to make the building one of beauty as well as of service.

The building is to measure 91x86 feet, with two stories and basement, of the latest fireproof construction. Concrete will be used for the foundation and cellar and the frame work will be of structural steel, the outside walls of selected brick backed by hollow tile.

Beautiful Vermont marble is to be used for the cornice, pilasters and columns. The base will be of granite as well as the steps leading to the main entrance of the building. The water table will also be of granite, while the roofing is to be of slate. These features of the building are intended to make it a thing of beauty when completed as the marble is of beautiful design, especially adapted for use in public buildings.

The interior trim is of selected birch while the floors will be of tile, terrazzo and marble, spaced with brass strips. The stair treads are to be of marble, while a beautifully designed ornamental iron work encloses the stairway.

A fire proof vault within the building will be used for documents and town records. The vault will be constructed with Kalamein door and windows and the vault will have safety rolling shutters.

The heating of the building will be by the vacuum system, while the latest type of ventilating system will provide fresh air the year round. All plumbing fixtures are to be of the latest sanitary type and all windows will be weatherstripped.

The floor plan of the building calls for regular equipment for the basement, with several offices also located there; the main floor to be used entirely for offices and court rooms, while additional offices and a large assembly hall to seat nearly 1000 persons will complete the use of the second floor.

Work is to be started immediately as the contract calls for the razing of the old town building, in order that the new structure may be raised on the site of the old one. The work will probably take about 240 calendar days and during the construction work will be given to over 100 members of the building trades.

Members of the local construction firm were complimented by many friends Wednesday evening for their success in receiving the award of the contract for the Manchester municipal building.

At present no name had been selected for the Manchester municipal building because of the differences of opinion on whether Manchester should be called a city or a town. The question of town or city is to be settled at the next session of the legislature, after which, the building will be named. This will take place after the building is completed and therefore no inscription will be made on the face of the building previous to the final action of the legislature.

Manchester appropriated the sum of $193,000 for the structure, and this sum is believed to be sufficient to build and equip the building.

CONTEST IN THE SCOPES EVOLUTION CASE OVER THE STATUS OF SCIENTIFIC EXPERTS

Attorneys For the State Are Contending For the Exclusion of Testimony of Scientists—Defense Counsel are Arguing For the Admission of Such Testimony—Members of the Jury Were Not Permitted in Court During the Arguments—Judge Raulston is Expected to Make His Decision on the Matter Today.

COURT ROOM, Dayton, Tenn., July 16.—(AP)—Judge Raulston late today took under advisement the motion of state attorneys to exclude testimony of scientific experts from the trial of John T. Scopes for violation of the Tennessee anti-evolution law and adjourned court until tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

The motion was argued all day. The state's plea for exclusion of scientific testimony was presented by William Jennings Bryan, Sr., and William Jennings Bryan, Jr., Herbert E. Hicks, Ben T. McKenzie and Attorney General A. T. Stewart.

Arthur Garfield Hays and Dudley Field Malone, defense attorneys, asked the judge to admit the testimony. The jury was sent from the room before the motion was presented.

Judge Raulston is expected to make his second momentous decision of the proceedings tomorrow. He prolonged the trial yesterday when he denied a defense motion to quash the indictment. On his decision on the pending motion will depend the length of the trial, for should he exclude the scientific witnesses, a dozen of whom are awaiting the word from the bench, the trial would soon close.

Seven of the dozen lawyers in the case spoke today but the clean-cut division of the issue between religion and science was placed before the court at the afternoon session when William Jennings Bryan argued against the admission of experts and Dudley Field Malone pleaded that the door of the witness box be unlocked for the

His address this afternoon marked the first time Mr. Bryan has raised his voice in active discussion of the conflict at issue on the floor of the court.

He contended that the law as passed by the legislature was definite, clear and understandable, permitted of no interpretation from experts and the effort to inject experts was an attack on the religion of the children handed down to them by their fathers.

Mr. Malone, who followed Mr. Bryan, declared that the effort of the defense to place experts in the case as witnesses was not an attack on the Bible. The defense would have the Bible remain, but in the conscience, he said, while science takes its rightful place in the schools.

The whole matter was brought to the floor of the court when the defense recalled Dr. Maynard M. Metcalf, zoologist, who answered a series of questions on evolution yesterday with the jury absent from the courtroom.

Dr. Metcalf was presented as a "test witness" to show the line of testimony the defense sought to introduce. The scientist was not permitted to answer the one question asked by Clarence Darrow, defense counsel, if the witness could give any other evidences of evolution of man.

Mr. Darrow announced that the defense expected to show by men of science and learning, both scientists and real scholars of the Bible, what evolution is and that any interpretation of the Bible that intelligent man could possibly make is not in conflict with any story of creation, while the Bible, in many ways, is in conflict with every known science. He added that the witness to whose testimony objection was made, knows his subject and is competent to speak.

Attorney General A. T. Stewart, for the state, moved to exclude the testimony of scientists on the ground that under the wording of the act, and interpretation of the act, the evidence would be incompetent.

The jury, a part of the case that has had little active participation in it, was still subject to call, the members not being permitted in the court room during the day.

William Jennings Bryan, Jr., opened for the state, making the first argument on the law involved. He was followed by Arthur G. Hays for the defense, this argument also dealing with the law in the case.

Mr. Bryan called the discussion of expert testimony the heart of the case and declared that the courts have unfavorably regarded such evidence, received it with extreme caution and investigated it with every care.

Arthur G. Hays declared that he had believed all the expert witnesses on the question at point, the scientists, were on one side of the case and not here to give opinions but to state facts.

Herbert E. Hicks, for the prosecution, protested against the injection of theologians or scientists in the case.

Ben McKenzie in his argument denied at the outset a charge he declared was being made that "McKenzie was waving the bloody shirt."

Supporters of the state and Scopes, defenders, received alike the plaudits of a throng which could not be held in check by the warnings of the court, nor discouraged by acute discomforts.

Coal Magnates and Miners Wide Apart

Owners Decline Challenge of Workers to Submit Prices to Inspection.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 16—Anthracite miners today challenged mine owners to submit hard coal prices to public investigation to determine whether enough could not be saved to give the public cheaper fuel and the diggers higher wages.

The operators declined. In naming the interstate commerce commission as an eligible investigating body, the miners were merely anticipating an investigation that body had already made, according to the operators, who counselled action be deferred until the report of the commission's hearings was made public.

Both miners and operators apparently came the closest yet to an impasse on the wage boost question today. The miners started in early by pressing the mine owners for a definite reply to demand two which calls for a ten per cent. boost in the contract wage scale, an additional $1 a day for all day men and other fiscal gains.

The operators avoided specifically saying, "no". There was no desire to make provocative gestures in advance of the annual convention of district one at Wilkesbarre next week, it was hinted. However, they "reiterated" the position they had taken from the outset of the present scale negotiations labor cost must go down, not up. Insofar as any change in this position was concerned, it was said, this answer was final.

It was then that Philip Murray, miners' international vice president and ranking official here in the absence of President John L. Lewis, proposed the public probe to determine just how much "labor cost" amounted to in the selling cost of anthracite.

Mr. Murray asserted that dealers in Philadelphia, for example, were charging the consumer $15 a ton for coal that was priced at $8 at the mine. He charged this big "spread" of $7, amounting to almost 90 per cent., was obviously not due to diggers.

Miners emphasized again today the hazards of work in a hard coal mine and asserted miners each year suffered 28,000 injuries deserving of compensation. Operators disputed the size of his estimate. However, they said, a miner undergoing such dangers was entitled to all he could get, but they reminded that the price coal brought in the market set a limit on what he could expect. This limit had been reached, they said.

FRANCE BASIS HOPE IN NEW GOLD COUPON LOAN

PARIS, July 16.—(AP)—Settlement of French debts to the United States and to Great Britain, as well as the solution of the country's internal financial difficulties, is seen by leading financiers in the new four per cent. gold coupon loan, open to only holders of short term defense bonds, to be floated beginning Monday.

"The first rift in France's overcast financial sky is the favorable reception by the public generally of the announcement of the terms of the new loan," said a leading banker today. He expressed the opinion that the loan will be a complete success, and financial and business circles generally agree with him.

It is expected that the loan will rid the French treasury of the overhanging menace from the floating debt to the extent that further inflation will be avoided, leaving the way clear for Finance Minister Caillaux to put through the balance o his program.

His first move will be with the budget of 1926 and its taxes to provide a sinking fund for foreign and domestic debts. Then will ollow the stabilization of the franc on a new gold basis. The general lines of the new budget already have been fixed.

The best indication of the success of the new loan is seen by financiers in the fact that the excess demand for the repayment of national defense bonds has been transformed into excess subscriptions since the terms of the loan were published.

It is hoped that to guarantee capital against a further fall of the franc will put a stop to the exploitation of wealth and possibly bring back some that already has been sent abroad due to ear of a radical collapse in French exchange.

28 Bids For Shipping Board Ships Opened

Henry Ford Bid $1,706,000 For the 200 Vessels to Be Sold For Scrapping.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—(AP)—A bid of $1,706,000 from Henry Ford for the 200 shipping board vessels to be sold for scrapping was opened with 27 others today by the Fleet corporation.

Except for an offer from A. G. Wilson of Bar Harbor, Maine, representing the Ocean Power Company, Inc., of $2,444,000 for the lot, which was unaccompanied by the required certified check for one-tenth of the amount and so could not be considered, the Ford tender was several hundred thousand dollars higher than any other cash offer. All will be tabulated without delay and a recommendation for the sale is expected to go forward this week from President Palmer of the Fleet corporation to the shipping board.

Opening of the bids today was not without protest. The Boston Iron and Metal company of Baltimore, which was declared by President Palmer to have submitted the best offer when the bids for the ships were first opened July 30, filed "formal notice" with the board, which disapproved Mr. Palmer's recommendation and ordered the negotiations continued, that it protested the proceedings as illegal.

In presenting his letters of credence, the new Egyptian minister declared he would do all in his power to strengthen the bonds of esteem and friendship which have United Egypt and the United States for so long.

"The history of the American nation has always been for me personally and for my country an object of admiration and an unending source of fruitful example," said the envoy. "All our sympathies belong to a country which has always been in the vanguard of liberty and progress."

Replying President Coolidge declared that "it will afford me great pleasure to see the common interests of our countries' advance."

The visit here of Secretary Davis was arranged to enable him to discuss departmental matters with the executive before sailing Saturday for Europe. It was said there was no pressing problem requiring the attention of the president but it was considered a certainty that the secretary, who keeps in close touch with the labor situations, will discuss with Mr. Coolidge the possibility of a suspension of operations in the anthracite fields, giving him first hand information as to his knowledge of the situation there.

WORKING OUT PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT ORGANIZATION

WASHINGTON, July 16.—(AP)—Despite an avalanche of applications for jobs under the new regime together with maneuvers by political leaders in behalf of constituents, Assistant Secretary Andrews of the treasury plowed ahead today with his plans to work out an effective enforcement organization.

Political phases of the prohibition situation still were much in the limelight, but Mr. Andrews reiterated that he was seeking the twenty-two best men available for appointment as administrators. Although he received numerous personal calls today, he found time to begin a study of means of establishing a better blockade of the international borders.

The bureau's weighted index number, covering the wholesale prices of 404 commodities, rose from 155.2 in May to 157.43 in June.

Strong price advances were noted in cattle, hogs, hay, potatoes, fuel and wool, while declines were shown in corn, wheat, rye and milk.

Rubber prices averaged nearly five per cent. higher in June than in May.

PASSENGER SERVICE BY AIR FROM BOSTON TO NEW YORK

Provided For in Call For Sealed Bids by the Postofice Department—Service Will Be Privately Owned and Operated—Time From Boston to New York Will Be 2 Hours and 20 Minutes, at the Rate of 90 Miles an Hour—Time From Hartford to New York 1 Hour and 5 Minutes—From Hartford to Boston 1 Hour and 15 Minutes.

HARTFORD, July 16—Passenger service is to be provided on the privately owned and operated Boston to New York air mail route, Postmaster Harry K. Taylor announced here today after information received from Postmaster General Harry S. New in Washington.

With New York only an hour and five minutes distant, flying time, and with Boston only ten minutes farther from Hartford, Mr. Business Man or his wife or anybody, making the proper reservations, can climb into the cockpit of the mailman's plane and soar away into the dusk, leaving Hartford at 8:15 p. m., standard time and arriving in New York at 9:20 with still time to keep appointments and transact business.

The same business man can leave New York again about 6 o'clock the next morning and circling down to Brainard field here at 7:20, can go home to breakfast with his family and be at the downtown office with the start of the day's business. Or, if he prefers, he can go through Hartford on the mail plane in which he left New York at 6 a. m., to arrive in Boston at 8:20, in time for a late breakfast there.

It takes Mr. Hartford Business Man or any other passenger boarding the train at Union station here, three hours to get to New York by rail and three hours and fifteen minutes to get to Boston by train. The whole rail route from New York to Boston by rail takes six hours and thirteen minutes. The mail plane will cover the 250 miles in two hours and twenty minutes, traveling ninety miles an hour.

The sealed contracts bids asked for provide for "the carrying of the United States mail on the Boston-New York route with the most advantageous schedule by safe and suitable aircraft."

The schedule, making connections for the night plane west to Chicago out of New York, cuts the transit period from Hartford to Chicago by seven full hours. Letters which formerly had to be in the air mail drop of the main post office here before noon can be written and mailed here nearly as late as 7 p. m., allowing only time for the transmission of the mail pouch by motor truck over the mile and a half of bad roads to Brainard field, Superintendent of Mails Frank D. Munger said today.

TREASURER OF MOODUS SAVINGS BANK 55 YEARS

MOODUS, July 16—Fifty five years a bank treasurer is the record attained by Eugene W. Chaffee, who tonight was elected to begin his fifty sixth year as treasurer of the Moodus Savings bank.

The bank was organized on July 14th, 1870, and Mr. Chaffee was then elected its treasurer. Probably none other in the state has held a similar position so long. The late Congressman E. Stevens Henry was for nearly that length of time treasurer of the People's Savings bank, of Rockville.

Mr. Chaffee was born in Chicopee Falls, Mass., April 20, 1842, and came here with his parents at the age of seven. He served in the civil war and is the single survivor of Company E, Connecticut Volunteers. In his service of three years he was wounded at Deep Bottom, Va., August 14, 1864.

A group of Windsor, Ont., businessmen signed the request and a few hours later received word from the executive's secretary that it had been given to Mr. Coolidge.

A close personal friend of the president will intercede for Scott the message said.

The blaze was extinguished before any great damage was done. Scores of silos were overturned.

ERSTWHILE CONFIDENCE WOMAN ILL IN HOSPITAL

NYACK, N. Y., July 16.—(AP)—Mrs. Ellen E. Peck, 95, who was once known to police as "the queen of confidence women" and one of the most remarkable woman criminals in America, is in Nyack hospital recovering from an operation.

Her husband, Reuben Peck, who has stood by her for 65 years during which she has been in prison four times, is waiting for her to return to their cottage in Sparkill, near here.

Since 1912 Mrs. Peck, who her husband says was falsely branded as a criminal, has been living quietly in Sparkill. Last night she became seriously ill from varicose veins and was taken to the hospital.

Born of a good Vermont family, Mrs. Peck was a teacher at Mount Holyoke seminary before she was accused of crime in 1878. She was acquitted of the charge of swindling a soap manufacturer of $18,000, but from then on she was constantly being arrested for swindles in which she was believed to have made thousands of dollars.

During the years when police were always watching her her husband continued to proclaim her innocence, and whenever she went to prison he waited for her to come out. In 1909, when she was 69, she was sentenced to ten years for obtaining $2,000 under false pretenses, the judge expressing regret that she must die in prison. In 1912 however, she was pardoned and the prison gates closed behind her for the last time.

12-YEAR-OLD GIRL RESCUED BY BRIDGEPORT FIREMAN

BRIDGEPORT, July 16—(A. P.)—Ethel Wiley, 12, was overcome by smoke and two families were forced to flee for their lives when fire, believed to have started from a short circuit, damaged a two-family house at 121 Hough avenue to the extent of $2,000 here tonight.

Fireman Frank H. Reh, of Chemical Company No. 3, although off duty, risked his life when the screams of a child reached him as he was passing the burning house. Reh crashed into the house and stumbling up the stairs gathered the then unconscious girl in his arms and staggered back through the smoke-filled hall way to the stairs, thence to the street, from where the child was taken to the Bridgeport hospital. Her condition is not considered critical.

The child and her aged grandfather were the only two members of the family home when the fire started.

A Buick sedan driven by Paul Welch and one of the fleet of cars owned by the Hartford-Willimantic Jitney Association, figured in, an accident Thursday morning about 8:30 o'clock on West Main street. Welch was covering the Coventry-Andover run with a lone passenger and just beyond the Connecticut Company car barn, the driver of another car started to pass the one driven by Welch. Still another machine approached from the west, causing Welch, it is said, to run into the gutter and on the sidewalk, to avoid a collision. The Buick car struck a telephone pole before being halted a few feet from the east gate of the Willimantic cemetery. Neither the driver nor his passenger was injured. The machine became unmanageable owing to the fact that a half-nut on the steering post worked loose. Damage to the amount of about $250 was done to the Buick car.

Complaint was made to the police at eight o'clock Wednesday by Nathan Schilberg of No. 40 Temple street, second hand dealer, that children were lurking about his yard and in his belief they were there to endeavor to steal some of his property. Within a half-hour after Schilberg entered his complaint and investigation had been made by Officer Arthur Hurley, the latter was called back to Temple street. This time Schilberg was himself made a defendant on a charge of violating the automobile law by operating his automobile truck without having the tail light lighted after dark. In police court Thursday morning Schilberg pleaded not guilty to the complaint. Evidence against the accused was furnished by Daniel Ladda, Joseph Beaudry and Officer Hurley, who made the arrest. Schilberg's story to the court was that he had been out riding with his wife an don Main street he learned that some children were hanging about his yard. He left his car parked on Main street and came home to call up the police, after he had investigated. Later he drove the car home and just as he reached there, the tail light went out. His lights, he said, were always in working order, up to this time. Mrs. Schilberg's testimony corroborated that of her husbands except that she became slightly confused in relating the time that she and her husband were riding. The tail light was lighted during the evening, she said. Judge Frank H. Foss was inclined to give the accused the benefit of the doubt and found him not guilty but issued a warning for him to be careful in the future.

Mrs. Rys was arrested Wednesday afternoon by State Policeman Kamninski, on lower Main street during the eviction of a family from one of the American Thread Company's tenements.

Patrick Shea, charged with intoxication said that if the officer who arrested him said that he was drunk, he was probably right. This was accepted as a plea of guilty by the court. Shea was arrested Wednesday morning, shortly before daylight. A fine of fifteen dollars and costs, amounting to $22.15 was paid.

When arrested Wednesday morning on Main street, on a charge of violating the city's traffic laws, Sam Sankowitz, of New York, expressed both surprise and indignation. The charge against him was that he parked his machine in front of the Hotel Hooker from nine o'clock Wednesday evening until the officer arrested him Thursday morning. The violation was considered all the more flagrant due to the fact that the car was parked several inches from the curbing with the rear of the machine projecting at an angle and constituting a menace to traffic. Sankowitz entered a plea of guilty and was fined five dollars and costs, amounting to $10.15. This sum was considerably more than if he had gone to the trouble of housing his car in a garage overnight.

Civil action has been instituted by Attorney Samuel B. Harvey of this city against Harry and Beatrice R. Snyder of the town of Mansfield. Damages of one hundred dollars are claimed by the plaintiff. A short time ago, the latter Spector gave a check to his son, Morris Spector, payable to cash, for the amount of ten dollars. The check was cashed by Breitschneider and upon being presented at a local bank, it was not honored, as the defendant in the case had given notice to stop payment. Breitschneider seeks to have Spector make good the money furnished on the check. Thursday afternoon Constable Joseph Peck attached an automobile truck belonging to the defendant. The case is returnable before Justice of the Peace Curtis Dean August 3rd.

A Ford touring car owned and operated by J. P. Bocash, No. 38 Ash street overturned on Jackson street Wednesday evening in front of the residence of Mrs. Mary W. Sullivan. A defective steering knuckle was responsible for the accident. In the car were several of Mr. Bocash's children, all of whom escaped serious injury, due probably to the fact that the car was traveling slowly. One of the children was slightly scratched. The top of the machine was badly damaged by the accident and the windshield was shattered. Mr. Bocash drove the machine away under its own power, after it had been righted.

The case is returnable before the next civil term of the Windham county superior court.

Patrick Shea of Lowell, Mass., an employe of the American Thread Company was assaulted by some unknown men Thursday forenoon, about eleven o'clock. Shea claims that he was in a Union street restaurant and when he came out, he was attacked and struck several blows on the face. Shea said that he did not know the identity of the parties who assaulted him. The authorities are conducting an investigation.

JEWETT CITY

Another big store is taking its place in an already over-stored town. Like the stories recalled of Deadwood and Roaring Gulch, stores seem to spring up in a night. A man goes up a street today remarking to himself about the vacant lots. Within two weeks a stroll is taken through the same section. There is a house, garage and a store actually doing business! Not to remark about any side issues that finds ready patronage.

It is well that the old-time merchants made their piles, because sharp competition by dozens of stores, has relegated million dollar profit accounts to the discard.

Northbound passengers on the trolley are talking about the radical change in riding, when the cars go onto the new and heavy rails just below Bishop's. From rattlety-bang, to smooth as grease, constitutes an agreeable change, much appreciated.

Finn's Tonight and Saturday.—July 4th Parade Pictures.—Adv.

The electric light and power was shut off in parts of the borough system Thursday, because of Conn. Co., linemen at work on the high tension wires.

A man who years ago was accustomed to go huckleberrying in the one time George Holmes pasture, took a turn over that way Wednesday. Returning with an empty basket, he told the story of time and change. Where once grew fine bushes loaded with luscious fruit, he found rank growths of shrubs and great trees fifteen feet high.

There was a little excitement in the borough Thursday afternoon when a circus billing gang went through, bound south. The machine was stepping right along. Now and then a hand bill worked loose and went fluttering beside the road. Paste was spattering over from the big cans, while the genial looking colored bill posters, all dressed in white, were salaaming right and left.

People returning from trips along the country roads are reporting fireweed, the great willow herb, all in finest bloom. This gorgeous mid-summer flower is among those that the pupils of the grammar school miss, for their herberiums and flower study generally close with the last day of school.

In midsummer this striking plant begins to mass its deep hued blossoms along the roadsides and low meadows. It is supposed to flourish with especial abundance in land that has been newly burned over, hence, its common local name of fireweed. Between Jewett City and the tunnel many patches of this bright pink flower are in bloom.

No man can make a fool of himself all the time. He has to sleep occasionally.

MANN WHITE SLAVE ACT CHARGE INCIDENTAL TO THE STRIKE

(Special to the Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, July 16.—Acting Chief Henry J. Kelley was unanimously appointed permanent chief of the Willimantic fire department, to succeed to the late James J. Tighe, at the postponed July meeting of the common council held Thursday night, with Mayor George W. Hickey presiding.

Michael J. English was promoted from acting to permanent lieutenant and assistant to the chief. Michael F. Sullivan was named to fill the vacancy caused in the ranks of the permanent members of the department by this promotion. Edward J. Moran was appointed to fill the vacancy as steward to Hose Company No. 1, which Fireman Sullivan held. The elevation of Mr. Moran leaves still another vacancy for call member of Hose Company No. 1.

As the meeting was about to close Alderman James J. Lee arose and protested against the inactivity of the council in remedying what he termed the deplorable conditions in the third ward, as a result of the strike of the American Thread company. Alderman Lee said that the language being used in that section at this time was not fit for decent people to hear and he charged that the orders of the local police were being overridden by the state police quartered in that section.

He made the accusation that violations of the Mann White Slave Act were quite frequent in the third ward, since the company had brought girls from out of town to work in the mill.

He also mentioned the failure of the Thread company to arbitrate and read an article by Chief Justice Taft, recommending arbitration. The tax rating of the company was also attacked in his remarks.

Mayor Hickey stated that the question was one for the police committee to act upon and for the reporters to do their best. The meeting adjourned at this point.

In the other business taken up was included the appeal of Benjamin Hochberg and Hyman Israel, Railroad street merchants, to have the five minute parking on that street extended to forty minutes. The police and ordinance committee will investigate.

The water works committee was authorized to purchase a necessary supply of water for the city during the coming year in case of a drought. The police committee was given power to purchase a "stop and go" sign to be placed at the head of Railroad street on the main thoroughfare.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

The Putnam Light & Power company and the Danielson & Plainfield Gas & Electric company have been fortunate in securing Frank G. Dean as manager of their gas departments. Mr. Dean goes to them with 20 years' experience in every phase of the gas industry, therefore, is well qualified to assume the responsibilities of these departments. Every housewife will be glad to know that Mr. Dean has made an intensive study of home requirements under actual conditions in the principal cities of the East and South. One of his first duties therefore will be to see that every appliance in the home is performing in its most efficient manner and to the satisfaction of its owner. Gas consumers at Putnam and Danielson will now be able to call for the services of Mr. Dean's department and receive prompt and courteous attention to any gas problem they may have, without assuming any obligation.

At Attawaugan Thursday morning, Mrs. A. Manderville, a woman over 80, was somewhat injured when she ran into an automobile driven by Edward Hall, of Plainfield. It appears that she rarely ever crosses the street, but did go out on the state highway Thursday morning, to attract the attention of a passing milkman. It is believed she became confused and ran into the Hall machine while trying to evade another that was about to pass. Mrs. Manderville was not seriously hurt, in so far as could be ascertained, though she was in bed Thursday afternoon. She was given attention by Dr. W. H. Judson.

While no definite statement is available as to the probability of a reduction of the indebtedness of the town during the fiscal year, that will close July 31, it may be said that the school committee is within its estimate of expense submitted to the financial meeting of the town last March and the same is true of the selectmen. Economy has been exercised rigorously, with due care for proper administration.

Jerome Keach has a broken wrist, an injury sustained while he was endeavoring to crank the motor of one of the large trucks he uses in his business operation.

"What's that about wearing a button when we are hunting and fishing in 1925?" the sportsmen are asking. Well, it is one of the new wrinkles in the fish and game laws of the state and it will be enforced. The button will bear a license number and will at once indicate to all observers that the hunter or fisherman is licensed to be at large on stream or field. This button law is similar to one passed this year in Oklahoma and recalled to the mind of Town Clerk Frank T. Preston that Virginia has a provision in its game laws requiring sportsmen to wear a sort of banner across their shoulders when they are hunting or fishing as evidence they are duly licensed.

Much has been said in this column about what many regard as excessive whistling by locomotives in going through Danielson. Railroad men will tell one that too much warning cannot be given of trains approaching grade crossings. This is true. If one observes the reckless way in which scores of drivers approach crossings and dash over them, one will get an idea of the railroad people's viewpoint. Check-up after check-up by various observers show that about two drivers out of twenty slow down for grade crossings. They take a chance.

The following list of building permits has been approved by the warden and court of burgesses: J. H. Hammett, Broad street, veranda; Leslie Shippee, Westfield avenue, eight-room dwelling; Charles Phoenix, Winter street, four-car garage; Mrs. Irene Keronach, Dyer street, dwelling; Sixto Poliano, North street, two-story dwelling; Emma F. Pelling, repairing house on Furnace street; Albina R. Heroux, Prospect street, dwelling; John Nizodlik, garage, Prospect street; Alfred Genreau, Broad street, garage; Leon Peloquin, Maryland street, addition to house; Joseph Briere, Prospect street, bungalow; Alex Abraham, Mechanic street, shed; Thomas Gallichant, Furnace street, shed; Charles M. Dupre, Chestnut street house.

Death came almost instantly, Wednesday morning, to Miss Genevieve Bassett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bassett, at the family home in the Moosup Valley section, a short distance from North Sterling. The young woman, who was in her 20's, was a deaf mute. She arose early while other members of the household were still in bed and her father at the barn preparing milk to be shipped to Providence. The report of a shotgun awakened her mother and other members of the family and they found her body in the kitchen. Just exactly what happened probably never will be known, though it is believed that the shooting was accidental.

The funeral of Mrs. Elmire Thibeault was held from her home on the West Side with services at St. James' church, Rev. Joseph Deschaux, M. S., being celebrant of the high mass of requiem. Burial was in Holy Cross cemetery. The bearers were Denis Boucher, H. Pelky, V. Pelky, Adelard Beauvin and Frederick Langevin. L. E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangments.

A motor truck loaded with what looked like tons and tons of quahaugs attracted attention as it came into a local filling station for gas. Surveying the great collection of bivalves with interest, a distinguished resident opined that here, as a substitution for the wampu mof old, was the contribution of King George Jacques to pay his kingdom's apportionment of the allied debt.

An umbrella, a compact and a bobbed hair comb are among the souvenirs at the selectmen's office. These articles have been there since graduation day, when the rooms were in use for a time by members of the student body of the high school.

At Westfield cemetery, Thursday at 11 o'clock, Rev. Leonard Richards, of St. Alban's church, conducted a committal service over the ashes of Miss Clara B. Stevens, who died in Glendale, Calif., June 24. A. F. Wood was in charge of the arrangements.

Mrs. Mabel Leavens, of Wauregan, is at Stratford, spending the summer with relatives.

July 18 to 25, inclusive, the Arce-Eleanor shop will allow 20 per cent. discount on its entire stock, excepting corsets; some odd lots of corsets at special reduced prices.—Adv.

Mrs. Walter Jacobs and children, of Panama, have arrived here to spend the summer. Commander Jacobs, U. S. N., is remaining on duty in the Canal Zone.

Thursday brought the second half-holiday for the store forces of Danielson and afforded opportunities for outings.

Frank C. Graymont, of Providence, was a visitor with friends in Danielson, Thursday.

The Danielson Rod and Gun club has plans for the release of trout in brooks hereabouts, later in the season.

Mrs. Arthur Hughes, of the staff of the Brooklyn Savings bank, is having a vacation.

FOURTH ARREST MADE IN THE DANSEREAU CASE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, July 16.— With Charles Dansereau bound over Thursday, from the town court of Plainfield, to await trial in the superior court as a receiver of stolen automobiles, Connecticut and Massachusetts state police engaged during the afternoon in a search of the Dansereau premises for more stolen goods. In the meantime, Leo Gagne, 20, has been apprehended and brought here from South Norwalk by State Officer A. W. Williams. His is the fourth arrest in connection with the case. Gagne and Walter Francis, who has been kept at the state police barracks here since the past week-end, admit that they stole the Dodge coupe that had been partly dissembled at the Dansereau place before discovery of the band was made last week. The body had been removed from the chassis, tires taken off and other parts removed. This car was stolen in Worcester June 15, and is the property of Irving O. Jaffe, of that city. Massachusetts state officers took Gagne and Francis, 17, back to Worcester, Thursday afternoon.

These youths have confessed that when they brought the car to Dansereau's place they told him it was a stolen car. He wanted to trade with them, offering a Hudson he had at the place at the time, but they declined. They say that Dansereau finally agreed to take the Dodge and allege that he gave each of them $5 in full payment for the machine.

Francis has given the state police much information about his operations in Worcester and has told of numerous trips he had made between that city and the Dansereau farm, about three miles southeast of Danielson, off the Moosup pond road. It does not appear from anything that Francis has said that he ever profited much financially from his dealings with Dansereau.

PUTNAM

The city council at its July meeting, passed the following amendment to an ordinance: "That no vehicle shall be left standing on the south side of Front street between Main street and the Bradley Building, or on the west side of Main street between Bridge street and Bundy street. Vehicles that are loaded and unloaded are exempt from these provisions. This ordinance to be in effect from and after its passage and legal publication."

By motion of Council, the Fire Committee will investigate conditions on Woodstock avenue and South Main street in regard to placing additional fire alarm boxes at positions on these streets which are at present some distance from an alarm box. The installation of an alarm box costs about $125 but the opinion was expressed in the council that this is a small amount when compared to the value of the property protected.

In the milk report, which is a laboratory test report of two samples from each of six milk dealers, two made very good showings, notably Jerome, Shippe and John Rice, with one or two others with a good report for one of the samples.

The building permits, which were referred to the Highway committee with power to act, were: Alphonse Jarvis, for a garage on Marshall street; James Donavan, for the addition of porches to three houses on Providence street; Eli Vangel, for a garage on Wilkinson street and that of Newton A. Ballard for an addition of a woodshed at the corner of Church and Green streets.

Captain of Police William J. Jarvis reported 25 arrests for June, for the following causes: drunkenness, 13; breach of peace, 3; violation of motor laws, 4; violation of liquor laws, 2; breaking and entering, 3; damage to property, 1; cruelty to animals, 1. The cases were disposed of as follows: committed to jail, 2; care of probation officer, 4; continued, 2; bound over, 4; judgment suspended, 1. Thirteen paid fines and cost, amounting to $486.10.

The signatures of several interested residents of Woodstock Ave., were attached to a petition asking for more street lights at the place known as Anderson's Corner. This petition was referred to the light committee with power to act.

Those present at this meeting were Aldermen Rogers, Berthiaume, Labby, Dubois and Ames with Acting Mayor Richard presiding.

Dan Richardson, president and Rev. S. E. Cozad, an active member of the Mansfield, Mass., Rotary club, were guests of the Putnam Rotary Club at their weekly meeting. Mr. Richardson made formal presentation of the Rotary shield given by his organization to the local one. Rev. Mr. Cozad, who was formerly pastor of the Second Congregational church here, gave a talk of some length, in which he recalled incidents of his residence here and expressed his pleasure at renewing friendships. Mr. Cozad was a member of the Putnam Rotary Club and when he removed to Mansfield was instrumental in the organization of a Rotary Club there.

William Earl Hughes, formerly of Putnam, now of Springfield, Mass., is to marry in August, Miss Mabel Jenkins, of Holyoke, Mass. Mr. Hughes has spent nearly all of his life in Putnam and for three years up until a short time ago has been employed as salesman by the Buick Motor company of this city.

Mrs. Charles Rawley and Mrs. Thomas Rawley motored to Slatersville Thursday to visit friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bonin and family of North Grosvenordale are at their cottage at Union Point, Webster, for the summer.

The mills at Monson, Mass., which were occupied by the Monson Worsted Company, organized by and conducted by Thomas J. Corcoran, formerly of this city, have been sold. A news dispatch from there says:

"Monson Worsted Mills which have been in use for textile purposes were sold today to a corporation, the Monson Associates, Inc., according to a quit claim deed which was filed in the County Registry of Deeds at Springfield. This deed indicates that about $32,000 was paid for the property."

The Monson Company as well as Mr. Corcoran was one of the heaviest borrowers from the First National Bank and from its cashier, G. Harold Gilpatric. What percentage will be recovered is problematical.

HEADQUARTERS CO. MIXES FUN WITH WORK AT NIANTIC

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, July 16.—The following letter has been received from sergeant F. H. Lamondy of the 43rd Division Headquarters company now in camp at Niantic:

Camp Trumbull, Niantic, July 15.

The 43rd Div., Hq. Co. left for camp with 57 enlisted men and 2 officers, at 10:05 Saturday, June 11. All was fine on the train. Music, singing and cards passed the time pleasantly. Major Darbie, in command of all special troops of the division, joined us at Danielson. At New London the fun began, we being held there for three hours, arriving at 11:53; did not leave until after 3 p. m. Reached Camp Trumbull shortly before 4, only to find that our tents were not up. By 8 o'clock we were all through mess and had our camp settled. The mess sergeant and cooks deserve great credit for getting up supper in a hurry and for the excellent mess we have had since. Chicken for dinner and supper Sunday. Oh Boy! Sunday was quiet, mostly bunk fatigue, though several details went to headquarters.

We had a short, sharp shower Sunday afternoon just before mess, but it took more than the shower to cut the edge of our appetites. Sunday night was a great one for sleep, though a little cool.

1st Cl. Private Thibeault picked up a team and gave Sgt. Red's team an 11 to 5 trimming. The team leaders each did the box work for their respective nines. Sgt. Davison and Private Langevin each connected for a home run. The umpire work of J. Valade and Dad Beausoleil was rotten. In the evening some good boxing matches were pulled off. Bennett and O. J. Valade gave the star exhibition of the evening, with that of the Labeau twins and the one between Dupre and Phaneuf were close seconds. Corp. Murphy acted as referee.

Monday evening the 165th Regiment held its annual rookie entertainment. It was some show! After giving the rookies a good going over the band led a parade around the camp with the victims dolled up in all sorts of queer costumes.

The team held a practice game after the parade, with the 55th Brigade Hq team, which ended in a tie, 6-6. Sgt Red did the pitching for the 43rd. Tomorrow night a real game will be staged with the same team.

The company from Capt. McGarry down the ranks are in fine trim and are having a good time. We have moving pictures every night and good ones, too. There are five musicians in the company and we have some fine concerts every evening.

SGT. F. H. LAMONDY,
43rd Div. Hq. Co.
Camp Trumbull, Niantic, Conn.

A few might-have-been accidents since landing:

Sergt. Bazaillon's sick stomach; Sergt. Bennett's "Cold"; Broken "Ginger Ale" bottles found Sunday morning; Lieut Beausoleil's sunburn; Private Dufresne and his sore jaw; Private Child and the chicken bones; Sergt. Davison's home run.

The boxing tournament for the championship of the camp is expected to start soon. The following have expressed their intention of entering: 120 lb. Class, Corp. Lacoux; 130 lb. Class, Private Phaneuf; 140 lb. Class, Private Dupre, Private O. J. Valade, Sergt. Bennett; 155 lb. Class, Private Beausoleil; 160 lb. Class, Privates Thibeault, Mayotte and Freniere; 165 lb. Class, Corporal Murphy.

CHAS. DANSEREAU HELD, FOR RECEIVING STOLEN CAR

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PLAINFIELD, July 16.—Over one hundred eager spectators crowded into the court room at Central Village, Thursday morning, to hear the case of Charles Dansereau, alleged to have received stolen automobiles, which was tried before Judge George H. Torrey. Prosecuting Attorney B. W. Danielson, of Moosup, represented the state and Harry E. Back, of Danielson, the defendant. Irving H. Joffe, of Worcester, owner of the stolen Dodge car which was found on the Dansereau property, was called on the witness stand. He was given a direct examination by the prosecutor. He stated that his car was stolen from Washington and Bradley street in Worcester, about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, June 15. The engine number of the car was A120537. Mr. Joffe stated that he was an insurance man and had purchased the car from the Used Car Exchange in Worcester. He was not cross-examined by the defendant's attorney.

The next witness for the state was State Policeman Roscoe Urquotte of the Danielson barracks. He told the court that July 9 he visited the property of Dansereau and with defendant's permission searched the place, finding the chassis of the stolen Dodge car, also found a disc wheel in the kitchen of the Dansereau place and fifty feet from the house in the bushes found two bumpers.

July 11 he again went to the Dansereau place and in searching found the body of the coupe, hidden in bushes about 300 yards from the house.

The state police officer was cross-examined by defendant's attorney. He called the attention to the officer and asked if he had not given news to The Bulletin reporter. He stated that he had. Attorney Back asked why and for what purpose witness had given data to a Bulletin correspondent, and was answered, "For news only."

The next state witness, Corp. Oliver W. LeBlanc, of the Massachusetts State police, gave evidence the same as that of Officer Urquotte, with the exception as to the days of the search, which were the 9th and 11th. The witness was not cross-examined. Officer Urquotte was called to the stand and corrected his statements as to the dates on which search was made.

The next state witness was Walter Francis, core-maker of Worcester. He stated that on a certain day in June, while walking along the street, he came to the Dodge coupe in which a man named Leo Gagnon was sitting. Asked where he was going, Gagnon replied "Swimming." Witness got into the coupe and after a while landed at the Dansereau place in Moosup.

Two days after, Francis stated, he returned to Worcester. He went back to Moosup after a short stay in Worcester. Dansereau asked him if he could sell his Hudson car and witness replied that he could. With markers that belonged to the stolen Dodge coupe doctored up, he drove the Hudson car as far as Oxford, where he ran short of gasoline and burned out a bearing in the front wheel. He stated that Dansereau told him to bring back a Reo truck, after he had disposed of the Hudson.

The prosecutor requested that the judge hold the accused for superior court in September and recommended that bail be set at three thousand dollars. The prosecutor and the defendant's attorney clashed over the amount of bail and after a discussion which lasted a half an hour the judge fixed the bond at one thousand dollars.

What a sociable world this would be if a man's neighbors were half as glad to see him on his return from a month's trip as he thinks they ought to be!

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

Merchants Night proved another great success at the Palace last night, more than twenty-five valuable presents were given away.

The vaudeville bill was the most pleasing being opened with an overture under the able direction of William S. Jeffs.

The opening act was two Melodist Steppers, Hartgraves and Kennedy who certainly showed the audience the last word in soft-shoe dancing.

Walter O'Keefe followed with some snappy songs and chatter accompanied by his ukelele and left the audience calling for more.

Pete Curley and Co. finished a line of comedy that couldn't be beat and kept the house roaring the full fifteen minutes they were on.

Hayes and Lockwood furnished the hokem for the bill which proved a mine of fun for everybody. Over and over again they were called for more.

The star act on the bill were the Australian Wood-Choppers who gave a unique exhibition which was in every way practical the wood being sawed and the chopping done until the stage was filled with litter, all the air with flying chips; an act which is different, the wood-choppers give a turn which brings down the house at every blow, their skill with an ax being almost uncanny.

The feature picture is "One Law For The Woman" a picture with much action but real good entertainment. Combined with the vaudeville makes a great show and should be seen by all.

Broadway Theatre

The special inducement day at the Broadway Theatre was such a huge success yesterday that the management has arranged to have another one of these special days today and don't fail to be there.

The program was an outstanding one and pleased everybody. And it's Keith Vaudeville and a Paramount Picture.

Sis and Buddy Roberts in a Study in Youth present a revue of song and dance that is as clever as it is pleasing.

Evelyn Weaver is a singing comedienne who has a lurical voice, that is filled with humor and made doubly funny by their rendition.

William Morrow and Co., in "Sometime Somewhere" has a bag full of fun and songs. Mr. Morrow has laughed his way to popularity with the aid of a laughing song which he made famous. You're going to be convulsed with laughter when you see him.

Lew Charlotte and Billy followed in a routine of comedy songs and piano playing that seemed to strike just the right spot.

Loretta and Baltus was dainty and different in a routine of acrobatics that finishes with a sensational finale.

Salome of the Tenements, a romance of an East Side girl who sets out to become a "somebody" in the world opened yesterday at the Broadway Theatre. It's a Paramount picture, produced by Sidney Olcott, who made "The Green Goddess," "The Humming Bird," and others, from the novel by Anzia Yezierska, author of "Hungry Hearts." Sonya Levien made the adaptation. Jetta Goudal, Godfrey Tearle and Jose Ruben are featured.

"Salome of the Tenements" is a story with "Humoresque" appeal—heart-appealing, true-to-life and genuinely entertaining.

At the Breed

Local theater-goers need not fret and worry because they miss most of the big New York stage successes each season as long as the screen keeps up a pace in turning these successful stage dramas into motion pictures and presenting them in the same splendid style that William Fox gives us in The Law, which earned its spurs as a big Broadway play, and which comes to the Breed theater, today and Saturday after much heralding as "a big special motion picture production of the new season." "It is the Law" is worthy of all its extra adjectives. It is big and special in every way, but chiefly as entertainment.

Having now achieved all three mediums of expression—a novel, a stage play and a film—we venture the wager that the greatest of these is the film version. William Fox has given a lavish production to one of the most thrilling and melodramatic tales written during the present day. It is principally a mystery story built on the theme that a man cannot be punished twice by the law for the same offense. Besides its great story it has one of the most interesting variety of scenic backgrounds ever presented on the screen and a cast of actors that could not be improved upon. Arthur Hohl, a Broadway stage star, heads the cast, playing a dual role that calls upon all of his fine talent. Mimi Palmeira, Herbert Heyes, Florence Dixon and a number of other principal players, together with about 400 extras, assist in support.

If you like plenty of thrills, mystery, change of scenery, pretty girls, etc., with your entertainment, then you'll find it waiting for you in full portion at the Breed theater.

DEALING WITH COUNTERFEITERS

For some time warnings have been issued concerning the large amount of counterfeit money in circulation. It has been evident that the counterfeiters were not only making money that would pass except under close scrutiny, but that they were meeting with success in getting rid of it. Such is not a pleasing state of affairs for those who are handling little or much money.

From the arrest of a group in New York engaged in the distribution of such money, it appears that the federal authorities have thrown their net about part at least of those who have succeeded in making and passing spurious money. They have a well organized scheme for disposing of the fake paper and they found no apparent difficulty in getting young women to aid in the spending of the counterfeit. For the present it would appear that the ringleaders had not been located, the plates secured or the printing plant discovered.

It is the brains of such schemes which the authorities are most anxious to secure. This doesn't mean that those who go into such deals with their eyes open, as any one must who is paid a certain amount for every bill that is passed, or who is to be sold a bundle of bills at a certain figure if he can demonstrate his ability to pass them, should be overlooked when it comes to enforcing the law, but there's no telling how soon similar efforts will be undertaken again unless those who engineer the counterfeiting plots are captured and properly punished.

Counterfeiters come and go but they invariably are caught. They may succeed for a while but they do not go on indefinitely without detection. They are not entitled to any sympathy, or any leniency, for their swindling operations. They deserve the full penalty of the law, and as a warning to others as well as a lesson to themselves the inadvisability of overlooking the part which the little fellows play seems clearly established. It is because of the belief that they can get away with little or no punishment that women are employed for such work, and of course the courts are responsible for that belief.

TAX PUBLICITY

In connection with the opinions which are being expressed by members of congress concerning the course which should be pursued at the next session in regard to tax reduction, some are giving expression to their views in regard to the question of income tax publicity. There are those who are in favor of it and those who are opposed. These views are expressed of course after having seen the law in operation.

At this time arrangements are being made for again complying with the publicity requirement in September under the provisions of the law. The matter has been carried to the courts and the opinion has been expressed by the highest court in the land that the right to publish the lists that are posted for the benefit of the public cannot be denied to the newspapers. Whether congress actually intended it that way or not, the fact remains that there is no other correct interpretation, according to the court, of what it did.

Whether the publicity feature of the income tax law will remain when congress undertakes revision, as it will in December, there is no telling. But until there is a change there is nothing to do but carry out the provisions of the law and provide the facts for such use as the public cares to make of them, regardless as to whether it creates an erroneous opinion concerning tax payments or whether it is certain to be seized upon for the purpose of satisfying the curious. It will mean that there will be an eagerness to compare the taxes of individuals and neighbors as if the amounts paid actually disclosed what their income totals, when of course it is known that no provision is made for finding out how much of an income is obtained from tax exempt securities. Some of those who are the most enthusiastic about the publicity feature are men of great wealth whose money rests in bonds on the income from which no tax has to be paid. Their figures thus give an entirely wrong impression.

HIT AND RUN DRIVERS

"Hit and run" is good baseball advice, and as long as it is confined to the ball field there will be no criticism of it, but when it is taken up by motorists there is good and sufficient ground for putting a prompt and effectual stop to it.

As might be inferred the hit-and-run motorist is one who drives so recklessly that he hits someone and then proceeds to step on the gas and disappear as rapidly as possible. Such a driver arouses immediate condemnation. He blasts his own case and admits his responsibility. He is the type of driver that a speaker at the recent safety conference referred to when he advocated the adoption of "shoot-to-kill" legislation for the purpose of curbing such activity.

Philadelphia has been having an epidemic of such cases. The fact that some have gotten away seems to have inspired others to adopt such tactics, but one judge at least recognizes the need of using stern measures in such instances and put his belief into effect by sending one hit and run driver to prison for a period of four months. In following this course it must be admitted that he is on the right track.

The same course is believed by him desirable in dealing with the drunken drivers. Too much leniency has been allowed in the past. Advantage has been taken of it. Instead of bringing about a reduction of such conduct it has resulted in an increase. Judge Monaghan now declares that the treatment of such offenders by imposing fines and paroling defendants in drunken driving cases "must stop for the public's protection." He accompanied his announcement by the imposition of a 60 day jail sentence.

That is apparently one court where a proper recognition of the need has followed a careful study of the situation. The public is certainly not being served when such highway menaces are tolerated. The slap on the wrist policy simply means encouragement to repeat and for others to anticipate that they will be leniently dealt with in similar instances. The Philadelphia court recognizes its responsibility to the public under such circumstances.

DIVING

Already thus early in the summer there have been several instances where swimmers have broken their necks from diving in too shallow water. It makes little difference that professionals dive from long distances into tanks where the water is not deep, such does not justify the average swimmer in expecting that he can do the same thing.

Stunts of that kind can be accomplished only after long practice and the assumption of large risks. There are instances where the depth of water may be misjudged, or where unexpected obstructions are encountered, but if the practice were followed of making sure what the conditions are before diving there would be eliminated most of such distressing fatalities.

Diving into shallow water may be a test of ability, but is the compensation worth the risk? Stumping the leader results in too many instances of breaking the neck, while diving into water about which nothing is known or from which most swimmers keep away because of submerged spiles or jagged rocks indicates a foolhardiness which has no justification.

It is desirable that everyone who is in good physical condition should know how to take care of himself in the water. He should have a knowledge of swimming, and with that it can be expected that he will do more or less diving. But that doesn't warrant the abandonment of due caution. He has as good reason for wanting to know what he is plunging into from the standpoint of safety quite as much as the man at the wheel needs to know whether his ship is in the channel. Till care gets the proper amount of attention such fatalities can probably be anticipated.

AMBITIOUS MOROS

When we are told that the Moros have made a request of the Manila government that they be given more roads and more schools it indicates not only the remarkable change which has been brought about among those people but the effect which the control assumed by this country has had.

The Moros were warriors. They were content to fight for a living and had not been looking forward to better conditions and educational advantages. But they have had a chance to see what has been done for the Philippines, and that includes themselves, and they not only approve but they are emulating Oliver Twist and asking for more.

That must be interpreted as another good sign. The fact that they have asked for it does not mean that they are assured of getting it. Nevertheless the interest in such things from such tribesmen cannot be ignored. If they have been impressed by civilization and the methods of the white men it is to be sincerely hoped that they will not be denied the opportunity to take full advantage of such improvements as they realize they need. They have turned away from conditions of the old days and they are anxious to get still farther away. Their plea is one that ought to carry much weight. Having been encouraged to look up to and seek better things, to get away from savagery and to have ambitions for the future speaks not only volumes for the influences which have been brought to bear in the Philippines but should find a ready response from the Manila government. The chance for extending the good work among the Moros ought not to be neglected.

ENTICING PROSPECT

"The Finnwicks want us to rent their cottage this summer at Piecrust lake," said the mother of the family, brightly, "I think it would be just the thing to do and be such a nice change—"

"Oh, horrors!" wailed the bobbed-haired daughter in extreme anguish, "I actually never in the world saw anything more unobservant than a parent! Here we spent all last summer at Silver Fish Dells and the male population consisted of several old gentlemen who had made their wills and were serenely waiting for the end, and a mess of awful boys just in long trousers! Whenever a good-looking man did step off the ferry he was engaged and lost to one of the Smith sisters or was the husband of somebody guest.

"By September I never disliked any one so fiercely as I did Marie, Doris and Christine—and they loathed me with a deadly hatred.

"The only young man who made a prolonged stay at the hotel proved a great disappointment because he was collecting insects and butterflies for some institution and was interested in nothing that did not bite, fly or buzz. The only time his eyes lighted up with human emotion was when a pale green moth floated in and sat on his coat sleeve one evening when I actually had cornered him on the veranda and started into brighten up his dull life a trifle. Rapturously exclaiming, 'Ha! A perfect specimen of the medulla oblongata!' he dashed away to stick a pin into it.

"That Doris Browne put it all over the rest of us for some time by always using the long-distance telephone when any one was around to see her do it. There he would sit behind the glass, cooing into the phone and turning a pretty pink as she listened and we hung around wondering who he was and why he didn't come up to the Dells, and what was his name and all that—and do you know that girl paid all sorts of telephone tolls talking into the empty air so far as the other end of the line was concerned? She would call some number and then keep right on with her one-sided conversation while the bewildered party at the other end of the line would yell hello and demand to know who it was and what she wanted to and ha— up in wrath and perplexity. The wires got crossed one day and we caught on to her.

"Another serious point is that when we girls are dragged away for the summer we have to abandon all our careful winter's work and somebody else reaps where we have sown! When you have a young man in the tender frame of mind where he is beginning to think that light in the window, a wife at the door and home-made fried chicken on the gas range, with an apple pie on the kitchen table, is just about all the world holds, it is silly to fade out and let the impatient and envious observers hop your preserves. You are likely to come back in the fall and find your dearest friend calling him lovey-boy and telling you they expect to do Europe on their wedding trip.

"I suppose Piecrust lake is just like all the other places and no mother, with her daughter's interests at heart, would consider for a minute—"

"Mrs. Finnwick says, in her note," broke in the mother of the family in a most casual manner, "that the family next to her cottage has two handsome unmarried sons, who come up each week-end and who intend to spend a month there this summer fishing and canoeing and that the are most exceptional young business men—"

"Of course, mother," the bobbed-haired daughter interrupted, with an aroused glint in her eye, "it really might be rude to refuse the Finnwicks' offer when she has given us first chance, and on the whole I think you need the fresh air and quiet. I don't want to be selfish in the matter at all. And we might as well go real early if we're going, too!"—Chicago News.

The moment at that time was not completed and the cat jumped from a height of about 150 feet, alighted on all fours, lay on the ground for a few minutes, and then got up and walked away. The jump was witnessed by a few persons who were dismayed when a dog pounced upon the cat a few seconds after it started to walk away and killed it.

From Small Beginnings

Philip Hone, the Auctioneer, Founder of Savings Banks

Savings banks are so numerous in New York City, and so well patronized, that they have become an essential feature of city life, an element of strength in developing social order and in improving life. It seems scarcely possible that there ever was a time when there were no savings banks in New York City. Yet there was such a time. The man who gave to New York City the idea of establishing banks for savings and for the cultivation of thrift was Philip Hone, who was once only an auctioneer.

"He certainly has the power of talk," a man said one day after he had stood listening to Philip Hone who was the auctioneer at a sale of goods on that occasion. "Yes, he knows just what to say to make me want to buy something. I know if I go to an auction that that man runs that I shall come home with something under my arm. He knows how to sell things." At first Philip Hone had made only a modest success in his work as auctioneer, but as time went on and he learned more of the work he developed his business in a huge success. He and his brother worked together, both of them capable young men, full of ambition, and both of them equally ready to work long hours, and to do their best. They had started active work when quite young, and so by the time Philip Hone was 36 he had brought together what in that year 1816, was looked upon as a good fortune. He had been thrifty and saving and had invested his savings wisely. He saw that other people lost money, or spent it foolishly. Therefore, in middle life, he urged the founding of a bank designed to encourage people to save money. That was the beginning of all savings banks in New York City.

Ten years later his fellow citizens made Philip Hone mayor of New York of that day, then only a small city. Thus introduced successfully to political life Philip Hone found larger interests and made himself familiar with all that was taking place in the country at large. His name should be written in letters of bronze as an inspiration to others to work hard, to rise in life, and to do something to benefit their fellows.

CHILD TRAINING

BE FAIR TO OTHER PEOPLE'S CHILDREN

Mrs. Hattie R. Boyer

Is there anything more unfair than passing judgment on the children of others? It will eventually react on the one doing it, especially on parents who think their own children without serious faults, as compared with their playmates.

Time after time, I've heard a mother remarks: "My child is the best youngster! He wouldn't think of touching a thing that didn't belong to him, and he would never tell me an untruth."

Then I think of my visit some time ago at the home of such parents. They had a small daughter who seemed to me a very charming, unspoiled little girl. She was in the second year at school and at times found her work very hard but somehow managed to keep up with her grade.

The first afternoon I was there, Irene came home from school, dragging her oilcloth book sack by her side. She acted as though she could hardly carry it.

Naturally, I asked her mother why she allowed Irene to carry all her school equipment back and forth each day. It seemed so absurd to me. She replied: "I don't want my daughter's things taken. There is the biggest bunch of sneak thieves in that school. You can't trust one of them out of your sight."

I couldn't very well dispute her prejudiced notion, since I was a newcomer and didn't know the situation, so I merely said: "That's too bad. I'm sorry to hear it."

It went on for some time, the little girl dragging her things back and forth each day.

Then came the mid-term tests. I happened to be in the yard a few days after, and saw Irene coming down the road. I went to meet her, and helped carry her bag.

As I lifted it, I said, "You sure do have a load, don't you?"

I opened the sack, and took out a book to look through on our way to the house. It was a Third Reader.

"What's this?" I asked as I turned the front pages, and saw the name of another girl on the inside of the cover. "Isn't this a mistake? This isn't your book; it has someone else's name in it."

The child flushed and looked embarrassed, then falteringly replied: "O, yes, that is my book now. You see we had our exams, and teacher gave me this book 'cause I passed.'

"O, isn't that nice! Let's go in and tell Mother and Father about it," I answered.

I still held the book in my hand when we entered the house. We were met by Irene's mother, who noticed the new reader, and inquired about it. I told her just what the child had told me.

I saw that Irene seemed extremely nervous, and as soon as she could bounded out of the house, banging the door behind her. Her mother looked through the book, and she, too, noticed the name on the cover but didn't seem at all surprised. She had great confidence in her daughter.

Just then a disturbance took place in the yard. There was loud excited talking, and all of a sudden a strange little girl appeared in the doorway, and inquired brusquely: "Have you seen anything of a Third Reader? I'm just sure Irene has it. One of the girls told me she saw her creep over to my desk, and take it out. Irene felt dreadfully, and cried when teacher didn't pass her. So I guess she took it to pretend that she did pass.'

It was such a sudden blow to Irene's mother that she burst into tears, saying between sobs, "To think my own daughter is one of the sneak thieves I said you couldn't trust out of your sight! I just can't believe it, and yet it must be true. I'll never pass judgment on any other child, again, since this has come home to me!"

You see, Mothers, we should have faith in other people's children as well as in our own, and at the same time realize that our boys and girls have faults, too. Otherwise, we may receive a terrible shock some day, as Irene's mother did.

An earnest, not to say aggressive and businesslike, Indian newspaper received in London contains the following statement of its own journalistic merits: "The news of England we tell the latest. Written in perfect style and much earlier. Do a murder get commit, we hear and tell of it. Do a mighty chief die, we publish it in borders of somber. Staff has each one been college and write like the Kipling and the Dickegs. We circulate town, and extortionate not for advertisements."

WILL COLLECT SEVEN YEARS INCOME TAX FROM G. & E. DEPARTMENT EMPLOYES

HARTFORD, July 16.—(A. P.)—Directions to collect seven years back taxes, based on the federal income tax law, from more than 2,500 officers and employes of municipal institutions in Connecticut, went out from the office of United States Internal Revenue Collector Robert O. Eaton, Monday, to field deputies throughout the state. These officers and employes have not paid any taxes on their income derived from such institutions during the years from 1918 to the present because of a presumption that they were strictly municipal employes and therefore exempt.

The Hartford water department, the Hartford Public library, the municipal electric light plant of Norwich, and the Williams Memorial Institute and Bulkeley High school, of New London are institutions covered in specific rulings received by Collector Eaton from Internal Revenue commissioner David H. Blair at Washington. All persons receiving payments of salary, wages, fees and commissions aggregating $1,000 a year or more from these institutions will be required to pay the tax unless otherwise exempt and on the back taxes accumulated since 1921, accrued interest at the rate of one-half of one per cent. a month.

Water works systems controlled by municipalities all over the state are affected by collectors orders to proceed. Following a bureau of internal revenue ruling of September 1 last, holding that "all employes of municipally owned institutions acting in a proprietary capacity, rather than serving government purposes, such as water, light and street railway companies, are subject to the income tax on their compensation," protest was made by the municipal gas and electric department of Norwich, the Hartford water board, the Hartford library, and several municipally controlled water boards throughout the state. It was believed until today by many of those affected that their protests had been heeded, but Collector Eaton and Chief Field Deputy W. Ellery Allyn announced that Washington had ruled against all the protestants and ordered the tax collected.

Mayor Francis P. Guilfoile, of Waterbury, has declared that not one cent of income tax will be paid by employes of the Waterbury water department, notwithstanding the ruling, and that the city is prepared to go to court to defend its position if necessary.

While revenue act provides penalties for failure to pay the income tax, no prosecutions will be instituted against the municipal employes affected and no fines imposed, as it has been a general understanding since 1918, even among revenue agents, that such officers and employes came under the exemption granted to all employes of the federal and state governments and sub-divisions thereof.

The new move will affect approximately 200 persons in the Hartford water department and about 21 in the Hartford library.

The gas and electrical department of the city of Norwich protested to Collector Eaton in February that its organization "is a municipal corporation operated by the city of Norwich through a board of gas and electrical commissioners under the provision of the laws of the state of Connecticut and is strictly a municipal plant." It also set forth that the profits of the corporation do not go to any private interests and that the employes are employed by the city.

The protest was forwarded by Collector Eaton to Commissioner Blair, who has replied that the Norwich department must file with Collector Eaton a report showing payments of $1,000 a year or more made by the department during each of the calendar years from 1918 to 1925.

A stage was built and a very pretty little play with fancy dancing was put on by four girls, Lucille Gross, Marion Knouse, Mary and Gertie Galligan. The four girls were heard in a very catchy song, "Say boys, that's where my money goes." Lucille Gross was very good in the buck and wing and other fancy dancing. Marion Knouse was equally as good in the toe dance and other difficult steps. Mary Galligan did her dancing perfectly and more than pleased the large audience, which gave them several encores.

Gertie Galligan could not appear as she was sick, but her place was filled by Mildred Barber, in a very creditable manner.

EMBEZZLER SKIPS BOND GIVEN BY BOZRAH MAN

When the case of state vs. Conred Gendron, 21, of Sherbrook, Canada, was called Friday morning in city court, no one was present to answer to the charges preferred. After a lengthy discussion the case was continued until July 17th to allow Kurt Kuhne of Bozrah, bondsman for Gendron, to get in touch with his charge.

Gendron is charged with embezzlement of $97.55 from the John Hancock Insurance company of Boston, which has branch offices in Norwich. Signed confessions are alleged to be held by the insurance company, in which Gendron states the amount of his defalcations, made from time to time while he was collector for the company. Gendron had made his home in Norwich for about a year.

Gendron is alleged to be a smooth talker and classy dresser but it is claimed his habit of gambling had caused him to take money from the collections he made for the insurance company. He was finally detected by the company, alleged to have confessed and signed a written confession, but has failed to make good the amount embezzled.

A sad part of the case came up Thursday when Kurt Kuhne of Bozrah, bondsman, told of being taken in by the smooth talk of Gendron and going on his bond of $300. Mr. Kuhne said that soon after he went Gendron's bond he heard that the young man had borrowed money from a friend and going to Occum, skipped town with a girl from that village. Kuhne can ill afford to lose the money and was downhearted when the case was called.

Due to the fact that Gendron was arrested on Wednesday of last week, locked up, had his case continued from Thursday of that week until July 16th, City Attorney Robbins was inclined to go easy with the bondsman and Judge Libby showed leniency by continuing the case until July 27th, in hopes that Gendron would return and face the charge, and, incidentally, if Gendron fails to put in appearance, give Kuhne time to raise the $300.

Gendron, after his arrest, said he was going to New London to meet his father who was to come down from Canada to make good the money he had embezzled. The police are now in search of Gendron and have notified police in other cities to be on the lookout for him.

Philip Cormier, 37, of 105 Hickory street was fined $200 and costs and given 30 days in jail, suspended for one year, when found guilty of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor. Through his attorney, Thomas M. Shields, Cormier took an appeal to the next criminal term of the court of common pleas, bonds of $300 being furnished.

Officers P. Murphy, Elmer Allen and Hugh McAvoy with John Wall of Roath street testified for the state. The testimony was that John Wall notified Officer McAvoy at Franklin square, Saturday July 11th, that a man with a Ford car was racing the motor and disturbing the occupants of his house, especially his grandmother, who was ill. This was at 3 o'clock in the morning. The three officers went to Roath street but could not find Cormier. After circling about Greeneville they found Cormier and placed him under arrest. Cormier did not testify in court Thursday morning.

William Herring, 22, of New York, a member of Camp Moween, Franklin, was charged with operating a motor vehicle without a license. He was fined $25 and costs, paying $34.90 for failure to get a license. Herring was arrested by State Policeman Watson of the Groton barracks, who was in Norwich Town investigating an accident, when he heard a car approaching with a cutout open contrary to law. He stopped the driver of the car and it was at that time he discovered Herring had no license to drive and placed him under arrest.

One Norwich man of 60 years was sent to the state farm on the charge of being a common drunkard, while the charge of intoxication was nolled. Officer Charles Smith took the man to the farm in the motor patrol wagon.

Mrs. Clara Lorinski, of the West Side was charged with breach of the peace and the case was continued for six months, the woman receiving a warning to avoid future trouble. Her arrest followed an assault made on a neighbor who was erecting a fence between his property and the Lorinski property. Mrs. Lorinski believed it was too far on her land and struck her neighbor with a club.

ROTARIANS HAVE GREAT DAY AT JEWETT CITY

Ashland Park, the beautiful recreation grounds of the Ashland Cotton Co. at Jewett City was thronged, Thursday, with Rotarians from the four Eastern Connecticut Rotary clubs, Putnam, Willimantic, New London and Norwich, when the annual inter-city outing was held. As is the rule when a congenial crowd of Rotarians and Rotariannas get together there was plenty to occupy the day with the various diversions provided for the entertainment of the guests.

The Rotarians began to arrive early in the morning prepared to make a real day of it and although the weather was threatening during the early hours of the morning it had no dampening effect on the jubilant spirits of the pleasure seekers.

The chief event of the morning was the baseball game between the Norwich club and the Putnam club teams which was won by the Rose of New England players by the enormous score of 15 to 1. How Putnam managed to get its lone tally is still a mystery to those who saw the slaughter. The game was scheduled for seven innings but along toward the third inning Putnam gave up in despair and gracefully congratulated the winners on their overwhelming victory. Those who participated in this encounter for Putnam were H. Lyons, c; W. Wheaton, 3b; A. Smith, 1b; A. Averill, p; L. Talbot, ss; O. Fox, 2b; F. Prince, cf; Dr. Richards, rf; Henry Vignot, lf. The last two were borrowed from the Norwich club which may more or less account for Putnam's defeat.

Those who braved the heat of the day for the honor of the Norwich club were Scoop Standish, c; Frankie McGorty, p; Jim Roantree, 1b; Ed Jewett, 2b; Russ Clapp, 3b; Goff Briggs, ss; Artie Thompson, lf; Jimmy Madden, cf; Doc Agnew, rf. The account of the game would not be complete without some mention of the umpiring. John Reardon of the Putnam club officiated as arbiter and his decisions were beyond reproach, John calling them as he saw them and there was nothing the matter with John's eyesight or judgment.

After the dirt of this battle had been dissolved under the cooling showers of the Ashland club the welcome call to dinner in the casino was answered with alacrity by the famishing Rotarians and their guests. The casino where the tables under snow-white linen were arranged, was prettily decorated for the occasion. America was sung by the assemblage and Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth of New London asked the Divine blessing.

Bill Park was the unanimous choice for song leader and with Freddy Wight at the piano and with the aid of song sheets printed in a delightful Copenhagen blue, the gift of the Willimantic club, there was plenty of exercise for the vocal talents. They sang everything on the song sheet and many popular numbers that were not there. Each club responded with chorus selections that had much more quantity than harmony, especially the New London members who were showered with bouquets of baked wheat.

The delicious menu served by the dining car service of the New Haven road under the direction of Dave Seamon was appetizing to the utmost degree, and all the heavyweights, including Bertie Gager, who are on a strict diet, broke training without the least hesitation when the good things were set before them.

The menu was:

Clam Chowder
Olives Radishes
Broiled Bluefish
String Beans Potato Chips
Waldorf Salad
Live Broiled Lobster
Coffee Buttered Rolls
Watermelon

This menu was served by 16 young women of the Ashland club under the direction of Mrs. P. W. Chase. Those serving were Mary Sadowsky, Mary Salenski, Leda Gungras, Mary Rose Marion, Nellie Miss, Oliva Dubois, Jennie King, Eva Rail, Agnes Franklin, Lulu Larkin, Violet Peterson, Dorothy Cornell, Lily Dugas, Emily Miss, Mary Tenczer and Ella Shorey. The young women were attractively dressed in white.

During the dinner the Lyric orchestra of Willimantic furnished a delightful program which was finely rendered, especially the cornet and xylophone solo parts. This orchestra also furnished music for dancing during the late afternoon and evening.

Two especially attractive and pleasing features of the musical program were the vocal solo, Sunrise and You, given by Shorty Wallin of the Hartford Rotary club who was a guest at the dinner, and the piano solo, Close Harmony, by Freddy Wight.

After the dinner the real ball game of the day took place, this being between the old and bitter rivals, Norwich and New London. Once again the Norwich team triumphed over their friendly enemies from the mouth of the Thames, by a score of 8 to 6. It was a hectic game but it was always evident that the Norwich team was just a little superior to the Whalers. This was most evident in the hitting powers of the two teams. Joe Worth, was announced as the pitcher for the Norwich club, but Roy Nash insisted very vehemently that it was Lloyd Jarvis, the Academy boy, who beat Bulkeley this season, who was doing the pitching. Roy has cause to remember Lloyd for it is rumored that Roy lost a few shekels by wagering on Bulkeley in that game and Lloyd sure spilled the beans. Whether it was Joe or Lloyd who pitched yesterday he did a good job of it and although hit frequently his support was of the best.

Dick Curran who pitched for New London worked hard but his team was not up to the standard demanded of them. Features of the game was the hitting of Conny Costello and Tommy Donohue, recently appointed boxing commissioner. If Tommy does as well with the boxing game as he does with the ball game then the future of boxing is assured. Ed Regan also contributed to the excitement with well timed hits. For Norwich Big Ed Harrias was the shining example of how baseball should and should not be played. Both of his demonstrations were artistic. Jim Roantree, fleet of foot, stole base after base in regular Ty Cobb fashion.

Those who sweltered in the broiling sun to furnish amusement for those in the cool shade of the grandstand were:

New London—Roy Nash c, Dick Curran p, Ed Corcoran 1b, Joe Keefe 2b, Hen Kaiser 3b, Ed Regan ss, Jim Borlan lf, Connie Costello cf, Jim Plate and Fred Baker rf, Tommy Donohue official pinch-hitter.

Norwich—Standish c, Lloyd Worth, p, Ed Harrias 1b, Jim Roantree 2b, Russ Clapp 3b, L. Briggs ss, Russ Smith lf, Jim Madden cf, Lew Carpenter rf.

Hal Chase was the umpire in this contest and his decisions compared favorably with those of John Reardon in the other game.

Following the ball game the water events took place with Russ Clapp and Joe Keefe giving exhibitions of fancy diving from the high platforms. Others found amusement at bridge, dancing, quoits and other amusements provided for their entertainment.

Much credit is due to the Putnam club which acted as host to the 131 Rotarians who attended. Also much of the success of the affair is attributed to Lew Carpenter and Alex McNicol as well as to Mr. and Mrs. Prentice W. Chase who worked hard to make the visit of the Rotarians to Ashland a pleasant one.

EAST ENDS HUMBLE SAINTS IN GAME FEATURED BY FREQUENT HITTING

The East Ends emerged the victors over St. Joseph's in Thursday night's twilight league by a 9 to 5 score. As in the three preceding games this week the batsmen went on another hitting spree piling up a total of twenty- three safe hits. The East Ends accounted for thirteen of these while the Saints were credited with ten. Harry Mills was the individual star of the contest, garnering five hits out of as many attempts for a perfect hitting average. Two of Harry's hits were doubles while the other three were all clean singles to the outfield. Bill Austin, the league's leading batter also kept up his good work with the stick by making two doubles out of four while Nap Liberty led the attack for the Saints with two doubles and a single out of four trips to the plate.

Harry Mills twirled for the winners and although touched up for ten safeties pitched winning ball. Harry increased his strikeout total by six and walked four.

Nap Liberty was Manager Oney's first choice for mound duty, and during his four innings in the box, the East Siders collected nine hits for five runs. Nap retired in the fifth in favor of his cousin Spike who finished the game.

For two innings neither team scored and it began to look something like a pitcher's battle. All semblance of a mound duel disappeared however in the next two innings when the East Ends piled up five runs on seven safe hits. With one out in the third, Gaudette and Mills singled and Bill Austin's two-base hit to right scored both with the first runs of the game.

In their half of the fourth, the Saints scored once on two hits and a sacrifice fly, Allard led off with a one base hit to left and when Spike Liberty smacked a similar hit to right went to third. Dinty Moore lifted a long fly to Woodmansee and Allard crossed the plate after the catch. After a scoreless inning in the fifth, the East Ends started an attack on Spike Liberty in the sixth which netted four runs. In this frame the Saints were guilty of three misplays, and this combined with Mills fourth hit, another double to left, and Noel's two bagger accounted for the scoring.

After counting once in the sixth, the Saints made a last bid for the game in their half of the final inning but fell short by several runs. Frank Busch singled to left as a starter and took third on Nap Liberty's double to the same field. Allard walked filling the bases and with nobody out, things looked dark for the East Siders. Spike Liberty shot a grounder to Tim Coughlin. Tim let the ball go through him and before it was returned to the infield, the bases were empty and three runs had crossed the plate. At this point, Mills tightened and retired the side without further scoring.

It was found after the game that the bat belonging to Harry Mills, which was a present to him from Joe Faber, was missing.

Whether the bat was thrown in amongst the opposing team's bats unawares or whether some one picked it up in leaving the field is not known. If anyone finding this bat will return it to the Duwell Club, it will be greatly appreciated by Mills, as the lost bat was Harry's favorite stick and was highly valued by him. The score:

SUPT. OF MAILS WALTER M. JONES RETIRES AT NEW LONDON POST OFFICE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 16.—Walter M. Jones, superintendent of mails in this city, has been granted retirement after service in the New London post office in various capacities for a term of thirty-seven years, or more years than some of the employes at present in the office have lived. Mr. Jones has served with more than half a dozen postmasters, including William H. Tubbs, George D. Whittlesey, B. F. Mahan, John McGinley and others. He now retires on a pension. Harry Holmes is to succeed him. Mr. Jones comes from a family that has always served long, wherever they have been employed. His father, Jere. Jones, was employed by the late James Fitch in the ship fitting business, in the days of the height of halibut fishing, when there was a fleet of a score of vessels sailing from this port; his brother, Willis, has been a bank watchman many years.

Arthur Gagnon, a youth of 18 years, was fined in the police court this morning for operating an auto-truck, the property of his father, without having a license to do so. The lad ran into the car of Mrs. Walter Burdick. There were many witnesses in court, but they were not heard as the parties came to a satisfactory agreement as to a disposition of the case.

Tomorrow, Mrs. Freida Wallace will come into court again on the complaint of Henry B. Lee, who charges her with having recklessly run into his car on Montauk avenue a week ago. Mr. Lee claims his car was damaged to the extent of $500. The car is insured so that he will not suffer the loss that repairs will necessitate.

Policeman Opperman began his vacation today. He will take his family over the Mohawk trail by automobile, leaving tomorrow.

Camp Terrahegan at Mystic, where a number of New London boys are spending the summer vacation under direction of Y. M. C. A. guides, is weekly receiving recruits. Some of the boys have been there three weeks while others go and return home at short intervals.

The work of repairing the Crown theatre, where a section of ceiling fell about three weeks ago, is going on, but no date for the reopening of the playhouse has yet been fixed upon.

The New London Savings bank has a force of men at work on the vacant lot on North Bank street, adjoining the police station, where twin nests of garages are to be erected. There will be accommodation for eight cars when the buildings are erected, and these will be for the accommodation of employes of the bank. The lot is the last vacant space on the street between State and Douglass streets. There has been a marked change in the street in recent years and it is no longer known as the "tenderloin" of the city's high life section, as it was when it was designated as Bradley street. An important sale of real estate in that neighborhood is understood to be in the works now that will bring more garages to the city. They will be of a public nature, if the sale is effected.

Patrolman John Clifford resumed his duties today after his vacation of two weeks, much of which time was spent in Worcester, Mass., and Boston.

Sergeant Patrick Murphy, in charge of the night patrol, began his vacation of a fortnight, today.

Patrolman Ernest Opperman started his vacation of two weeks, today.

Benjamin A. Armstrong has sold to James H. and Anna C. McVeigh a house and lot on Norwood avenue.

Frank Martin, 548 Williams street, reported to the police this morning that the highway at the corner of Williams street and Mohegan avenue, is in a dangerous condition, due to the rails of the Connecticut company being several inches above the level of the highway.

The funeral of Myles T. Donohue, son of Mrs. Sarah A. Donohue, 112 Howard street, was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church and was attended by a large assemblage of mourners. The mass of requiem was sung by Rev. Raymond O'Callahan. The bearers were Joseph F. Cranker, John Daly, Harry May, Joseph James, James Flaherty and John Sweeney. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mrs. Bridget Sherry, 88, widow of James Sherry, died last night at her home in Jordan. Mrs. Sherry, who had been ill a long time, was born in Ireland, but had resided in Jordan the greater part of her life. Her husband died a year ago. Mrs. Sherry is survived by three daughters, Mrs. A. J. Perkins and Misses Margaret and Catherine Sherry, of Waterford, and by two sons, Thomas and Owen Sherry, of Westerly.

Miss Irene Stahler, 27, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel F. Stahler, 5 Huntington street, died last night at the residence of her sister, Mrs. Lawrence Shea, New Haven, death terminating an illness of a week with pneumonia. Besides her parents and sister, Miss Stahler is survived by four brothers, Howard and Charles Stahler, of New Haven, and Russell and Daniel F. Stahler, Jr., of this city, and by two sisters, Mrs. Mary Dunn, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Mrs. H. E. Thornhill, Long Beach, Cal. Miss Stahler had resided in New Haven for several years and formerly was employed by the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad as telephone operator at the union station. She was also a telephone opprator at the municipal building.

Charles Voss, Pearl street, employed as room clerk at the Hotel Mohican, was removed to Lawrence-Memorial hospital late yesterday afternoon where an operation was at once performed for appendicitis. The condition of Mr. Voss was reported at the hospital this afternoon as favorable.

Henry Worakowsky, 25 Wightman street, reported to the police today that while his automobile was parked at Ocean Beach last night a thief visited the machine and stole a spare tire. Tire thieves have been particularly active at the shore resort of late, for several car owners have reported the loss of spare tires.

City Manager William A. Holt has decided to permit the trial of another traffic signal at the corner of State and Bank streets; today he informed Captain of Police Charles A. Pinney that permission had been granted Patrick L. Shea to install a new type of signal at that point and as soon as the signal is installed and put into operation that the officers on duty there will operate it. The new signal is to be an experiment and if it proves satisfactory the city will probably purchase one or more of the devices.

James C. Payne, United States Coast Guard; Mrs. Morris Bernstein, 73 Montauk avenue; Mrs. Louis Schaecer, Hotel Mohican; William Wheary, of the United States Coast Guard patrol boat, 233; Mrs. Rose Forader, 169 North Bank street, and Mrs. George Ganerdinger, Hartford, were patients dismissed today at Lawrence hospital.

Mrs. Julia V. Green, 65, wife of Charles H. Green, of Mystic, died last night at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, death ending an illness of two weeks. Besides her husband, Mrs. Green is survived by a sister and nephew, who reside in New York, and a stepdaughter, Miss Leona Young, of Mystic.

Harry Walker, 206 Williams street, and Mrs. Harry Wheeler and infant son, 20 Terrace avenue, patients at Home Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

Mrs. J. T. O'Brien, of Niantic, came to New London this afternoon to shop and parked her automobile in front of the National Bank of Commerce. After completing some of her purchases, Mrs. O'Brien claims she placed her packages in her car, but when she returned later she discovered them gone. Mrs. O'Brien reported her loss to the police and Patrolman William Riordan was assigned to the case. As he approached cars parked in front of the bank the operator of another automobile informed the officer that he had found three articles in the rear of his machine and he did not know how they got there. The officer took charge of them as they were the property of Mrs. O'Brien, who later claimed them at the police station. It is believed that Mrs. O'Brien placed them in the wrong machine, believing that she was depositing them in her own car.

RUM RUNNER'S CREW WANTED FOR R. I. BOAT THEFT

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 16—Leif Nelson and Edward Scanlon, two Providence men, were found aboard the sped launch G-241, which was seized by the crew of a United States Coast Guard patrol boat, off Block Island, Tuesday night and brought into port, it being claimed that the two men dumped cases of liquor into the ocean when the patrol boat opened fire. The men are still prisoners at the police station here. It was stated by Commander Young, United States Coast Guard Section Base, 4, this afternoon that the accused would be given a hearing before United States Commissioner Earl Matthewson, of Norwich, at the customs house at 6 o'clock, but no one appeared at the police station this evening to take charge of the prisoners and nothing is known of a contemplated hearing by customs house officials.

It is understood, however, that the prisoners will be turned over to civil authorities, as it is alleged that the launch was stolen from East Greenwich harbor, Sunday, by Nelson and Scanlon and that the craft is the property of Hugh McManus, of Providence.

A Providence attorney today communicated with the New London police stating that the boat had been stolen and that his client, Joseph B. Lisper, of Providence, holds a mortgage of $8,000 on the boat. This evening the chief of police of Warwick, R. I., telephoned the New London police that he holds a warrant for the arrest of Nelson and Scanlon for the theft of the boat and to hold them until such time as he can send an officer here and take the men into custody, provided they are released by the government agents.

HOODED CALLERS BEAT UP CHESTERFIELD HOUSEHOLD

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 16—The family of Joseph Worsowsky, residing on a farm in Chesterfield, together with several guests at the place, were painfully beaten early this evening when a gang of 10 or 12 men, who represented themselves as being state police officers, gained admission to the house and for no known cause, inflicted punishment on Worsowsky, his wife and other men and women. The state police, Groton barracks, were notified, but officers sent to the place could not obtain any clues that would tend to reveal the identity of the assailants. This afternoon, Mrs. Worsowsky came to New London and visited the New London police station, where she requested permission to carry a revolver. She was advised to obtain such permission from the state police, or the selectmen of the town in which she resides, as Chesterfield is outside the jurisdiction of New London.

The gang arrived at the Worsowsky house about 2:30 o'clock and were dark colored, hooded covering, the hoods having holes cut in them for the eyes. When they pounded on the farmhouse door Worsowsky responded and when informed that state police officers were outside he opened the door. Hardly had he done so when the entire members of Worsowsky's household and their guests were set upon and beaten, after which the strangers left in automobiles. Worsowsky and his wife cannot suggest any reason why they and their guests were attacked.

DR. LENA, NOT HARRY LAND, BUYS $280,000 HARRIS BLOCK

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 16—It was made known today that Harry Land of Norwich, who obtained an option on the Harris building, five-story State street brick structure and one of the most valuable business blocks, apartments and office buildings in the city, will not purchase the property but that Dr. Hugh F. Lena, well known physician and surgeon, will become owner of the building within a few days.

Although Dr. Lena, will have sole title in the property, the physician's brothers, Dr. Frank A. Lena, dentist and Fred T. Lena, principal of a high school at Yonkers, have investing capital in the acquisition of the block from the trustees of the J. N. Harris estate. Attorney Alfred Colt, counsel for the trustees, stated today that he is engaged drawing up a deed whereby the valuable realty will be transferred to the ownership of Dr. Lena within the next three or four days.

Land secured an option on the property two weeks ago at which time it was stated that he represented Norwich interests. A few days ago it developed that Land did not intend to go through with the purchase of the property and it was then that Dr. Lena decided to purchase it.

The price to be paid by Dr. Lena is $280,000.

LEGUMES AND ORGANIC MATTER

Red clover, sweet clover, alfalfa and vetch are all members of the legume class which has great value to the farmer to turn under for green manure to furnish organic matter for the soil. They are sometimes known as winter legumes because of late sowing. Sown in mid August they are allowed to grow until the first of the following May approximately, and are then plowed under.

There have been numerous tests conducted by the various experiment stations of the country to determine the relative hardiness of these plants for the purpose of turning under. Rhode Island reports that in the New England climate red clover and vetch come through the winter undamaged, while alfalfa and sweet clover are some times sheaved, the latter suffering more than alfalfa.

In four test plots, on one of which fertilizer containing a little nitrogen was used in addition to red clover plowed under, the yield was a fourth more corn than on the three other plots planted to the other legumes. The red clover plot for a number of years showed a uniformly good yield.

Where corn had been grown continually with complete fertiliser, 20 pounds of nitrogen to the acre with a legume cover crop plowed in, the result was 84 bushels of corn per acre. With rye plowed under and 60 pounds of nitrogen to the acre, the yield was 70 bushels and with no cover crop, 55 bushels.

According to Sir William Bragg, of London, the tiniest things which the human eye can see are the black spots and patches sometimes visible in soap bubbles. These black areas are so thin that if the soap bubbles could be magnified to the size of the earth and the thickness of the enveloping film increased in proportion, the film would then be only the thickness of a sheet of glass.

WESTERLY

The White Rock mill of the B. B. & R. Knight, Inc., located in Westerly, will shut down Saturday and remain closed two weeks. A reported cause for the shutdown is dull business. Aug. 3rd the mill will open again. This shutdown follows a two weeks' shut down about the Fourth of July.

Good weather caused a larger than average attendance at the fourth in the summer series of band concerts in Wilcox park, given Thursday night by the Westerly Band, Charles O. Gavitt, leader. The following program was played:

March, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, Sousa; Overture, Pretziess, Skaggs, Waltzes, Strausiana, Seredy; Popular Air, Honest and Truly, Feist; Dasies from Floral Suite, Bendix; Excerpts from Little Boy Blue, Lampe; Popular Airs, (a) O Katherina, Feist, (b) Peter Pan, Henderson; Dance of the Goblins, Engleman; The Midnight Waltz, Feist; Popular Air, At the End of the Road, Hanley; March, Laurels of Victory, Wood; Finale, Star Spangled Banner, Francis Scott Keye.

Mrs. Nellie A. Carmichael, 75, who was on a shopping trip alone in Westerly on Thursday morning, about 9:30 o'clock visited Stillman's Bazaar on the Pawcatuck river bridge and while looking at some towel holders fastened over a stairway, without warning pitched forward and fell down the flight of stairs. She broke a bone in her right shoulder. Dr. M. H. Scanlon was called and Mrs. Carmichael was taken in the ambulance of the Westerly Sanitary corps, accompanied by her niece, Miss Grace Carmichael, to the South County hospital at Wakefield. Her son, George A. Carmichael, secretary of the Rhode Island State Board of Public Utilities, at the State House in Providence was notified of the accident by telephone.

The following transfers have been received in the Westerly Town Clerk's office:

July 14. James A. Dunn, adm., Est. John Dunn, to Maria Dunn, a certain tract of land with buildings and improvements on the east side of Granite street. Maria Dunn to John J. Dunn, a lot or parcel of land on the east side of Granite street.

July 15. Demetrie and Angelina Turane to Angelo Morrone, a tract of land, lot No. 24, Liberty Park. William J. Symens et al to Thorp and Trainer, Inc., a lot No. 23 on Clark avenue, Pleasant View. WEATHER SIGNS

(Written Specially for The Bulletin.)

When I was a young man I used to regard with a sort of wondering awe the uncanny way in which some old farmer, with a stare at the sky, a squint at the meadows and a careless glance at the look of the forest leaves would pronounce that "It'll rain by tomorrow."

Now that I am myself an old man I am rather amused at the trusting confidence with which the youngsters ask me what the weather is going to be. As if I knew or had some hidden means of finding out!

Yet the weather always has been and always will be the main interest of country life and the engrossing topic of country conversation. Why shouldn't it be? Our work as farmers depends on and is controlled by the weather. What more natural than that we should think and talk about it? What more likely than that we should seek in every possible way to get some clue to its probabilities, hunt earth and air and skies for some hint tending to disclose its mysteries?

That's what makes the subject of weather "signs" so universally interesting in the rural lands. It would mean all the difference between guesswork and assurance in our planning if we could only "spot" some "sign" which we could depend upon to tell us what the weather of the next few days was going to be. Because of this we turn to the daily government forecasts in the newspaper, or ask all the old farmers we meet what their opinion is.

Also because of this a good many of us fall for various weather superstitions. If a local "weather-prophet" happens to hit it right two or three times, we set him up as a sort of oracle, forgetting all the other times he got it sadly wrong. If two or three times a storm chances to follow the unusually loud squawking of the orchard robins some of us at once pin our faith on Mrs. Robin's raucous notes. If a period of fair weather happens along coincident with a quartering of the moon, others at once declare that the moon governs the weather. And so on and so on.

Now, I am not going to pretend to any disbelief in all weather signs. But I have a strong opinion that some so-called signs have a reason behind them and that some others have none. And I do not feel any confidence in mere superstitions regarding the weather.

Just what makes the weather is yet something quite unknown to us. The scientists,—whose true work in the world is simply finding out facts and then trying to chase down the explanations for them,—the scientists have followed the observed and recorded facts of the weather a good ways back. But they haven't yet got to the startingpoint. About all they can say is that, if things go on as they have been accustomed to, and IF nothing unusual intervenes, and IF they haven't made any mistake in their deductions,—why,then, it'll "probably" rain tomorrow. As you'll notice, there are several "ifs" along the road of that logic.

On the other hand, long-continued observation has established some sort of connection between certain things and certain other things. The question to be asked in every such case is whether the connection is simply accidental, — a mere coincidence,—or whether it is a vital and real one. In other words, does it make an appeal to our reason not to our credulity or superstition?

When we can dig out a solid and understandable reason why a certain sort of weather should follow a certain "sign," we've got a grip on a substantial bit of knowledge,—which is something widely different from guesswork.

Take for illustration one of the most widely accepted "signs" taken from the birds. When the swallows fly low over the meadows we look for a rain or at least lowery weather. And some of us are willing to adopt the theory that the birds know and take this means of telling us. Which is simply superstition.

Yet the observed fact can't be brushed aside that low swallow flights are usually followed by a spell of weather.

Why? That's the question for which there must be an answer, if we are only shrewd enough to see it.

Fortunately, in this case, the answer is not far to seek nor hard to find. The swallow is an insect-eater. He swoops through the air, catching his dinner piecemeal on the wing. To get that dinner quickest and surest he goes where the bugs are. If they are high up, he flies high after them. If they are low down he skims the surface. He isn't reporting on the weather; he's simply hunting insects in their chosen fields.

Yes, but why do the insects fly high at one time and low at another? That, also is easy to answer. When the air is light the bugs fly high; when the air is heavy its weight tends to press them down. They go where they find it easiest to go. And the swallows follow them.

As light air with little pressure is invariably associated with fair weather, while heavy air with increased pressure is quite as invariably followed by lowering weather, the reason for regarding the flight of swallows as a "sign" at once becomes apparent.

Take another illustration. For a century and a quarter the John Farmer clan, beginning with Great-great-grandfather Phinehas, have planted corn as soon as we heard the whip-poor-will sing, in unshaken confidence that it would be safe from any killing spring frost. Does that mean that the whip-poor-will has some mysterious sixth sense by which it is able to foretell what the weather is going to be? Not by any manner of means. Mr. Whip-poor-will is also a bug-catcher. When it's cold up north and the bugs can't show up he goes where it's warmer and they're plentier. When spring begins to warm up and its advance creeps farther and farther north, hatching out bugs as it progresses, he follows the northward march of his dinner. He doesn't know what the weather is going to be; the bugs don't know. But the spring warmth hatches them out in a perfectly natural way and the whip-poor-will comes along and gobbles as many as he finds appetite for. When he's full and happy he whistles. And we of the John Farmer family pick up our hoes and go out and plant corn.

All perfectly natural and reasonable, you see. Nothing mysterious or occult about it. It is not only good farming but good scientific sense to observe and heed such "signs."

There are many others, differing somewhat in different localities, which can be and have been traced to their explanations and reasons. They are not coincidences or "happen-chances." They are natural results following natural causes.

On the other hand, there are many so-called "signs" which fall into a very different category. One, which is rather frequently heard in my neighborhood among the credulous is "As may fogs as there are in February, so many frosts will there be in May."

There are at least two objections to this "sign." One is that it hasn't any discoverable basis of reason in it. The other is that it isn't so. For three years one of my hired men parroted out this superstition. Partly to humor him and partly in the hope of curing him of a false notion, I chalked down on the farm door the dates of February fogs, as they occurred and in his presence. One year there wasn't a single fog all February,—but we had several frosts next May. The other two years, the number of frosts in May agreed neither in number nor in date with the recorded February fogs. But "Hank," an old man now, still goes about the neighborhood repeating his warning of May frosts, based on February fogs.

Of course, most of us laugh at the goose-bone idea. Two thousand years ago the Roman augurs, with their tongues in their cheeks, used to predict the outcome of proposed wars from the looks of birds' entrails. There is no reasonable connection between the coloration of a goose's breast-bone or the convolutions of a hawk's intestines and war or weather. One is as truly a superstition as the other.

Then there are the moon-atics. Old Uncle Gad always planted his cucumbers in the young of the moon; Old Man Ives always planted his in the old of the moon. And they squabbled for 70 years of neighboring over which was right. Of course, if the moon really "changed" in size or nearness, some sort of influence might be ascribed to its quarterings. But when one reflects that the moon is always the same size and always at practically the same distance, it becomes increasingly difficult to see wherein its influence can appreciably affect weather conditions. What we call "changes" of the moon are not changes in any sense but mearly differences in the extent of its surface which are lighted by the sun. The amount of light or heat reflected from even the full moon is so infinitesimal as to be utterly unimportant. Yet that is the only thing which can possibly have any effect on terrestrial weather. Nevertheless, there are hundreds if not thousands who still believe that farm operations should be guided by the "changes" of the moon.—I have one neighbor who won't kill his pig except at a certain quarter of the moon, lest the meat fail to keep! The experiences of scores of others whose pork stays sweet, no matter whether the moon was "young" or "old" at butchering time, move him no whit. His superstition over-rides his reason.

I suppose it would take a small volume to hold all the weather "signs" which are heeded and believed in by all sorts of men. As a matter of cold fact, a very large proportion of them are not "signs" at all but outgrowths of superstitious credulity based on "they-says" or chance coincidences.

There must be a cause for every effect. Of course any particular cause may, itself, be the effect of some preceding cause, and that of one still more remote, and so on in endless succession. That doesn't alter the fact that every effect appreciable by us must have had some cause. So far as we can trace them in the world of matter these causes are all perfectly natural and reasonably. It is wisest to assume that this is true of weather "signs" as of everything else in nature.

When you can trace the "sign" back to its cause and see its why's and wherefore's, your feet are on solid ground. You know where you stand. You know what effect naturally follows the cause you have exposed. When you see such a "sign" you understand what it portends, because you know why it has appeared.

But "they say" or "I've always believed so-and-so" are pretty poor bases for practical farming, or even for worthwhile weather prognostications.

It's much better to be sure of a few things than to "know" a good many, most of which aren't so.

O for a lodge in a garden of cucumbers!
O for an iceberg or two at control!
O for a vale which at mid-day the dew cumbers!
O for a pleasure trip up to the pole!

O for a little one-story thermometer,
With nothing but zeros all ranged in a row!
O for a big double-barreled hygrometer,
To measure this moisture that rolls from my brow!

O that this cold world were twenty times colder!
(That's irony red-hot, it seemeth to me)
O for a turn of the dreaded cold shoulder!
O what a comfort an ague would be!

O for a grotto frost-lined and rill-riven,
Scooped in the rock under cataract vast!
O for a winter of discontent, even!
O for wet blankets judiciously cast!

O for a soda-fount spouting up boldly
From every hot lamp-post against the hot sky!
O for proud maiden to look on me coldly,
Freezing my soul with a glance of her eye!

Then O for a draught from a cup of cold pizen,
And O for a resting-place in the cold grave!
With a bath in the Styx where the thick shadow lies on
And deepens the chill of its dark-running wave.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Why Grubby Gopher Isn't Loved

To have no friends is sad, indeed,
But is the price that's paid for greed.
—Old Mother Nature.

"Grubby Gopher," said Digger the Badger, "has the meanest disposition of any one of my acquaintance. I suppose you know what mean disposition is, Peter Rabbit."

"Oh, yes," replied Peter, but really he looked a little doubtful. "Yes, indeed, I know what a mean disposition is."

"Well, what is it?" demanded Digger.

"It's—it's—being cross," said Peter.

"It's worse than being cross," replied Digger. "It's being mean and cross and ugly all the time. I've seen Grubby Gopher a great many times, but never have I seen him pleasant. Why that fellow would quarrel with himself if he could. I have quite a temper of my own, Peter Rabbit, but there isn't any meanness with it. At least, I don't think there is. But Grubby Gopher is just spoiling for a fight all the time. You wouldn't like Grubby. No, sir, you wouldn't care whether you liked him or not. He hasn't any friends. At least if he has any I don't know who they are. Everybody hates him out there, and the worst of it is he doesn't seem to care. My, that fellow certainly can spoil the looks of a piece of land about as quickly as any one I know of. I guess it is a good thing for him that he rarely comes out excepting at night. Then Hooty the Owl is always watching for him. Hooty is one of Grubby's worse enemies."

"What does he do with all that he stuffs into his pockets?" asked Peter.

"Oh, he takes it home and stores it away," said Digger.

"Does he sleep all winter?" Peter inquired.

"No," said Digger; "no, he goes right on digging just the same, only it's underneath the snow. He's a good worker, I'll have to say that for him, but if you should meet him unexpectedly he would show you four as ugly looking teeth as you have seen in a long time, and I am quite sure you wouldn't want to have anything more to do with him. Farmer out there don't like Grubby at all. He eats their grain and cuts the tender young roots of their trees, and takes their potatoes and just doesn't care hiw much

He loves to live alone, does Grubby damage he does. You know I told you he has a mean disposition."

"Has he got a long tail?" asked Peter. Peter is always interested in tails. You know what a funny, little apology for a tail he has. It's just like mother's powder puff.

"His tail isn't very big," replied Digger, "but it's very handy. He uses it much as Miner the Mole uses his. They both have to go backward in their tunnels sometimes, and those tails, which are almost naked, feel the way for them. Yes, indeed, Grubby's tail is very handy. He likes to live alone, does Grubby. I guess it is just as well, because you know people with mean dispositions are hard to get along with. He doesn't show himself any oftener than he has to, and that is very seldom. But I will say one thing for him, and that is that he is clean. Yes, sir, he's cleaner than a good many people I know. He keeps his burrow clean, and he always airs it out. So even if he does have a mean disposition and is ugly to look at and nobody has a good word for him, he really has at least one good point. I never bothered Grubby much. Give me Seek Seek the Ground Squirrel every time in preference to Grubby Gopher.

GOOD JUDGMENT AND COURTESY SOLVES PROBLEM

Would you like to start out on your auto trip today or any day in the future and feel absolutely sure that, due to no other driver's careless, reckless or discourteous act, you will meet with accident. Is such a thing possible or even probable, asks the A. L. A.?

However you may answer it there is one thing we are absolutely sure of and that is—such a condition is most desirable even though apparently unattainable.

If such a condition existed all motoring accidents would be due to the victim's own act or acts, hence no one would be to blame but himself. This would do away with practically all our law suits growing out of auto accidents with the exception, perhaps, of defects in auto parts which are rare, and defects in highways, which are not so rare. There would be a great saving in the lives of motorists especially, and hundreds of millions in money in automobile property. Garage repair bills would drop tremendously; insurance companies taking property risks would reap a harvest or go out of business depending somewhat on the ability of their salesmen to convince auto owners that property damage insurance was still desirable.

Pedestrians injured by autos would be still more to blame than at present when is now estimated as high as 75 per cent their fault.

What would bring about such a situation, asks the A. L. A.? There are a number of ways to do so, but they are not wholly practicable and of course it is therefore quite useless to mention them. There is one, however, that even now is responsible for the saving of many lives in use by a vast majority of our drivers, and if all drivers were so constituted as to make use of it, our highway troubles and out traffic problems together with accidents would largely disappear. Good judgment and courtesy, is the combination.

This would cut out reckless speed—not necessarily fast driving, but reckless driving; speed that is used where good judgment forbids it. It would remove carelessness for good judgment and carelessness are not synonymous.

There are many people in every state who drive automobiles, and therefore as a nation-wide proposition, they amount to quite an army—who do not as yet recognize or realize that automobile travel is dangerous. They think only of the fact that they own an automobile; that driving is rare fun; they know comparatively nothing about the mechanical workings of their cars, and care less so long as they continue to respond to their manipulations; they don't know what is going on in the automobile industry; if they read any literature pertaining to automobiling it is usually about some point of interest to visit and how to get there, or if they ask questions they are on the same subject. They belong to no club, nor do they subscribe to any auto magazine; a serious accident horrifies them while reading about it, but they fail to reflect on the reason of its happening and draw no lesson therefrom, nor does it fortify them in any manner against a like occurrance to themselves. They constitute a nonentity in the automobiling world insofar as using their natural intelligence to minimize trouble of all sorts on the highways is concerned, and while some, undoubtedly, make use of whatever undeveloped judgment they possess along the lines of safety to themselves, to most of them the idea is as far away as the island of Madagascar.

Congested traffic to them is just a hinderance, claims the A. L. A., something to fuss about, to display how noisy and disagreeable a horn may become, to stamp themselves as highway nuisances. They want to be first to move and last to stop and they worm their cars close upon a crossing and frown disdainfully or make some cheap remark if a foot traveler attempts to cross between the stopped cars. To them may be applied what in law is termed "judgment proof." It is among this class that accidents have birth; their acts and lack of exercised judgment and courtesy cause many a serious smash, though they themselves may escape direct injury.

There are 100,000 or more such drivers on the highways of Massachusetts today. The same proportion are upon the highways of every state, and we venture that no state has ever made serious effort to group them, to reach them in any way with the idea of bringing about a reform in their driving or refusing them licenses.

Everyone interested in automobile accident prevention knows that our roads are crowded with ignorant and careless drivers, and all know that both lead to accidents; and yet the licensing of all goes forward without the slightest attempt being made to check up the qualifications that really count—where all checking should first be done—at the start—but are turned loose upon the highways simply by reason of being able to start, back, turn about and give a few signals; and yet the use of automobiles is responsible for more deaths and injuries than any other one business, pleasure or enterprise in the United States.

Together with the man who drinks, the mentally and physically unfit and those unable to read and speak English, there should also be barred from driving the highly nervous type of person and the phlegmatic; and all who have ever been convicted of reckless driving or had their licenses once revoked for a serious offense. This would be a start toward the elimination of undesirables; and while some may question, if we are really going to stop or reduce highway accidents the means employed must obviously be drastic to some. Who will question that such protection should be vouchsafed by the state?

Any person, asserts the A. L. A., who values the privilege of driving, knowing, that discourtesy involving risk, and reckless or careless driving in any form that may lead to accident, will bring to him the absolute loss of the privilege, will be pretty apt to become careful in all he does; and it will not only keep him watchful but invoke a standard to be lived up and to and passed on to others.

Crowding 3,000 miles into 24 inches, for the study of transoceanic cable transmission, has been accomplished in a new type of artificial cable developed in the electrical research laboratories at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, it was revealed recently. The laboratory cable is a glass container less than 24 inches square, in which aluminum plates are suspended in a solution, in this "chemical ocean" transmission conditions encountered in a submarine cable 3,000 miles long can be accurately reproduced.

MARKET WAS BROAD.

NEW YORK, July 16.—(A. P.)—A marked expansion in public participation characterized the resumption of the upward movement of prices in today's stock market. Steel shares awoke from the lethargy and assumed the early leadership of the advance, but the buying switched to the oils in the late trading, with sporadic strength down throughout the day in coppers, public utilities and specialties. The day's sales exceeded 1,400,000 shares.

Predictions of favorable second quarter earnings reports and stiffening commodity prices stimulated the demand for the steel shares, U. S. Steel common touching a new high on the current movement at 118 1-2. Republic closed a point higher and most of the others improved fractionally.

Extension of recent crude oil price advices was finally taken cognizance of by the oil group. Tidewater jumped 5 points to 141 on a few sales, while California Petroleum, Colorado Fuel, Houston, Mid-Continent, Phillips, Producers and Refiners, Texas Company and Royal Dutch sold about 1 to 3 points higher. The weekly report of the American Petroleum Institute showed an increase in crude production in the week ended July 11 for the first time in five weeks, but it was only 650 barrels above the week before.

In the railroad list, the feature was the spirited demand for Southern Railway common, which touched par for the first time in history, showing a gain of 2 5-8 points on the day. International Railways of Central America and Wheeling and Lake Erie preferred also mounted to new high ground. Chicago and Northwestern closed almost two points higher at 64 1-2.

Public utilities again presented special points of strength, Montana Power, Havana Electric, North American Company, International Telephone, Standard Gas and Electric, Kansas City Power and Light first preferred, Niagara Falls Power and American Water Works 6 percent preferred all smashed their previous high prices of the year, the gains ranging from fractions to about three points. Reports that several gigantic public utility mergers will be announced this fall enlivened speculative interest in those issues. In all about three dozen issues attained new 1925 peak prices, the list including U. S. Rubber, common, Keystone Tire, Timken Roller Bearing, Household Products, American Can, International Business Machines, General Railway Signal, American Agricultural Chemical preferred, Ginter Company, American Tobacco "A" and "B," and Philip Morris. Savage Arms jumped seven points to 56 1-8 on a run of the short interest and then eased on profit taking. An obvious attempt to unsettle the general list by the circulation of rumors that the New York Federal Reserve bank would increase its rediscount rate after the market closed was a flat failure. The rate was unchanged.

The return flow of funds from the interior of New York was reflected in the further lowering of the renewal rate on call loans to 3 3-4 per cent, and the subsequent reduction to 3 1-2. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

A rally in Danish krone, which carried them up to around 20.90 cents, the highest rate in about three years, featured the foreign exchange market. Other rates held resistively steady, demand sterling being quoted around $4.85 11-16 and French francs just above 4.70 cents.

STATE HOSPITAL NOW USING OWN RESERVOIR WATER FOR IRRIGATION

Working in conjunction with the city of Norwich in conserving of the water supply in the two city reservoirs, officials of the Norwich State Hospital have recently caused to be installed a complete irrigation system on the grounds at the hospital.

New piping has been laid from the reservoir at the hospital to many points within the grounds of the institution, thus completing the smaller system that has been used for irrigation and sprinkling. All water used at the hospital during past months, for sprinkling of lawns and other outside work has been drawn from the hospital reservoir and the enlargement of the system has been made to make this work easier. The pumps of the hospital supply the power to force the water to all points within the grounds.

City water is now used at the hospital only for drinking purposes and for regular hospital uses in an effort to assist the city of Norwich to conserve its water supply.

A leakage in the dam at the hospital reservoir is also being repaired and will result in a great saving of water when finished. It is estimated that 50,000 gallons a day has been lost from the hospital reservoir because of the leak in the dam and with this leakage stopped by repairs the hospital will have a sufficient private supply for all needs on the grounds and outside the buildings.

SELF PRESERVATION LAW TO SOLVE TRAFFIC DANGERS

Self-preservation, the first law of nature, must be largely relied upon to remedy the motor vehicle accident situation in the state, in the opinion of Deputy Motor Vehicle Commissioner Malcolm D. Rudd. He treats of the subject in the July bulletin of the motor vehicle department issued this week. "Appalling as the situation is, in fact, in the hands and brains of those who use the public ways, whether they travel on foot or in vehicles."

Conditions are bad and are apparently growing worse, and it is up to the people to say what they are going to do about them. It is pointed out that "no fight against a common danger was ever waged successfully until those menaced by it were fully aroused to a sense of their peril and forced to exercise the law of self-preservation." There were 20,781 accidents reported to the motor vehicle department last year, involving the deaths of 393 persons the injury of 9,153 and damage to property estimated at $2,000,000 not to mention "incalculable losses due to sorrow, suffering and annoyance and material pleasure, all of which inevitably attend so serious a disturbance of normal conditions."

Connecticut's motor vehicle problem is especially difficult, according to the bulletin, as it is the principal gateway to New England and stands fourth among the states of the Union in point of residents per square mile. Rhode Island, Massachusetts and New Jersey are the only states which show higher ratios in that particular and two of these are adjacent to Connecticut. The increase in built roads, while considerable, is not proportionate to the increase in vehicle registrations, with the result that there is more and more traffic, both resident and non-resident, on the same roads.

With regard to the two reasons for which the motor vehicle department exists, the deputy commissioner says: "The collection of fees is a problem in arithmetic, but safeguarding the public involves new and unforseen difficulties from day to day. It is easy enough to license a car and its driver, but the moment that driver begins to function, psychology in its myriad shapes and reactions enters the picture, figuratively speaking, and never fades out of it."

Several suggestions, in addition to a general admonition to be cautious, are made in the bulletin in the interest of public safety. To meet the glaring headlight menace, frequent adjustment of lighting devices is requested. "If motorists will do their utmost to comply with present regulations," the bulletin says, "it is all they can do to tide us over until such time as there is provided a better solution of the whole subject of highway illumination; to do less than that is criminal." Among the other suggestions are the following:

"Try to keep away from congested districts. Avoid traffic crowds all you can, but when they are unavoidable, follow the crowd, don't try to beat it."

"Be easy on yourselves and your chauffeurs. The overtired driver gets gorgey at the wheel, he nods or drowses and maybe wakens in the

"Be reasonable in using the traveled way, at a speed which is reasonable and proper. Neither rush nor loiter; be temperate in your driving or court disaster."

..tuResst'

"Even where traffic is well directed, the pedestrian should get his clearance, both right and left, before he leaves the curb and put his senses to double duty when there is no officer present to think for him. If necessary, wait a second or a moment before stepping out. Likewise the motorist who takes pains to accommodate his actions to the movements of railway trains and trolleys best serves his own interest. Time may be money, but the maimed and the dead lay up few material riches."

"Don't be discouraged, if you occasionally meet an incompetent driver. No tests, nor even the mental and manual ones which are given preliminary to the issuance of licenses, will positively determine that a driver is equal to meeting emergencies which frequently are surrounded by entirely new and unthought of conditions Don't worry too much about drunken drivers. They and the incompetents and incorrigibles must inevitably be ruled off the roads; the law will get them if the 'Grim Reaper' doesn't.

"Above all, please remember that we need your help in performing a difficult administrative task and that when all is said, the only open-sesame to a better world for motoring is a recognition of your own rights and their limitations and due regard for the rights of others."

GIVEN BIRTHDAY SURPRISE AT CAMP IN BALTIC

Mrs. Adelheid Moll of New London was given a surprise party at Camp Happiness in Baltic Wednesday in honor of her birthday. Several of the younger members of the camp entertained. Miss Hilda Mandelbaum gave a musical selection; a recitation Contentment, was given by Miss Edith Agranovitch; Miss Selma Kaplan gave an exhibition Spanish dance, Miss Ellen Meany sang, O How I Miss You Tonight; Miss Rose Mandelbaum recited Six Times Nine; the Misses Dorothy Greene and Frances Trachtenberg sang School Days; Miss Ellen Meany gave a demonstration of the Charleston, and the camp orchestra played O Katharina.

William Taylor of New York, a guest at Pautipaug hill, gave several selections on the saxaphone and piano, which were greatly appreciated, Mrs. Moll received a gift from the camp and many congratulations from her friends.

MAKING PROPOSALS FOR FREIGHT RATE ADJUSTMENT

The Manufacturers' Association of Connecticut has issued a bulletin to all its members covering recent developments in the Eastern Class Rate Investigation in which practically all Connecticut shippers are interested and which the association has been actively following for several months.

Two different meetings have been held here under the auspices of the Norwich Chamber of Commerce, at which speakers were present to explain what bearing upon New England shippers there would be by the readjustment of freight rates.

A hearing was recently held before the interstate commerce commission at which the state association, in common with organizations from other states, was represented by a special committee. Mason Manghum, attorney for the committee, presented proposals for a thirty-class scale to be used in altering the Anderson and Disque scale and a large number of individual line scales used in making existing trunk line rate, thereby revising the entire rate structure for official classification territory.

The use of the scale involves the co-ordination of the main parts of New England, Trunk Line, and Central Freight Association Territory as an area with uniform rates to apply throughout. The scale is intended to eliminate the necessity of commodity rates on anything that might move at a class rate and is based on the assumption that the existing rate between New York and Chicago is sufficiently high to serve as a foundation for the rate structure throughout official classification territory. It abolishes the differences between the three territories mentioned above but preserves the theory of group rates in certain territory based on percentages of the first-class rate between New York and Chicago. It eliminates inter-territorial rates, except those existing between New England and territory west of the Buffalo-Pittsburgh line.

An investigation of exhibits reveals the rates to Pittsburgh and to blanker the fact that it is proposed to grade them beyond that point on traffic originating in New England. The following percentages were presented: 100, 95, 90, 85, 80, 75, 72.5; 72.5, 72, 70, 67.5, 67, 19.60; 65 per cent. of 6, 18.20; 17.5; 60 47.5, 45, 42.5, 40, 37.5, 35, 32.5, 31.5, 30, 28, 27.5; 96 per cent of 6, 26.6; 90 per cent. of 6, 25.20, 25; 86.66 per cent. of 6, 24.26; 85 per cent. of 6, 23.80; 83. 33 per cent. of 6, 23.33; 22.5; 80 per cent. of 6, 22.40; 75 per cent. of 6, 21; 73.33 per cent. of 6, 20.53; 70 per cent of 6, 19.60; 65 per cent. of 6, 12.20; 17.5; 60 per cent. of 6, 16.80; and 15.

If the proposal of the association and the interests allied with it are accepted, a great step will have been taken in eliminating fourth-section violations and in making more equitable and easier of application the rates under which Connecticut shippers now operate.

STRONG CURRENT NEEDED TO RUN TROLLEY LINES

All of the electrical needs of a fair sized city could be cared for with the current which must be generated to operate the trolley cars over the 800 miles of Connecticut Company tracks in this state. In the course of a year's time, 115,000,000 kilowatt hours must be generated to keep the entire system in operation; to meet the maximum requirements at any one time requires 35,000 kilowatts.

In order to keep in motion a single car on the system, an electric current of 40 kilowatts is necessary. When the motorman on the car shuts off his current to stop for passengers or for traffic however, five times this amount of electricity is necessary to put it into motion again. To start the average trolley car requires a current of 200 kilowatts. It may easily be seen, therefore, what a tremendous amount of current is necessary during the rush hours when every car on the entire system is constantly stopping and starting every block or two. The cost of the electric current to heat one car during the heating season, is equivalent to that of approximately 15 tons of coal, or, in other words, it costs as much to heat a trolley car as it does a ten-room house, and the amount spent for heating all trolley cars would heat 500 ten-room houses.

A large portion of the current required on The Connecticut Company system is generated at four large power plants located on Grand Ave., New Haven, Seaview Ave., Bridgeport, Commerce street, Hartford; and at Danielson. From these four stations, alternating current is transmitted at a high voltage to three automatic sub-stations and twenty-eight manually operated sub-stations located at various points on the system. At these sub-stations the electricity is transformed into direct current at a low voltage for application to the car motors from the overhead wires.

TELLS LIONS HOW THEIR CLUB IS WORTH WHILE

The weekly meeting of the Norwich Lions club was held Thursday noon at the Wauregan House with President William A. Anderson in charge. The meeting opened with the singing of America and John Barry, as song leader, assisted by Doc. Solomon with Pete Ethier at the piano, kept the Lions singing.

A communication was received from the Rock Nook home, thanking the members of the Lions club for the awning provided for the children's sand box.

George Madden, reporting for the entertainment committee, gave an interesting account of the ladies' night of the club, held at Oswegatchie last Thursday. He was given a vote of thanks by the members for his part in making the affair a success.

The entertainment for the meeting was in charge of Jean Keiffer who introduced Lion Max Hanover as the speaker of the day. Max selected for his subject, Is the Lions Club Worth While? saying in part:

With your kind indulgence I may be permitted to take up the five minutes allotted to me in discussing the question, "Is the Lions club worth while?" I am fortunate in belonging to the Lions club since its inception and I am therefore familiar with its history, its accomplishments, its shortcomings if any, and the place which it has carved for itself among the civic bodies of Norwich. I know most intimately, all the members who belong to our club and those who have seen fit to withdraw from our body—some of them inwardly sorry for having deserted our organization. If the reason for their withdrawal from our midst was because membership in the Lions club made demand upon them for the expenditure of some money, time and effort, especially the latter—"time and effort," then I am curious to know whether they have ever stopped to seriously consider whether the Lions club was worth the expenditure of money, time and effort.

Being very much enthused and interested in the benefits which we, the members of the Lions club, in conjunction with the people of Norwich are deriving from the existence of the Lions club, I want to say very emphatically and unqualifiedly and without the fear of refutation, that the Lions club is worth while; that it is a most modern, broadminded, nonsectarian organization having at its root the ideal of the advancement of human brotherhood, inculcating as its highest principle, "loyalty"—loyalty to each other, to our community, to our nation and to mankind. The only standard the Lions club demands from its members is that of good character, a readiness to be of service and true allegiance to our noble American institutions.

I have been a witness time and time again that members of our club have measured up to the requirements and ideals of the Lions club. I repeatedly witnessed that members of the Lions club, singly or collectively, or working in conjunction with other civic bodies when a worthy cause claimed the attention of our citizens, were striving with very sincere efforts, making real manly sacrifices, ever conscious that in so doing they were upholding the dignity and reputation of the Lions club of Norwich. The result of this interest in and the love of our members for the Lions club made them better citizens, better friends, better men to their families and benefited the civic interests of our city to the extent that our citizens today know that the Lions club is worth while.

The bringing out the character of broadmindedness, of friendliness, of loyalty and devotion among our members, and the interest for local and national advancement and propagation of our noble American institutions is a priceless asset put in possession of its members by the Lions club. It makes for a richer life, for a better, more worthy and more useful citizenship. For no matter how well situated a man may be, if he retires within himself without caring for his neighbors, without taking an interest in his fellow man, without endeavoring to bring harmony, co-operation and good will among the people of his community, his life becomes barren and without significance. Any man, who withdraws within his four walls, gluttonously enjoying his own possessions, to the exclusion of all mankind, makes his own life narrow and constricted and misses the joy of real fellowship. By giving up the best part of his life to the pursuit of accumulating money, without ever giving a thought to the ideals of good citizenship, a man may succeed in enlarging his bank account but at the same time, he loses man's dearest possession—"the nobility of the soul"; and, in most instances, such a man invariably becomes a man-hating grouch, who does not know what happiness means.

Our gathering here every Thursday noon, though only for an hour, eases the monotony and grind of business, brings us closer to each other as citizens of Norwich; brings us into closer relation as friends; unites us in the cause of civic betterment when the occasion arises; implants in us the spirit of human helpfulness; makes our hearts beat in unison for the needy and deserving; urges us to do a good turn in as much as there is in our power and makes us better American citizens, not only in name, but in fact and in act.

This, fellow Lions, is my answer to the question, "Is the Lions club worth while?"

President Anderson then delivered an address of welcome to ex-President Edward Carpenter who had just returned from a three weeks' pleasure trip to Vermont, requesting "Ed" to give a description of his trip. The ex-president, in a very affable manner gave a true description of that beautiful country, saying that many people who go to Europe for a vacation in quest for fine scenery ought to change their course and visit this most wonderful country, which for natural beauty cannot be surpassed anywhere in the world. He also said that many towns in Vermont were named after our Connecticut cities and that he was delighted to visit Norwich, Vermont, which was a close competitor to the natural beauty of our Rose of New England.

He also told of the magnificent sight one can have from Mount Mansfield, Vermont, and while on their side of the mountain they were enjoying beautiful sunshine, the other side of the mountain was visited by a severe rain storm. For those who love fishing "Ed" said that they can find no better deep fishing than at Cold Spring camp and Salmon Lake; the latter, although almost inaccessible, is full of salmon and can give the fisherman the thrill of his life.

The meeting closed with the singing of The Star Spangled Banner.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE MOVING TO THAYER BLDG

Beginning August 1st the Norwich Chamber of Commerce offices will be located in the Thayer building, occupying offices on the first floor formerly occupied by Dr. Paul F. Gadle and now occupied by Attorney Josiah Greenstein.

The main office of the chamber will be in the room now occupied by Mr. Greenstein, while the assembly and conference rooms for committee work will be across the corridor, in the offices formerly used by Dr. Gadle.

WITH SCIENTISTS BARRED THE SCOPES TRIAL WILL BE BRIEF

Judge Raulston's Decision Excluding Proposed Testimony From Scientific Experts Aroused the Ire of the Attorneys For the Defense—Darrow For the Defense Engaged in Sharp Repartee With Attorney General Stefart—Darrow Also Clashed With Judge Raulston—It is Forecast That the Arguments Will Be Concluded and the Case Given to the Jury Some Time Tuesday.

DAYTON, Tenn., July 17.—(AP)—The briefest session yet of the court trying the Scopes case, today brought the stormiest hour of the trial and forecast an early end of the "evolution test." Judge John T. Raulston by excluding proposed testimony from an array of scientists, shortened the trial by days. The court's decision aroused the ire of attorneys for the defense, sharp words being directed at the court soon after he had read his opinion.

With their experts barred from the witness stand the defense will place affidavits in the record setting forth what the zoologists, biologists, pathologists and others would have said had they been allowed to speak. To permit the preparation of these statements adjournment was ordered until Monday morning.

The defense was not expected to offer other witnesses and after filing of the scientific statements, arguments would be in order. Varying estimates were made of the time required for speech making but it was considered probable that they would be concluded in two days and the case given to the jury some time Tuesday.

Today's session was devoted to the reading of the judicial decree against occupancy of the witness stand by scientists and sharp language by attorneys.

Defense Takes Exception

The first flare up from the defense table came immediately after the opinion was read when Arthur G. Hays asked that an exception be noted, adding:

"It is contrary to every element of Anglo-Saxon procedure and jurisprudence to refuse to permit evidence as to what evolution is and what it means and what the Bible is and what it means."

Attorney General Stewart objected to the manner in which the defense exception was stated declaring that he considered it a reflection on the court.

"Well, it doesn't hurt this court," Judge Raulston said. "I think there is no danger of it hurting the court," replied the attorney general.

"There is no danger of it hurting us," was Mr. Darrow's contribution.

"No, you are already hurt as much as you can be hurt" came from Stewart.

"Don't worry about us," replied Darrow. "The state of Tennessee doesn't rule the world yet, with the hope of enlightening the court as a whole I want to say that the scientists probably will not correct the words 'descent of man,' and I want to explain what descent means, and starting with a low form and finally reaching man."

"We all have dictionaries" said Stewart.

"I don't think the court has one," rejoined Darrow.

Judge Raulston in his opinion ruling the experts out had said:

"I desire to suggest that I believe evolutionists should at least show enough consideration to substitute the word "ascent for 'descent.' "

The suggestion was made in connection with a review of the acts of the legislature under which the indictment against Scopes was brought by which it was made unlawful "to teach any theory that denies the story of divine creation as taught in the Bible and to teach instead that man has descended from a lower order of animals."

The exchange between Darrow and Stewart continued for a few moments with the jurors taking no part. Eventually it shifted to a discussion of the proper method of getting the testimony of the scientists into the record of the case. Defense counsel submitted that witnesses should be heard in the presence of the court and absence of the jury.

The attorney general submitted that sufficient testimony should be permitted in the record to enable the supreme court to pass upon the proposition but argues that no long drawn out examination could be conducted, "and make a farce of your honor's opinion."

Arthur G. Hays said that the defense sould have the right; to argue before the court that the law is unreasonable.

The attorney general suggested that the excluded evidence be put in substance, Darrow replying that he was willing to do that.

William Jennings Bryan entered the discussion with a question to the court if the witnesses were permitted to testify as experts for the information of the court if they would be subject to cross examination.

Judge Raulston replied that the state would be given the opportunity to cross examine if the witnesses went on the stand.

Darrow Disagrees With Judge

This drew a statement from Darrow that the state had no such right. Finally the court ruled that the defense might put its testimony in the form of affidavits but if witnesses were used they would be cross examined.

"Then we will make statements of what we expect to prove," said Darrow. "Can we have the rest of the day to draft them?"

"If your honor takes half a day to write an opinion"—the judge interrupted, but the defense counsel spoke up again: "We want to make statements here of what we expect to prove. I do not understand why every request of the prosecution should meet with endless time and a bare suggestion of anything that is perfectly competent on our part should be immediately overruled."

"I hope you do not mean to reflect upon the court," said the judge.

"Well, your honor has the right to hope," said Darrow.

"I have a right to do something else, perhaps," suggested the judge.

Mr. Darrow's reply to this was "all right, all right."

The discussion of how long would be required for the preparation of the scientific statements continued and when it was finally decided that adjournment to Monday morning would be necessary another debate developed. The second issue was if the statements were to be placed in the record or the defense permitted to state their proof. Attorneys for the state insisted that the statements alone could be placed in the record. No decision was made on this point, Judge Raulston announcing that he would rule Monday morning.

The jury was expected to return to the courtroom sometime Monday, provided with the most comfortable chairs in the court room the jury men have been given the opportunity to occupy them less than three hours in the six court days of the trial. They will however be guaranteed seats during the argument.

BRIEFS IN MOVIE TAX CASE SENT TO NEW YORK

NEW HAVEN, July 17—A special dispatch to the Journal Courier tonight from Hartford says that the briefs of the state in the action pending in the United States district court to determine the constitutionality of the new movie tax law will be sent to New York tomorrow, it was learned from Attorney Arthur L. Shipman of Hartford, special counsel for the state, tonight.

Attorney Shipman's briefs contain a more comprehensive argument along the line of that made at the hearing before the court and he cites authorities purporting to show that the state has the power to pass legislation of this kind, the dispatch says.

The claim of the American Feature Film Company, of Boston and the Fox Film Corporation, of New York, complainants in the action, that such films as "The Ten Commandments," "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," or "The Christian," could not be classified properly under the new law because they are both educational and entertaining, was one of the points which Mr. Shipman passed over as inconsequential, according to the dispatch.

The complainant attorneys, Benedict M. Holden, of Hartford and George W. Wickersham and Edwin P. Grosvenor of New York, filed briefs on Thursday with Judge Henry W. Rogers in New York. In addition to Judge Rogers, the briefs will be scanned by Judges Henry Goddard and Thomas Thatcher, the three judges constituting the special court which heard arguments in the case here on July 10.

LIQUOR TRANSPORTED IN TRAVELING TRUNKS

NEW YORK, July 17—A bootleg ring operating throughout New York and the entire middle west by shipping liquor by express in traveling trunks was broken up today, prohibition agents said, after the arrest of seven men and one woman and the seizure of books and papers containing the names and addresses of clients and showing that approximately 20,000 orders had been filled.

Keys to the trunks, according to the agents, were sent to the customers by mail and the empty trunks were then returned by express. More than forty solicitors went throughout the middle west taking orders for liquor. United States Attorney Emory R. Buckner said.

The eight persons arrested on a charge of conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws were arraigned before United States Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter, who issued the warrant for the raid on the Broadway apartment where they were found.

BIG SHAKE UP COMING IN PROHIBITION FORCES

NEW YORK, July 17.—(AP)—The biggest shake up in the history of prohibition enforcement, comprising dropping from the rolls all the enforcement agents in the country, so that the whole force may be reorganized, is scheduled to take place in about a month, Roy A. Haynes, federal prohibition commissioner, announced today.

Although a large percentage of the agents will necessarily have to be reappointed because of their familiarity with the work or on account of other qualifications Commissioner Haynes said, there will be a general redistribution of personnel.

"Some of the new administrations," Mr. Haynes said, "will be appointed from the present personnel, but there will be extensive reallocation. Some of the New York force will be assigned to Buffalo and some of connecticut's force to New York.

"The numbers will remain about the same. "He confirmed reports that General Lincoln C. Andrews, assistant secretary of the treasury and the nation's new prohibition chief, intends to concentrate on the source of the contraband liquor supply, leaving other phases of the rum war largely to the local governmental agencies.

Two of the men entered the store while a third remained outside. Weisberg was asked for some soda. As he handed them the two bottles, one thrust a revolver against his body. He was forced into a rear room where his feet were fastened with his own belt, a handkerchief stuffed into his mouth and his wrist fastened with a cord. The trio made good their escape.

Has Wrong Man Been Condemned to Die?

Telegraph Operator Wires That Robert, Not Russell, Scott Was the Murderer.

DETROIT, July 17.—(AP)—The DeJames M. Ball, local telegraph operator tonight telegraphed Governor Len Small of Illinois that he was a witness to the shooting of Joseph Maurer in a Chicago drug store a year ago and that Robert and not Russell Scott was the murderer.

A message sent to Scott himself from Detroit and signed James M. Ball advised the condemned man to send his father to Detroit to obtain evidence that would help Russell.

Ball, an operator for the Postal Telegraph company here, said he paid no attention to Scott's trial in Chicago as he seldom had time to read the newspapers. However, he saw a picture of Russell Scott in a newspaper here yesterday and immediately identified it as the likeness of one of the men who participated in the affair in which Maurer was killed.

Today, Ball decided to telegraph Scott's father that he had important evidence and asked Scott's father to come here. The elder Mr. Scott placed the matter in the hands of an attorney.

This evening, receiving no word from Chicago, Ball telegraphed Governor Small that he would appear before the Illinois executive if wanted, will swear that Robert and Not Russell is the slayer and that the shooting did not occur in a holdup, as the state alleged in Russell Scott's trial, but during an argument over a bill which the two brothers were trying to collect.

Ball was in the city hall drugstore when the killing took place. He said that Robert tried to collect a bill from Maurer and that a heated argument took place.

"When Russell saw a fight might come, he stepped in and told his brother the sum was too trivial to make such a fuss over and that they had better leave before someone got hurt.

Robert refused, however, and when Maurer made a motion as if to threaten him, he bent forward and fired several shots.

"It happened so quickly I don't know exactly how many shots were fired or where Robert Scott fired from. He did it so quickly I didn't get a clear view. But anyhow Russell, the elder brother, was standing with his hands to his sides."

CONDEMNED MAN SKEPTICAL OF SOURCE OF TELEGRAM

CHICAGO, July 17.—(AP)—Russell Scott, one time Canadian financier, snatched from the gallows by a week's reprieve from Governor small a few hours before he was to have been hanged today for the murder of a drug store clerk in a holdup, tonight was as skeptical as the authorities over the authenticity of a telegram that saved him from death for a week.

Scott and his brother, Robert, both were indicted for the murder of the drug clerk but Robert was never apprehended. The reprieve, the latest of many Scott has received, came after a telegram from Detroit signed "Robert Scott" and stating that he had killed the clerk and would give himself up, had been received at the governor's office at Springfield.

No word has been heard in Detroit, Chicago or anywhere else from Robert.

President Coolidge Visited Camp Devens

President Stood For an Hour Reviewing Various Units of of the Old Yankee Division.

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., July 17.—(AP)—President Coolidge returned to the summer White House early tonight from Camp Devens where he reviewed the 26th National Guard division.

Motoring back from the camp, 50 miles from White Court, the president stopped for a moment at historic Concord bridge, where, at the outset of the Revolutionary war, as Emerson put it, "once the embattled farmers stood and fired the shot heard around the world."

At Camp Devens, the training camp during the war of the 76th National Army division, Mr. Coolidge stood for an hour while various units of the old Yankee division which saw valiant service overseas and once before was reviewed by a president—by Woodrow Wilson in France in the winter of 1918-1919—filed past.

In the reviewing stand with the president were Senators Butler and Gillette of Massachusetts, Maj. Gen. Edward L. Logan, commander of the 26th division, Secretary Sanders, Maj. James F. Coupal, the president's physician who served overseas in a hospital unit of the division, and Rep. Connery of the seventh Massachusetts district, who served as a private and sergeant with the division in France.

Twenty feet from the reviewing stand during the review sat Maj. Clarence R. Edwards, retired, who led the 26th division into action in France. He was in citizens clothes and apparently the president was not aware of his presence. As he left the reviewing stand Mr. Coolidge paused a moment to exchange greetings with the former commander of the division.

During the review as helmeted doughboys, the artillery, hospital and ambulance units, engineers, the supply train and the tanks passed by, seven bands massed before the president played continuously.

Leaving White Court at noon, the president on his way to Camp Devens traversed part of the route of Paul Revere on his memorable ride. Returning, he paused at Concord to take into his automobile Pauline Evelet, 10 years old, who presented him with a bouquet of field flowers and accompanied him to Concord bridge.

There, the president was approached by another shy youngster, Elizabeth Wentworth, 7 years old, of Concord, who handed him a bunch of sweet peas.

Mrs. Coolidge did not accompany the president on his trip. Prior to his departure, while he was conferring at White Court with Secretary Davis, she motored to Lynn to do some shopping and visited for the first time the executive offices there.

COOLIDGE READY TO ACT IN CASE OF COAL STRIKE

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., July 17.—(AP) While hoping that a strike in the anthracite fields will be averted, President Coolidge and Secretary Davis determined today upon a program to be pursued in case of an emergency.

Secretary Davis called at White Court to confer with the executive on pending department of labor problems, prior to a visit to Europe. The conversation centered on the anthracite coal field wage argument now pending.

Mr. Davis declared that though two representatives of the department of labor were taking part in the negotiations if a strike developed the government was ready to take a hand. What part the government would play in the possible strike was not disclosed.

The secretary made it known, however, that he would return to this country on August 25, six days before the present wage agreement between the anthracite coal operators and the miners expired.

The attitude of President Coolidge, who is following developments in the wage negotiations as well as in other business situations, was not disclosed.

GERMAN REVALUATION BILL IS SIGNED BY HINDENBURG

Act Converts Wartime and Pre-War Loans Aggregating 70,000,000,000 Marks Into a Gold Debt of 3,500,000,000 Marks—Measure is so Complicated That Few Understand Its Intricacies—Revaluation Will Not Be Effected Until Germany's Reparations Obligations Have Been Squared.

BERLIN, July 17.—(AP)—President Von Hindenburg's signature of the much-debated revaluation bill passed by the reichstag Tuesday, generally is lamented by the left press, although the viewpoint of other political groups is that the president could hardly have acted otherwise.

The affixing of the signature, took place late yesterday afternoon, after the president had listened all day to the arguments of Chancellor Luther and other members of the cabinet. The revaluation bill is so complicated that few understand all its implications.

Roughly, state loans are to be revalued at 2 1-2 per cent., both in the case of holders before July 1, 1920, and those who obtain their securities after that date. However, the revaluation is not to be effected until after Germany's reparations obligations have been squared.

Proposed differentiation between old and new bondholders was one of the problems of the measure. A decision by the revaluation committee of the reichstag to grant new holders revaluation of 3 1-2 per cent., compared to 5 per cent. for old subscribers caused the bourse committee to close the exchange on July 8 as a protest. All other exchanges also ceased operations.

The bourse committee announced today that the official quotation of pre-war loans would be resumed on July 20, indicating the form in which the revaluation bill was passed is satisfactory to it.

In the case of old holders who are in dire circumstances provisions give them a rental not exceeding 800 marks annually. It is estimated that the face value of the loans in the hands of old holders total about 50,000,000,000 marks and those in the hands of new holders 20,000,000,000.

All mortgages and other debts on landed property, and debts in shipping and railway lines have been revalued at 25 per cent. But the owner of mortgaged property can in certain cases, if it is shown he was hard hit, apply for another valuation to 15 per cent.

Holders of mortgages who, before June 15, 1922 accepted redemption of their claims without reservations, are not entitled to revaluation under the law.

Industrial bonds have been revalued at 15 per cent.

DR. COLEY SEES HOPE FOR GREATER CONTROL OF CANCER

NEW YORK, July 17—(A. P.)—Isolation of the cancer germ should result in greater control of the disease, in the opinion of Dr. William S. Coley, noted New York surgeon, who was credited by leading English medical publications with being among the first to advance the theory now declared to have been proven, recent discoveries by Drs. W. E. Gye and J. E. Barnard do not necessarily foreshadow an early cure. However, he said today.

"Finding the tuberculosis germ did not result in the discovery of an immediate cure," he explained, "but it did result in lowering the mortality rate fifty per cent.

"Such discoveries as these may teach us how to avoid infection and increase bodily resistance."

"Irritation of tissue is one of the chief causes of cancer," Dr. Coley said.

EFFORTS TO SETTLE COAL STRIKE AT CAPE BRETON

HALIFAX, N. S., July 17.—(AP)—Steps toward adjudication of the five-months' strike of employees of the British Empire Steel company, involving 12,000 miners employed in Cape Breton collieries, have been taken by the new Conservative government in the arrangement of a conference between mine, labor and government officials, it was announced today.

HARD COAL NEGOTIATORS CONTINUE TO HAGGLE

ATLANTIC City, N. J., July 17—(A. P.)—Miners today closed the week's parley by requesting the mine owners to list the salaries which, according to the diggers, were being paid to coal company presidents, directors and "high priced lawyers." The miners said they wished to place these figures in evidence in consideration of the labor cost of anthracite production: a cost which operators say should "come down."

At first the mine owners were on their dignity at this "irrelevant" jab at confidential material, and gave the miners to understand they did not deem the suggestion worthy of consideration. Later, however they reconsidered, wires began to hum between the boardwalk and company offices in the coal fields, and assurance was finally given that the information would be forthcoming when the joint scale sub-committee reconvenes Tuesday afternoon.

Philip Murray, international vice president of the miners, asserted tonight progress of the negotiations was being retarded by operators' "propaganda" which he said, was seeking to use the absence of President John L. Lewis to "discredit" the remainder of the miners' negotiators.

"The sub-committee of the anthracite mine workers," said Mr. Murray, "exercises the same authority to negotiate a wage agreement with the anthracite coal operators as if Mr. Lewis were present."

He recalled that the agreement in 1920 was negotiated with Mr. Lewis away.

Anthracite interest will shift Monday to Wilkesbarre where District 1 opens its annual convention. A spirited program is anticipated in view of the recent re-election of President Rinaldo Carpellini after a heated campaign. An alternate will fill Carpellini's place on the scale sub-committee here the balance of the week.

MARSHAL PETAIN TO DIRECT MOROCCAN WAR

PARIS, July 17—(A. P.)—That the French government is resolved to put an end to the Moroccan war and in order to do so is prepared to provide men and material without stint, is generally held to be the explanation for the visit of an army officer of the rank and prestige of Marshal Petain to the seat of war. Three months will see the end of the campaign season in Morocco, and it is declared that the operations against the rebellious tribesmen ought to be accomplished by that time.

Marshal Petain, who reached Morocco late this afternoon will go over the whole situation with Marshal Pyautey, the French governor general and General Naulin, the newly appointed commander-in-chief.

Marshal Petain plans to remain in Morocco for 15 days. He will install General Naulin in command, and together with the general and Marshal Lyautey will lay the foundations for an organization which it is believed will bring rapid victory.

He said that it must have been someone else who did the damage, as he could remember nothing of what happened Thursday night. When he came to his senses he was in a cell at police headquarters. Prosecuting Attorney Harry E. Gaucher made a strong plea in which he warned against the lawlessness which has been prevailant, due to the industrial strife. He asked the people to control their feelings and avoid the necessity of drastic legal means to quell the disturbances in lower village. Judge Foss noted the charge of intoxication and found Bruycker guilty of the other charges, fining him $25 and a 15 day jail sentence for assault, 30 days in jail for resisting an officer and $25 for injury to private property. CITY NEAR WATER FAMINE, BUT THE WORST IS NOW OVER

WILLIMANTIC, July 17.—Willimantic went on undisturbed during the past month while it unconsciously faced a water crisis in its history, it became known Friday, followed a preliminary investigation of conditions by City Engineer Robert E. Mitchell, who has summoned Henry W. Taylor, consulting hydraulic and sanitary engineer, of New York, to assist him. While city officials fretted and worried to find that the city storage reservoir on Hosmer Mountain was gradually lowering, until it dropped to the alarming point of 11 1-2 feet below high water line, in spite of the steady, twenty-four hour hum of the pumps at the station in Mansfield, the populace consumed water in contentment.

In April, 1925, the city council passed a resolution authorizing the Water Committee, Aldermen W. A. Buck, P. J. Laramee and Charles H. Beebe to study the matter of having an adequate investigation made of certain factors of the water department situation. During May and June, the committee looked on helplessly as the water in the reservoir lowered. In the meantime, the big pumps were being operated day and night in a fruitless effort to overcome this condition. This led the committee to ask for an investigation to determine the causes for this apparently increased consumption, or to show the need of additional pumping equipment to keep pace with this demand. The resolution of the common council included, in addition to an investigation, the matters of the need and costs of construction and maintenance of a filtration plant at the pumping station, supplementary chlorine equipment, additional pumping equipment and of additional force main piping capacity.

About the first of July the water in the reservoir had dropped eleven and one-half feet and the reserve stored water for both fire protection and domestic use became dangerously depleted. The water committee called the attention of City Engineer Mitchell to this critical situation and his suggestion was that the amount of water being used for sewer flushing be reduced. He further suggested the seducing of the services of Mr. Taylor, who is an expert in that line, and the latter seconded Engineer Mitchell's plan to have all the flush tanks temporarily shut off in order to note the difference in the total consumption of water.

The reservoir quickly began to rise, from 5 to 12 inches per day, and at present is full to capacity, while the pumping station is being operated on an eight-hour basis, as against the twenty-four hour pumpage previously required.

This is the first time in over four years that the pumps have been operated on less than a twenty-four hour shift. As a matter of fact the water flow to the flush tanks was not completely shut off being reduced by about two-thirds, thus allowing for a sufficient flushing of the sewers and yet producing beneficial results, against the high water consumption. The water committee held another meeting July 6th and authorized City Engineer Mitchell, with Henry W. Taylor as consultant, to continue the investigation and submit a joint report at a later date.

As City Engineer Mitchell puts it, he can now get a full night's sleep. With the alarming situation of June and early July remedied, there is no danger of depletion of stored water in the reservoir and the amount of pumpage required to supply the city with an adequate amount of water has been reduced by about 25 per cent.

PROVIDENCE REPORTER SHOWS HIS RIGHT TO GET NEWS

WILLIMANTIC, July 17.—Clarence J. Kearney of 50 Weybosset street, Providence, R. I., a reporter for The Providence News, which has devoted much attention to the strike at the American Thread Company was charged with broach of the peace and trespassing on private property when in police court Friday morning, Kearney pleaded not guilty and acted as his own attorney, in an able manner, being acquitted of the trespassing charge and receiving suspended judgment for breach of the peace.

Kearney did not take the witness stand in his own behalf, but cross-examined the state witnesses, including State Policeman Kamminski, who made the arrest and Deputy Sheriffs Fitts and Tillinghast, who were witnesses to the arrest. Kearney is said to have invited arrest, to make a test case of the affair. William Chatifoux and Edward Dupont, who testified in Kearney's behalf, said that they failed to note any sarcasm in his remarks to the officer. Kearney elicited considerable laughter from a sympathetic gallery of spectators in his attempts to have Deputy Sheriffs Tillinghast and Fitts describe what expression his face had when he was arrested. One called it a defying smile and the other a look which was nothing like the one being shown in court. Judge Foss ruled that reporters are generally allowed to go almost anywhere for news and seldom denied the privilege of newsgetting, nevertheless they should move when ordered to do so by proper authority.

A Record Gas-Pipe

A steel tube, 16 inches in diameter and 210 miles long, which, when completed, will be one single piece, is under construction between Beaumont, Texas, and the natural gas fields near Shreveport.

That a jointless tube of such tremendous length is possible is due to the fact that every junction between sections is sealed by oxy-acetylene welding. Ordinarily they would be joined together by screw couplings. This pipe line, which will carry natural gas to Beaumont, crosses two rivers, many creeks and run underground through four states.

POETRY

TO THE MAN-OF-WAR BIRD.

Thou who hast slept all night upon the storm,
Waking renewed on thy prodigious pinions.
(Burst the wild storm? above it thou ascend'st,
And rested on the sky, thou slave that cradled there.)
Now a blue point, far, far in heaven floating,
As to the light emerging here on deck I watch thee, (Myself a speck, a point on the world's floating vast.)

Far, far at sea,
After the night's fierce drifts have strewn the shore with wrecks,
With re-appearing day as now so happy and serene,
The rosy and elastic dawn, the flashing sun,
The limpid spread of air cerulean.
Thou also re-appearest,

Thou born to match the gale, (thou art all wings,)
To cope with heaven and earth and sea and hurricane,
Thou ship of air that never furl'st thy sails,
Days, even weeks untired and onward, through spaces, realms gyrating,
At dusk thou look'st on Senegal, at morn America,
That spot'st amid the lightning-flash and thunder-cloud.
In them, thy experiences, hadst thou my soul,
What joys! what joys were thine!

—Walt Whitman.

SONNET IN A GARDEN.

Dumb Mother of all music, let me rest
On thy great heart while summer days pass by;
While all the heat up-quivers, let me lie
Close gathered to the fragrance of thy breast.
Let not the pipe of birds from some high nest
Give voice unto a thought of melody,
Nor dreaming clouds afloat along the sky
Meet any wind of promise from the west,
Save for that grassy breath that never more
The peace, but seems a musing of thine own,
Keep thy dear silence. So, embraced, alone,
Forgetful of relentless prison-bars,
My soul shall hear all songs, unsung, unknown,
Uprising with the breath of all the stars.

—Josephine Preston Peabody.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Once again there was an illustration, Friday, that death lurks at grade crossings. The serious accident at Bishop's crossing in the town of Plainfield is the happening in mind. Here is a crossing so located and with such available visibility, both north and south, that it is strange to people familiar with it that such serious accidents happen there. It is true that a frank cline highway of the state of Connecticut does cut across it. But it is also true that the approaches to the crossing are plainly marked to give every driver due warning of the danger he may encounter, even drivers not familiar with the locality. The old saying that a driver never should assume that it is not train-time always holds good. Every minute of every hour of the day is train-time—somewhere, and often where one does not figure a train is due.

Down at Tobbyhanna, Pa., the officers and men of the Service battery are today (Saturday) rounding out their annual period of field service. They have been away since July 1. They expect to start for home early Sunday morning. Only three days should be required to make the trip as they will come over state highways in a convoy of motor vehicles. The boys have worked hard and have had a good time at Tobbyhanna. They have found opportunity to play baseball as well as to put in scores of hard service in training. In off time they have ventured into the coal mining district around Scranton and have viewed the mines, their equipment and their operation. Incidentally, the overland trip also has been educational. It has given the easterners an insight to the doings of other parts of the country. The officers and men, in spite of all the hard work, have enjoyed it. But they will be glad to get home—and Danielson will be delighted to have them home again.

It now appears probable that the proposed reflector to warn traffic of a dangerous intersection at Broad and Reynolds street will be authorized installed through the borough of Danielson, by the state highway department. Warden Walter Anderson understands that the state highway department likely will approve the plan. It certainly is a good one. All of the heavy traffic that goes over the Providence-Danielson route—probably the heaviest in this section of eastern Connecticut moves across Broad street. The north and south traffic through Broad street is not light. That means a real traffic problem, especially in view of the fact that many drivers come down the Reynolds street hill, just above the intersection, no slower than they should come for safety, while other drivers, going up, step on the gas to make the Reynolds street grade just before they come to the intersection of streets. The red reflector should slow them down. If it doesn't, they will act much the same as many of them do at grade crossings.

At the week end, Allen Buffington of East Killingly steps into the limelight bringing an eel extraordinary, to whed fame upon his home community. This particular eel came from the waters of old Killingly pond and weighs 5 1-2 pounds. This elongated fish, destitute of ventral fins, seems utterly to destroy the theory of evolution. The thing must have been an eel for at least 6,000,000 years. The only evolution it appears to have done is in growing large—and it made a real success at that. Recent earth tremors may have thrown it up from ever so deep in the mud of the lake. King George Jacques, from whose kingdom this mammoth of the waters was taken, allows that the eel is of prehistoric age. Mr. Buffington, it may be mentioned, caught this eel in the day time, when eels, as a general rule, are in repose. Experience has taught that their activities are greatest at night. Possibly this one became disgusted with things in general and committed suicide by appending himself to Mr. Buffington's hook.

PUTNAM

Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Torrey have started by automobile for a trip through the middle west, with Marietta, Ohio, as their probable destination. Marietta is one of the oldest cities of the state. It is on the Muskingum river, one of the most beautiful inland streams of the country, where it empties into the Ohio, which does not come under that description. The town was founded by General Rufus Putnam, a brother of Israel Putnam. At Harmer, or West Marietta, on the opposite side of the Muskingum river, the Putnam Mansion is still standing. The ancestors of Vice-President Dawes were among its earliest settlers; his boyhood was spent there and many of his relatives still live there.

Of the first twenty families who made their homes there two are ancestors of Mr. Torrey, the Davis family and the Cutlers. Descendants of both families are still residents of the city. Mr. Torrey has in his possession letters from pioneers dating back more than a century. He has had no correspondence, himself, with his relatives in Marietta and vicinity for many years, but he expects to find many people there who are distantly connected and he expects to find an abundant amount of historical lore.

One of the members of the Davis family, an uncle of the fifth or sixth generation back, gave the name of the Buckeye state to Ohio. In all seasons of the buckeye, or horse chestnut tree, grows in profusion.

Mr. and Mrs. Torrey will go from here to Albany, thence through Herkimer county, across Pennsylvania and to southern Ohio. They will make the trip by easy stages, stopping at hotels over night. According to present plans they will be gone for a month, but Mr. Torrey said that it was possible they might continue their journey to Wisconsin, which is double the distance.

Circus day in Putnam brought a large crowd into the city for both afternoon and evening performance. It is believed that there never before have been so many motor cars on the streets of Putnam as were seen Friday.

The funeral of Ellsworth Amidon, the 13-year-old boy who was drowned at the Y. M. C. A. camp at Woodstock, was largely attended, nearly all of the boys at the camp and their instructors being there. Services were held at Abington church, being conducted by Rev. Mr. Walm, the pastor, and Rev. Mr. Theines, the latter the leader of the Hartford group. The bearers were Stanley and Norman Amidon, brothers of the dead boy.

DISTINGUISHED PERSONS ATTEND SEARLS FUNERAL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, July 17.—The funeral of Charles E. Searls, state's attorney for Windham county, brought to Putnam and Thompson, Friday, the largest number of distinguished people that has ever assembled in either town. There were jurists from both the supreme and superior court bench, nearly every member of the Windham county bar, many other well known lawyers from various parts of the state and all of the representatives to the General Assembly from the county except the speaker of the house, E. L. Durbie, who is at camp at Niantic with his regiment.

Services were held at the Searls home in Thompson. Rev. Stephen T. Livingstone, pastor of the Congregational church, read a chapter from the Scripture and a favorite poem of Mr. Searls'. Rev. Dr. William Beach Olmsted, of Pomfret, offered prayer. The body was taken to Pomfret for burial in the Sabin cemetery.

When James Q. Thomas, a Mexican war veteran, died in February at Mansfield, Ill., he had been drawing a pension for 75 years, six months and sixteen days. That is believed to be a record duration for a pension. According to the figures at the pension office, Thomas had been paid $22,046.23 since August 18, 1849, when he first started drawing a pension. He was born in Bourbon county, Kentucky, in November, enlisted in the army in July, 1846, was assigned to Company E, mounted rifles, and served with the artillery until discharged at Jalapa, Mexico, because of disability. Originally his pension had been $8 a month. That was gradually increased to $30 a month in 1920, when a new pension law allowed him $72 monthly. He lived to be more than 96 years of age. His death leaves only ninteen Mexican veterans still on the pension rolls.

JEWETT CITY

Mrs. George Rocheleau has as her guests, her mother, Mrs. Joseph Lefevre, of Willimantic, and four aunts, Mrs. C. Moquin, of Willimantic, Miss Dora Bergeron of Claremont, N. H., Sister St. Charity of Berlin, N. H., nad Sister Mary Herodina of Tacoma, Wash. These five sisters, two of whom are nuns, have not been all together for 20 years.

Forty cans of fingerling trout were brought to Jewett City, Friday, from the state hatchery, and under the supervision of A. L. Stebbins, president of the Ashland Fish and Game Protective association, they were distributed in the several trout brooks of Griswold.

The Methodist church Sunday school is to hold its picnic today (Saturday) at Mohegan park, Norwich. Those who go will find transportation leaving the church at 1 p. m. (advance time).

The popularity and fame of the borough's Fourth of July proved great and far-reaching and the end is not yet. Many fine photographs have been given away and offered for sale during the past week. The two prize winners, instead of being relegated to the junk pile, have become of flattering commercial value. The magnificent swan, for which the first prize was awarded Andrew McNicol, was purchased by a Norwich florist, and may possibly be entered in a future pageant in a distant city. The Baptist church float, which was of sufficient dimensions to have actually served in meeting house capacity providing too many did not attend at the same time, has been sold to Leland Green, to be utilized as a play-house for his little children.

The model was about 6 cubits long by 4 wide, and the spire was 5 cubits high.

The Hebrew cubit is 23 inches and the Roman 17 1-2 inches so it is readily seen that the children will have a considerable good sized play-house.

And more than all this, Old Cluny Watson is thinking seriously of holding an auction to dispose of the various trappings he wore. He has already made a man a present of the horse he rode so as not to have to feel it any more. He said Friday that Bill McNicol, could sell any old thing at an auction for other folks. So the gun, traps, skins and camp lantern will be turned over to him.

A Jewett City man, now a resident of another city in Connecticut, always much interested in railroading, has sent to a friend here the following clipping. Written on the top of the story is "N. B., New Haven road."—

Has Only One Engine

The Suncook Valley system has only one engine, one express car, one passenger car, one milk car and one combination passenger-baggage-express and mail car, yet they make two trips each way a day, cover nearly 80 miles and give efficient service at an expense far below that ever known on the road before.

This road, however, can claim capacity business. The milk car is usually filled, the express car always, and the combination passenger car of 46 seats many times overflows into the baggage compartment, where the men have the privilege of smoking and yarn spinning, in return for which they sometimes feel inclined to get out and boost a when crate or two, or a box of shoes.

About half the mornings of the year the Suncook Valley boys have it on the sun in the matter of early rising, and on the other half, Old Sol is only two jumps ahead of them. For this train crew gets up before breakfast and breakfast is at 5:30 o'clock.

Finn's tonight. Last chance to see the big parade pictures.—adv.

A missionary society was organized in the Methodist church Thursday afternoon, at a meeting held at the parsonage. The officers elected are: president, Mrs. M. H. Bartlett; vice president, Mrs. A. C. Burdick; secretary, Mrs. E. B. Cheney, treasurer, Mrs. Sweetzer, corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. W. Carter, mite box secretary, Juliette Richmond, Mrs. Harris of New London was present and gave a most interesting talk on missionary work.

The Baptist Sunday school is to hold its annual picnic today (Saturday) on the Pachaug Grange fair grounds. Automobiles will leave the church at 1 p. m. (advance time).

Rev. J. W. Payne is to preach at the Methodist church Sunday.

THE REPORT ON WATER

The report which has been made by the board of water commissioners to the court of common council concerning the present water supply and the need of increasing it calls for careful consideration. It is the product of much study and comes as the result of the dry seasons which have been experienced.

The board has put forth its findings, explained why certain possible developments are inadvisable, what they would cost and without definitely committing itself it would appear that the board was favorable to the Deep river project which could be more than carried through by the bond issue which was authorized by the last session of the legislature but which has not as yet been acted upon by the city.

The Deep river and Pease brook watersheds would furnish the same amount of water, each having the same area, but the cost of dam construction and the advantage of a higher pressure through a greater elevation, as well as the lower expense of clearance, are carefully set forth.

The attention of the council and therefore the citizens is called to the fact that the city is serving approximately 30,000 people and that 42 per cent. of the city is metered. That means that a little more than half of the water is being distributed without waste, or if there is waste it is being paid for, but almost an equal amount is being distributed upon which there is no restriction.

The report must be regarded as one of information for the citizens. They to a supply, they know how much of the city is metered to stop waste, they know how much pumping has been done, they know the prospects of increased demands and what is required in order to take care of the future. In addition the report provides them with the result of investigations as to the possible sources of development and the cost attending the same. It is preliminary, with the approval of the council, for the submission of the matter to the citizens for decision and furnishes food for thought concerning whether Norwich needs additional water supply now, what ought to be done to get it, where the reservoir should be established and what the outlay should be.

BUS DRIVERS

Rhode Island has been giving new attention to its highway problem since the establishment of its state police force. It is endeavoring to obtain greater safety and it is planning to employ its constabulary in the enforcement of rules and regulations.

These are the days when bus lines are in operation and more are being established. Recognition is given to the fact that these large conveyances are being operated in the highways the same as other cars and not on fixed rails like the trolleys. The Rhode Island board of public roads has therefore drawn up a set of rules for bus drivers in which it is required that they must undergo a test for the purpose of demonstrating their fitness under all conditions.

It is a well known fact that only qualified men are permitted to have freight trains, to say nothing of passenger and express trains. When it comes to operating trolleys men have to go through a certain amount of training and instruction for the purpose of learning the system as well as the operation of the car. And in the case of steam or electric cars such operation is confined to rails which are almost entirely on private property in the case of the railroads, though less so with the trolleys.

But in all instances there is the safety of the traveling public which must get consideration. With the busses there is the highway traffic in both directions also at stake. It is therefore of no little importance that men who are qualified to operate busses should be obtained. Bus lines may well look to this important feature themselves, but when it comes to the licensing of such drivers it is well to have good knowledge of the fitness of the operators for their work. With more and more busses due to be driven over the highways Rhode Island is starting none too soon in its effort to insist upon competent drivers.

A REMARKABLE CHANGE

Heretofore the democratic attitude has been that of opposition to anything that was recommended by Secretary Mellon of the treasury department. It is well known how his tax recommendations were fought and particularly what strong opposition was shown to his plan for the cutting of the surtaxes.

Since that time something has happened. There was a cut but the surtaxes were not lowered as much as recommended. But the change that was made has demonstrated the wisdom of such action, even to the extent of being acknowledged by those who opposed as further cut and they are now joining in the chorus for a large cut at the time of revision by the next congress.

Senators Glass of Virginia and Underwood of Alabama have come out for a substantial cutting and now they have been joined by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, democratic leader in the senate, who wants to see the maximum surtax of 40 per cent. reduced to 20 or 25 per cent. He is in favor of tax reduction all along the line and has no objection to offer to the abolition of the federal income tax.

This rush to support the Mellon idea can be regarded in no other light than that the test which has been made thus far has shown that he is correct. They don't admit it, but their enthusiasm for cutting the highest surtax in two is evidence which indicates that it would have been well had it been done at the time of the last reduction.

Of course with the democratic leaders urging such a slashing in the surtaxes there is nothing to convict them of taking especial care of the rich, but that was the interpretation which they gave to the fact that Secretary Mellon was urging such action. The fact of the matter is that the welfare of the nation is the cause for such advocacy. It was when Mr. Mellon urged it and it still continues to be. It is getting additional support because Mr. Mellon's contention has been proved under test. It is a welcome change but it only serves to strengthen the faith of the people in the policies of the treasury department and the administration.

POLLUTED STREAMS

That the investigation of the Connecticut river has failed to disclose a state of pollution that is prohibitive to the presence and development of fish will be learned with satisfaction. It is brought out in the investigations which have been made concerning shad in the rivers of Connecticut but it throws interesting light upon the movement for the checking of the pollution in the streams.

The investigators found that the sewage of Hartford and Middletown created particularly bad places below those cities, that from Hartford not purifying itself before reaching Middletown and that there are as the result places which are not much better than cesspools, but the condition is not such as to kill the fish or to make microscopic life impossible.

From this we may feel that pollution has not reached the degree of seriousness which had been believed Nevertheless it would appear that the situation is sufficiently bad to make it advisable to stop it from getting much worse. The fight against pollution is bound to cover much time. The effects of its influence may not be immediately noticeable except in the worst places, but the importance of making a start toward checking and thus gradually reducing the pollution can be appreciated. There is a larger volume of water in the Connecticut than in some of the other streams and it has never been maintained that the Connecticut was the worst example of pollution. It will be well however to set in motion such changes as will prevent the whole river from getting as bad as the two worst holes which the biologists found.

BIDS FOR SHIPS

When the shipping board refused to accept the recommendation of President Palmer of the fleet corporation to accept the bid of a million and a quarter for the 200 vessels offered for scrapping, it was incumbent upon it to get more money for those vessels. President Palmer advised the disposition of the ships to the highest bidder. In rejecting the bids and calling for others the board undoubtedly anticipated a bid from Henry Ford That bid has materialized and it is hundreds of thousands above the rest. That he is now the highest authentic bidder there is no question, but there is objection to the way in which the Ford bid has been brought out. It wasn't submitted with the others but came in on a second bid after all the others had been disclosed.

There is a disposition to feel that special consideration has been given Mr. Ford. Most certainly the government should get every cent possible for the ships. They will be disposed of for much less than they cost them, but if there was a refusal to accept the first high bid because another seemed probable, it is still possible for such reasoning to be used in connection with the bid that came from Maine for over two million for the ships and to inquire why the check for ten per cent. did not accompany it and whether it was overlooked by mistake or had not been properly handled in the mail.

Likewise if Mr. Ford is going to refit some of the ships instead of scrap them there could have been no objection to the previous high bidder's plan to market some of the engines and boilers.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Now and then the advance guard of dog days tell what may be expected.

Scopes can now be added to the list of those who can say: "We all have our trials."

Who is going to be blamed for creating the chance for boosting the price of fuel if the coal strike comes?

The man on the corner says: It is a tough world for that fellow who goes to sleep arguing with his conscience.

Those who have an interest in money always rest easier when it is learned that the counterfeiters have been caught.

Are there any of his victims who will rally to the support of Ponzi when deportation steps are taken following his prison sentence.

The Ford bid for the shipping board vessels arouses opposition, not because it is too high but because of the manner in which it was submitted.

When the governor of Pennsylvania makes a move in the coal situation is he trying to bring about another increase in the price of anthracite?

With rubber selling at $1.16 a pound isn't there any interest in reclaiming the old tires and rubbers that are kicking about in such large numbers?

THE MAN WHO TALKS

It is certainly gratifying to see the Church of God is moving onward and evidently upward. It seems to be cultivating the daring spirit which once would have been met with severe denunciation. To have broken away from a strait-laced orthodoxy 100 years ago would have been regarded as a sure sign of total depravity. The theater was condemned very severely as an instigation of the devil. Dancing and card-playing were put into the same class. Today our schools of religious education are having as part of their curricula the presentation of plays and other forms of the dramatic. That is, religion is to be brought home and made impressive by means of the drama. Yale is to have a theater as a feature of its instruction. In the teaching of literature the theater is to supplement the classroom. From no quarter whatever is any protest coming. Perhaps Dean Inge was right in saying that "the world's next prophet would be a dramatist."

While we are working ourselves up into a frenzy over a ridiculous law in a distant state, some other activities are going on much nearer home about which next to nothing is being said or written, and which, if long continued, will undermine this republic. I refer to the "red" propaganda that attempts to poison the minds of the ignorant adults, but chiefly the young of this country by calling it "imperialistic" and "tyrannical". Not long ago there was a meeting of the "reds" in Madison Square Garden-one of the very last to be held in the old building. There was a long list of speakers, most of whom were foreigners, but among them was a 14 year old boy who denounced this country in the most frightful language. It was treasonable from beginning to end. It is things like these, not evolution, that we need to guard against.

We are informed in the averaged-sized central office of the telephone system there are nearly 5000 miles of wire, and that in the Bell system alone in the United States there are six thousand central offices. This gives us some idea of the demand made upon our iron products. When we remember that in connection with this how much iron is required for structural purposes, this question of future supply is emphasized. It is this phase of it that makes it a moral as well as a scientific question. There will be a way out as in other things. Civilization has not yet been retarded by the failure of ways and means. How wonderfully has God provided fuel for illuminating purposes. In a long series we have had the tallow dip, the candle, whale oil, fluid, kerosene, gas and electricity. Here we have something inexhaustible, and the strange and almost unscientific thing about it is that, by using the supply does not diminish. If iron fails a substitute will be found.

It is not so many years ago that the parsons used to tell us about a total depravity in the pulpit and sometimes in private conversation with certain of their parishioners. Now they seldom do it except in their farewell sermons when they have been asked to resign. But why this change of front? Are we having a better grade of sinners than existed in the palmy days of Jonathan Edwards? Has modern education rubbed us to look so much farther into the human personality as to discover possibilities for sinning that were not dreamed of by our forefathers? Or, are our spiritual senses much keener than those of our grandfathers that we detect an inherent goodness in man which they failed to see? At any rate total depravity, as far as modern theology is concerned, is dead—"dead as a door nail"—just like Old Marley.

I trust that the serious-minded reader of these words (if there are any) will not laugh if he suggests that he has found where total depravity has gone to. On the principle of the indestructibility of matter it must have gone somewhere. In Bible times we are told that demons in great rage when they were sent out of human beings went into pork; in modern time demons, or what is the same thing, total depravity, have left man and gone into bugs (not the kind that are looked after in state institutions) but those that live in, and fatten on, gardens. One evidence of their total depravity is that they will leave luscious weeds alone and attack vegetables. Another evidence is that a good healthy pair will become the progenitors of 300,000,000 in a single season if one doesn't spend at least one half of his ill-gotten wealth in pyrox and sprayers. If this is not total depravity, pray tell me what is.

It is doubtless true that many men, and vastly more women, die from overwork. It is very strange that sociologists who tell us about everything, have nothing to say as to the number of those who die from underwork. Mortality from doing little or nothing is much greater than from overdoing. To use Biblical language: where the "Saul" of overwork "has slain his thousands," the "David" of underwork has slain his tens of thousands." In whatever way nature is disobeyed she rebels. When we read of poor tired wash-tub mothers bending over the wash-tub until they are claimed by By and By we begin to rant about the cruelty of modern conditions that makes such things possible. And we ought, of course, to do everything that lies in our power to lessen, if not wholly banish such conditions. But how about the 10,000 victims of ease and frivolity whose criminal lack of anything useful more than getting up pink teas pave the way for bad nerves!

It is a great gift to see beauty in what is generally regarded as unattractive. Most of us are guilty of seeing things through other people's eyes. We are either too incompetent or too lazy to use our own faculties and form our own judgments. We easily fall into the pernicious habit of letting other people think for us, and establish our standards of judgment. We say that cheese is rank because somebody who has great influence over us dislikes cheese. We rave over some ridiculous daub because we have heard some high mucky-muck say that it was a beautiful picture. Let some Madame Le Dough come out in Parisian society with a costume that was copied after Eve, female high life in New York is restless until the same appears on Fifth avenue. It is much easier to copy than to originate. It is much easier to babble parrot talk than to use language that expresses real thought. O to be able to see things for ourselves just as they are!

Now that is just the reason why I like Carlyle and Thoreau. They are so strikingly original. It may be that Carlyle banks too much upon his originality and is a bit too self-conscious of the fact, but certainly he is no cheap imitator. When it comes to accuracy of vision in seeing nature just as it is, no one surpasses Thoreau. For instance, the crowd does not see any beauty in a swamp. With most people it is nothing but "a dirty old mud hole." But Thoreau has this to say about it: "I derive more of my subsistence from the swamps which surround my native town than from the cultivated gardens in the village. There are no richer pastures to my eyes than the dense beds of dwarf andromeda which cover these tender places of the earth's surface." To most people the swamp has only slime and muck, but to other eyes it has beds of andromeda.

FIRST TO REACH SUMMIT OF MT. LOGAN

Having successfully reached the summit of Mount Logan, a hitherto unscaled peak in Yukon territory, a party of six adventurers headed by Captain A. H. McCarthy has returned safely to civilization. Mount Logan is in Yukon territory and has been considered only second to Mount Everest in formidable barriers.

Full details of the final stages of the expedition, which started May 8 from Cordova are not available, but some of the difficulties were told by Robert Morgan of Philadelphia, who was forced to descend with frozen feet after he had climbed 19,000 feet. Henry Hall, Jr., accompanied Morgan as far as Chitina on the return trip. A blizzard was raging when Hall and Morgan left the party June 20, with low temperature and snow falling. Bad weather followed them back to civilization, the entire 150-mile trip being on foot and requiring twenty days.

Mount Logan, which is 19,850 feet high and the second highest peak on this continent, has never before been climbed. Indeed, its distinction was only realized when the party in charge of the triangulation of the international boundary surveys discovered it while carrying out their duties along the coast adjacent to Yakutat bay. It is situated near the geographical center of the glaciated area. It has lofty neighbors, Mount St. Elias (18,008 feet), Mount Vancouver (15,676 feet) Mount Augusta (14,070 feet), and others, and it is hidden from the Pacific coast, except for its top, by the Augusta-St. Elias range. Though not to be compared with Mount Everest, it may, however, be called the Mount Everest of Canada. It ranges well above the European Alps, being 4,000 feet higher than LeBlanc and 5,000 feet higher than the Matterhorn. In this country it bows only to Mount McKinley, 400 miles away to the northwest in Alaska, which Archdeacon Stuck and his party climbed over ten years ago.

For some years Mount Logan has attracted the attention of both the Canadian and American Alpine clubs, but it was only in 1922 that definite steps were taken to organize an expedition. At a meeting in Vancouver in the autumn of 1923, aspiration took practical form when the Alpine club of Canada decided to attempt the peak. Preparations dragged until last July, but a sufficient fund was raised to make the attempt practicable.

Present indications are that the expedition will assemble at Seattle in April and sail for Valdez, Alaska, on May 2. Arriving at Valdez on the seventh, the party will go by train to McCarthy at the end of the railway communication. Some days will be spent there in final preparations for the climb, but by the fourteenth it is hoped the pack train will be ready to start on its seventy-nine mile journey to the end of the Chitina valley. Here the Logan glacier is reached, but food and necessities must be conveyed by porters over forty miles to the base of the mountain.

The climbing party, as now announced, will include a personnel of eight, with four or six porters, under the leadership of Mr. A. H. McCarthy and with H. F. Lambert of the Geodetic Survey of Canada as co-leader. The other members will include Colonel W. W. Foster, an ex-president of the Alpine club of Canada, and Mr. Allan Carpe. Of these four all are members of the Canadian Alpine club, and three are members of the American Alpine club, which has extended generous support to the expedition.

Started in May

The expedition started on their hazardous undertaking in May. Captain A. H. MacCarthy and his three packers returned at the end of April after laying supply dumps and making a thorough reconnaissance of the route to the foot of the great peak.

Mount Logan is very difficult of approach. Captain MacCarthy and his party traveled 950 miles over snowfields, glaciers and boulder-strewn terrain with bob-sleigh and dog-sled They met with unlooked for and serious obstacles on every one of the seventy days of the journey, with the temperature from 25 degrees to 40 degrees below zero. Only experienced mountaineers can fully appreciate the risks and the hardships which were encountered by Captain MacCarthy and his three companions in making this reconnaissance trip to the foot of Mount Logan under Arctic winter conditions.

Captain MacCarthy's account of his journey describes in a matter-of-fact way the trials and tribulations which beset the party, but the graphic details, the staunch courage and physical stamina required to accomplish such a feat, are left it the imagination of the reader.

Only when he tells of the horrors he experienced when hopelessly lost in a blinding snowstorm, alone on the Chitina moraine, does Captain MacCarthy give a glimpse of what he and his companions endured. Describing this episode he writes: "Leaving camp at 1:30 P. M. half an hour's travel on the moraine brought into view a fall line for the Yukon sleds with the 'cache,' and, therefore, I started to break trail back over it towards camp for use next day. Soon I became hampered in selecting the line on account of the indistinct view of slopes and ridges due to a heavy snow storm which had set in and which cut my horizon down to a bare indistinct hundred yards or so.

Lost on a Glacier

"I felt I must be near the shore line, so forged ahead through the deep snowdrifts along the line of least resistance until, with the the coming of dusk about 5:30, I realized that I had lost all sense of direction. Unless I could get a glimpse of the mountain ranges to tell me the direction of camp, I must back-track my trail over its long circuitous route in order to ensure getting off the glacier before darkness condemned me to spend a night on the bleak ice surface.

"Hurriedly I faced about and made my way back with what speed I could along my trail. Soon I stumbled over a mound of snow, and there on the other side of it I found my old tracks, which showed that in my trail-breaking, without compass or distant bearing to guide me, I had made a complete circle.

"The discovery startled me, for it showed how hopelessly I had wandered. It was apparent that I had turned back too late, for, with the strong wind blowing, the snow in all directions and the oncoming darkness I no longer could make out my old trail, and it seemed certain that I was destined to spend the night on the glacier, keep from freezing to death as best I might.

"Around me the snow swirled and flurried in blinding eddies. The cardinal points of existence were obliterated; but, resolved on one last effort, I struck straight as I could go up and down over that rough moraine, now suddenly coming up short flat against a steep snow slope, or again shooting down one that was invisible, or occasionally wallowing waistdeep in soft snow banks that seemed to rise up before my tired feet. Thus I trudged on until shortly before seven o'clock when, without warning, came the glorious thrill of deliverance from what had seemed imminent death. There, not two, hundred yards away, I distinctly saw the great upstanding rock which we had named 'The Devil's Door,' and I was almost within shouting distance of the camp."

Summing up the results of those 70 days of ceaseless toil, Captain MacCarthy says: "We started out with almost nineteen thousand pounds of cargo: traveled 950 miles under Arctic conditions, and 'cached' eighty-seven hundred pounds of provisions, feed, and equipment where it will be needed by the main expedition. Even though we exceeded our time schedule by two and a half weeks, the job proved to be twice as difficult as anyone had calculated, so I am proud of the work done by those three packers —Andy Taylor, Scotty Atkinson and Henry Olsen."

From Small Beginnings

Solomon Juneau, the Indian Trader, Founder of Milwaukee

Juneau Park is the most attractive of the parks in the city of Milwaukee. In it there is a statue of that Laurent or Solomon Juneau who is honored as the founder of the city. It seems a long way between the rugged frontiersman and trader and the present flourishing city of Milwaukee, but in time it is only 105 years! In those 105 years a city of nearly half a million has taken the place of the wilderness, and modern roads have sprung up where the Indian trails once led through the forest.

Solomon Juneau was a young Frenchman, 25 years old, intrepid, keen-minded, and a pioneer after the heart of Natty Bumpo himself. He had been born not far from Montreal, had grown up accustomed to the life of the trail and the woods, had made his own way in the world and was a lover of adventure. The call of romance turned his way through the forests and along the waterways to where Milwaukee now stands. There was a tiny settlement there, a trading station. Most interesting of all, there was living there a pretty French girl, daughter of Jacques Vieau, a fur trader. That was enough for Solomon Juneau. In the western wilderness he had found romance and as for the girl, she had seen her hero come into her secluded life. Juneau resolved to stay.

It was September, 1818, when young Solomon Juneau entered the clearing and looked about him at the rude buildings, and greeted the bronzed pioneers, and the Indians who were loitering about. All about, in the region around the clearing, the forest was beginning to turn into the gold of autumn. The river and the great lake were the principal means of communication. Otherwise, there were the dark forest-trails. Who, then, could have foreseen the present prosperous city of Milwaukee!

Young Juneau prospered. He became agent of the American Fur Company, and a friend of the prosperous John Jacob Astor, the great fur trader. He built himself an excellent house and then, with imagination, laid out the lines of a larger settlement. He saw to the building of a bridge across the river and he welcomed new settlers. The place grew by leaps and bounds, and in 1846, when the founder was 54 years old, he became the first Mayor of the new city. With immense pride Juneau watched the city grow, and he accumulated wealth; but he was a pioneer, not a man of finance, and before he died in 1856 at the age of 63 he had lost most of his possessions. Today he and his romance are only memories, perpetuated by the statue in Juneau Park.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Prof. Frank W. Taussig, of Harvard University, who has been honored with election as a corresponding fellow of the British Academy, is easily the dean of American economists at present and has won an international reputation. Professor Taussig, who is a native of St. Louis, was graduated from Harvard with his bent for economics thoroughly developed. Supplementary study fitted him for a post of instructor on the topic in the Harvard faculty; in 1886 he became an assistant professor, and in 1892 a full professor. For many years he has given special attention to tariff problems, beginning as a pioneer in this field and soon establishing himself as the most impartial and authoritative writer on matters of fiscal policy in the United States. The "Tariff History of the United States," which he published in 1888, at once established his standing, and later books on wages and capital and the principles of economics have but contributed to his reputation at home and abroad.

Striped Chipmunk's Western Cousin

If you for knowledge ever yearn,
Ask questions; it's the way to learn.
—Peter Rabbit.

Peter Rabbit, having learned from Digger the Badger about Grubby the Gopher, immediately became curious about Seek Seek the Spermophile, means eater of seeds. Digger the Badger had smacked his lips as he had exclaimed, "Give me Seek Seek the Ground Squirrel every time in preference to Grubby Gopher." It made Peter shiver a little to hear him smack his lips that way. He knew that Digger was thinking of good dinners he had had in the long ago.

"How did you use to catch Striped Chipmunk's cousin?" Peter inquired.

Digger grinned. He held up one of his hands, showing the long, stout claws. "By digging," said he, "when I couldn't catch him by surprise. We certainly have had some great digging matches, those Ground Squirrels and I. They are good diggers, but so am I."

"Then how comes it?" said Peter, "that you never have dug Striped Chipmunk out?"

"For a very good reason—a most excellent reason," replied Digger. "I have much respect for my claws."

Peter looked puzzled. He was puzzled. He scratched a long ear with a long hind foot. He scratched the other long ear with the other long hind foot. He would have scratched both long ears with both hind feet if he could have. But he couldn't, so he asked a question. You know Peter is great on asking questions. "What is the matter with your claws that you can't dig out Striped Chipmunk?" he asked.

"Nothing is the matter with my claws, but I'm afraid something would be the matter with them if I started digging out Striped Chipmunk."

"I don't see why," protested Peter, looking more and more puzzled.

"Because," replied Digger, "Striped Chipmunk makes his home in rocky ground. He knows quite well that he is safe there. Now his cousin, out where I came from, Seek Seek the Ground Squirrel, dug right in the open where it was honest digging. There were no stones there, so sometimes it was fun to dig for him. You know that little rascal has pockets in his cheeks just the same as Striped Chipmunk. I've heard him called a Gopher Squirrel because he isn't even related to the Gophers. He is just as much a member of the Squirrel family as is Striped Chipmunk."

"I know," replied Peter, "since you told me about Grubby Gopher I have remembered that Danny Meadow Mouse met a Gopher down in the Sunny South where he one time spent the winter. He told me all about him, and I guess he was a Gopher all right, but down there they call him a Salamander. Names don't mean anything, anyway. They call my big cousin Jumper the Hare the Snowshoe Rabbit and he isn't a Rabbit at all. He is a Hare. Do you know that, Mr. Badger?"

Digger didn't reply. Instead he changed the subject. "By the way," said he, "speaking of your big cousin Jumper the Hare and of wrong names, you have a big cousin out where I came from and they call him a Rabbit. They call him Jack Rabbit."

"I know," interrupted Peter. "I've heard about him. He is own cousin to Jumper the Hare and isn't a Rabbit at all. He is just as much a Hare as Jumper is. Have you ever seen him, Mr. Badger?"

"Have I ever seen him?" exclaimed Digger. "I should say I have. How that fellow can jump."

Stories That Recall Others

Match Not Needed.

Four year old David's fond aunt bought him some firecrackers with which to celebrate the Fourth. They, with the rest of the family, were about to shoot the aforesaid crackers. Daddy, thinking to tease, said in pretended alarm:

"Oh, we can't shoot them; we have forgotten the matches"

David's face fell, then brightening up he exclaimed:

"I know; let's catch a lightning bug and use it."

A Pleasant Memory.

On one of the hot days a tourist stopped before a farm house to change a tire. The occupants of the farm house stepped out to the road to lend a helping hand, if needed. During the process of removing the tire, etc., the tourist got into a conversation with the farmer. "Fine little town back yonder," indicating the direction of the village.

"You betcha!" agreed the farmer.

"Well, I'll say so," responded the tourist enthusiastically, "Why even the kids are friendly and hospitable. I asked one fellow some questions and he even offered to take me there, show me the way. That's what I call a fine little town. One whose people make you feel right at home among them."

The tourist drove on but the impression he received of that village he carried with him and dropped words of it wherever he went.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

SAFETY IN HIM

"Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God."

If God be for us, who—? And so we get the victory. Bunyan tells of a pilgrim whose sword grew firmer to his grasp the more he used it. It is so with every grace of the Christian life. It is so with the hand of Jesus Christ. Hold it fast and you will find that no power on earth shall separate you. The disciple fears lest his strength should fail at the last. When the arm of God is shortened, and His love grows cold, you may expect that, but not till then. He will never drive you from the refuge of His heart and who shall venture to pluck you thence? The watcher in the tower sits unmoved at the storm that sweeps around his refuge. The child knows no danger while resting in its mother's arms. God is our strong power; Christ is our keeper, and we have great peace because our heart is stayed on Him. A sweet shelter have they who abide under the shadow of His wings. Under His wings, O what precious enjoyment!

There will I hide till life's trials are o'er;
Sheltered, protected, no evil can harm me:
Resting in Jesus I'm safe evermore.

Babe Adams, star pitcher of the Pittsburgh Pirates, celebrated his 13rd birthday recently, and is the oldest pitcher of the National League. At an age when many are out of the baseball game, Babe is still carrying on, using his brains in fooling the batters, thus giving his strong arm a little rest. He first broke into fast time in 1906 with the St. Louis Cardinals. He gained his greatest fame in the 1909 World Series as a Pirate pitcher when he pitched three of the four victories which won the series.

WATER COMMISSIONERS RECOMMEND DEEP RIVER RESERVOIR PROJECT

The Deep River project for the proposed new reservoir for the city of Norwich was recommended, Friday evening, at a special meeting of the court of common council, held in the council chamber in the town building, two distinct projects for using this water supply for reservoir purposes being offered by the board of water commissioners, one calling for an outlay of $1,270,000 to furnish a water supply of 5,500,000 gallons daily, the other for development on a smaller scale, reducing the total estimate about $190,000 and providing a yield of 2,500,000 gallons daily.

The report was most concise and comprehensive and was the one prepared by Chandler & Palmer, city engineers, at the request of the board of water commissioners, and later adopted by the board. It pertained to the development of a permanent water supply for the city, recommending the Deep River water shed located in Colchester, providing for the construction of a dam between the two hills southerly of what is known as the Bogue road. The pondage would be 400,000,000 gallons and the report covered the cost of acquiring the land, cleansing the water basin, laying of pipe lines, the 24 inch pipe being recommended, construction of gate house and necessary controls, to connect with the present system at or near Harland's corner at a cost of about $1,080,000 under, certain conditions.

Report By Commissioners

The report of the board of water commissioners, as read by City Clerk Weston C. Pullen, was as follows:

The board of water commissioners have realized for some time that the consumption of water from our reservoirs was more than they would yield during a dry period and have mentioned this fact in their annual reports.

Both reservoirs on June 1st, 1924, were substantially full, giving a combined storage of about 900,000,000 gallons of water. On October 1st this was reduced to 350,000,000 gallons, and in December Stony Brook reservoir was empty and only a small supply left in Fairview.

During the early fall of 1924 the board made a contract to raise Stony Brook dam five street in order to save more of the spring run off. It was stated at that time that this would not wholly solve the water problem for the city, but would help out by the additional storage which now totals one billion gallons for both reservoirs. No help can come from this additional storage until we have winter and spring rains sufficient to fill the reservoir to its new height.

Realizing that the city was in danger of being without water, the board installed a pump at Trading Cove Brook, capable of discharging 2,000,000 gallons per day into the pipe system. This was started on December 22, 1924, and has been running nearly continuously up to July 1, 1925.

The state board of health approved this plan as an emergency measure, but wished it to be understood that it was a temporary arrangement, as they did not approve pumping directly from a brook with no storage of the water.

Up to the time of raising Stony Brook reservoir, the city had a supply that could be depended upon, in dry as well as wet years, for 3,000,000 gallons daily. By raising the dam this daily yield would be increased to 3,200,000, provided we could start with the ponds full.

Consumption of Water

A study of the use of water, as indicated by the Venturi meters has been made. At the present time the city is using an average of 3,585,000 gallons of water per day. It is estimated, including the state hospital, that the city is serving about 30,000 persons.

This makes the per capita consumption 129 gallons per day.

The services of the department are 40 per cent. metered. This 40 per cent. includes all large consumers such as factories, hotels, boarding houses, office buildings, and buildings where waste might be expected. This 40 per cent. in the meter readings accounts for 2,000,000 gallons per day.

In order to put the city in the safety zone by reducing the consumption of water, it will be necessary to make a reduction of 700,00 gallons per day.

The above figures apply to the present use and do not take into account any future growth. Our yearly increase in use is shown fairly well by the yearly total cash receipts from sale of water. During the past two years with no change in rates, the receipts have increased 8 per cent. it will take until the spring of 1927 to fully complete a new supply. If we assume the same increase in use during the next two years as has occurred in the past two, we will have added another 300,000 gallons to our consumption, making us a million gallons short of our dependable supply.

The borad have employed Chandler & Palmer to investigate sites for an additional supply, keeping in mind the fact that some of the high places in the city are not receiving sufficient pressure.

The board have employed Chandler Stonington was considered as a possible supply. The government maps indicate a drainage area of 5 square miles, fairly free from houses. Levels were run from the city and a profile for a dam site made. The project was not recommended because of insufficient elevation of the brook and an expensive pipe line.

Trading Cove

Any plan to use Trading Cove brook would mean a pumping station and pumping all water used, as well as the building of a reservoir, unless a dam were built so far up the stream that the watershed would be too small.

Two reservoir sites were surveyed in 1900, when Percey M. Blake made his report, but they were not recommended at that time and are not now, on account of the size, low elevation, and other reasons.

LEGION POST ELECTS DELEGATES TO CONVENTION

Delegates and alternates to the state convention of the American Legion, to be held in New London, August 27, 28 and 29, were elected Friday evening, at a meeting of Robert O. Fletcher post, No. 4, held at the Legion rooms on Main street.

The meeting was in charge of First Vice Commander Samuel E. Jennes, in the absence of Commander Webster D. Copp, and considerable business of routine nature was dispensed with, including a report by the relief committee.

The report of the relief committee showed active work for several weeks past in providing assistance to disabled veterans and the committee is still working on a number of cases appealing to the state and nation for aid for men who need hospital care because of disability from war service.

The following delegates were elected to represent the post at the state convention: Jonathan L. Johnson, William A. Anderson, Rev. Edward C. Dunbar and Clarence Whitaker. Alternates elected were John A. Cunningham, Lindsey G. Smith, Clifford C. Oat and Frank Rinella. The delegates were empowered to select their alternates from among the four elected in case they could not attend sessions during the convention.

The post also voted to purchase a supply of post caps upon application of members who desire them and it was voted that cards be sent out to all members informing them of the part the post intends to take in Legion activities during the convention. It is expected that all members will be provided with caps in time for the parade.

Announcement was made that a county meeting would be held on August 19th at the state armory in New London and every member of the post was urged to attend as much business important to the convention plans would be discussed at that session.

Numerous other reports were made and the house committee was instructed to purchase additional furniture for the post out of a fund set aside for this use a number of months ago.

Dancing was enjoyed in the large hall on the upper floor of the building, with music by Gallagher's orchestra, and the festival programme will be continued this (Saturday) evening on the grounds in the rear of the home.

The committee in charge of the festival comprises George Nadolny, William R. Hastedt, Nelson Perone, John P. F. Burns, Henry Follenius, Timothy Fields, A. Hasdt, Rudolph Krohn, E. J. Mullins, James Carey and Victor Payment.

DOLL CARRIAGE PARADE MAKES FINE DISPLAY

The first dramatic programme in connection with the playground season was conducted Friday evening with a doll carriage parade by the East Side playground under the direction of Miss Viola Walz instructor at the playground and Miss Katherine Dodd, dramatic instructor.

Doll carriages, coasters, express wagons, and bicycles, all lavishly decorated, appeared in the parade of about 100 children, both boys and girls, ranging in age from 3 to 15 years. The children assembled at the Duwell grounds from which they marched at 6:30 headed by Houston's East Side drum corps, led by Billie Billy Gallagher, and composed of play ground boys between the ages of 10 and 14. The line of march was to Franklin square and back, between sidewalks lined with spectators who applauded the very creditable display made by the children. Snap shots of the parade were taken along the route, one group of people in a Michigan automobile getting a number of views.

Judges who had been appointed watched the parade closely to determine the prize winners. The judges were Louis Cook, Mrs. Henry Clement, Joseph Shea, and Miss Julia Welch. They announced the following prize winners to whom the prizes will be presented Monday afternoon when a picture is to be taken: girls, first, Marion Knouse, doll carriage in pink and blue; second, little Eleanor Rich, who led the parade, a tiny doll carriage in pink with real pansies; boys, first, Malcolm Counihan, express wagon, in yellow and white; second Curtis Dickerman, little automobile, in orange and black. Honorable mention was given to Claire Cyr and Mildred Murray.

The spirit shown by the children in preparing for the parade and their taste and skill in doing the decorating were given the highest commendation and it was generally agreed that they had set a high standard in this first event of the kind for Norwich.

The eight officers of the division were elected delegates to the state convention to be held at Bridgeport on August 19th and 20th.

Following the meeting a social hour was enjoyed.

CLAIMS SUPREME COURT EXEMPTS WATER EMPLOYES

Payment of income taxes by employes of the water department, under a ruling by Internal Revenue Commissioner David H. Blair at Washington, may be made under protest while the city of Hartford seeks a special ruling from Washington as to whether the employes of the department as employes of a municipal department are not exempt from payment of the tax.

This, in the opinion of Corporation Counsel W. Arthur Countryman, Jr., is what should be done as a result of orders received by Collector Robert O. Eaton to collect taxes for the eight years in which the law has been in effect. The supreme court of errors for the state of Connecticut has ruled that the water department is not a separate corporation but a part of the municipal government and thus it seems convincingly to place that department in the class of employes exempt from the payment of the federal tax, and separate from the general practice as recognized in Washington, which covered utilities.

The Connecticut supreme court in the case of Norman C. Stevens (mayor of Hartford) against the board of water commissioners, decided that the water board was an agency of the city government and not a distinct municipal corporation. The opinion was written by Justice Maltbie and seems quite clear on that point, which is contrary to the recent ruling of Internal Revenue Commissioner Blair.

As Mr. Countryman sees the situation it is a question which he would like to see settled by the courts and he said Friday that as counsel for the Hartford water board he is willing to join with counsel of water boards in other Connecticut cities in testing the collection of the tax and having the matter go to a court decision.

Commisioner Blair seems to have anticipated some differences with his rulings by state courts and he calls attention of the collectors to the fact that federal courts rather than state courts should be the deciding tribunal as to governmental functions. Mr. Countryman said he is aware there are some federal court decisions to the effect that supplying water to the residents of a municipality is not strictly speaking a governmental function.

ADVANCING WORK FAST ON MAIN ST. IMPROVEMENT

The work of ripping out the old roadbed of Belgian blocks, on Main street, between Market street and the first bridge on West Main street, has been pushed ahead rapidly during the past few days and Friday evening found the work carried over half way, or just beyond the Methodist church.

The entire roadbed has been torn up and that section of Main street completely closed to travel during the week. Men from the gas and electrical department, water department, public works department, telephone company and the Connecticut company have been engaged in working along the street, rushing the work through to be ready for the laying of the new cement roadbed.

The trolley road will lay new 100 pound rails along the cement covered stretch and new ties will be laid where needed. All piping necessary and other underground work by various departments is also being done as the work of tearing out the blocks progresses, thus speeding up the work.

When everything is ready the new cement roadbed will be laid on one side of the street including the space between the trolley rails. This part of the work will take about a month to complete and after the cement has hardened the street will be opened for one way travel, no parking to be allowed.

The work of completing the cement work on Main street will probably take about two months and when completed will be a great improvement and benefit to the city.

Permanent crosswalk markings will be made as the cement is laid, some material to blacken the cement to be used to designate crosswalks, thus doing away with the necessity of painting crosswalks along this section.

FOUR OFFICERS POSTED ON TRAFFIC DUTY

During the summer season four officers have been assigned to traffic duty at various corners in the city, three as part time traffic men and one as regular traffic officer.

Michael Carroll, stationed at Broadway corner is regular traffic officer, while Officer Daniel O'Neil at the corner of Shetucket and Water streets and Officer John O'Neil at Thames square are part time traffic officers, doing this duty between rounds. Officer Luke Riley is stationed at Washington square, where five streets intersect.

The officers are especially needed at Washington square and Shetucket street at this time owing to the closing of Main street for the laying of the new cement road, as all traffic is compelled to pass through Water street, east and west, while this work is in progress.

DEMPSEY HAS AT LAST ACCEPTED THE CHALLENGE OF HARRY WILLS

NEW YORK, July 17.—(AP)—Jack Dempsey appeared today before the state athletic commission and formally accepted the challenge of Harry Wills, negro heavyweight.

This action ends four years of strife to bring together the champion and his most persistent challenger.

The controversy, which had become badly tangled since Jack Kearns, the champion's manager, ignored the commission's edict of March 6, 1925, that Dempsey answer Wills' challenge, unraveled itself to the satisfaction of all today when Dempsey agreed to abide by the rules of the commission.

Dempsey, in referring to his interview with the commission, said:

"Commissioner Muldoon agrees with me that I should have a couple of warm-up fights before taking on Wills. In all probability I'll either meet Bartley Madden at Michigan City, Ind, Labor day or Gene Tunney in New York before the outdoor season closes. Rickard has told me he would like to have me meet Tunney at the first indoor show of the new Madison Square Garden this winter but nothing definite has been arranged.

"I am going to Wilmington, Del., tonight to visit relatives of my wife. I'll be back Monday morning and I expect to see the commission again Tuesday and post the forfeit demanded. In the meantime I'll dicker with Rickard and Floyd Fitzsimmons for a few warm-up matches."

When shown the Associated Press dispatch from Los Angeles quoting Kearns as saying that Dempsey would arrange no matches without his approval, Dempsey smiled and said:

"Somebody got hot. The boy evidently lost his head."

ATHLETICS MAKE CLEAN SWEEP OF SERIES WITH SOX

CHICAGO, July 17.—(AP)—Philadelphia made a clean sweep of the four game series with Chicago by taking the final game 8 to 1 and ran their winning streak to seven games.

The contest was a pitching duel between Red Faber and Jack Quinn, two veteran spitball dingers the latter getting credit for the second straight victory since joining the Athletics.

Only three hits were made off Quinn prior to the time he left the game for a pinch-hitter. In the eight inning Lamar; former American Association star, led the attack for the visitors with four hits.

Singles by Mostil and Davis and their double steal followed by an infield out saved the White Sox from a shutout. Score:

STAFFORD SPRINGS TEAM AT TAFTVILLE TODAY

The Taftville A. A. will encounter stiff opposition this afternoon in tackling the fast Stafford Springs team at the Providence street grounds. Stafford is bringing down the best that is available in the baseball line in that vicinity which means that Taftville is up against some real ballplayers. Manager Troland will pitch Lefty Dugas against the visitors today and will save Lloyd Jarvis for the game at Stafford on Sunday.

This attraction should prove interesting as Taftville is on a winning streak and has piled up 16 victories in a row. During the next few weeks Taftville will hook up in a series with the J. B. Martin team and the Riverview club.

U. S. AND IRELAND SHARE HONORS IN A. A. A. MEET

LONDON, July 17.—(AP)—Athletes from the United States, Ireland and the Continent won most of the glory in the opening events of the annual Amateur Athletic association championships at Stamford Bridge this afternoon, leaving only a small share for the entrants representing Great Britain.

Only four events were decided today and of these only one, the four-mile race, was captured by the British. The race in 19 minutes 54 3-5 seconds.

The hop and step and jump was won by E. Somfai, Magyar A. C., of Budapest, with a distance of 46 feet, 10 1-2 inches. Harold Osborne, the Illinois Olympic decathlon champion, was second with 46 feet, 9 1-2 inches, and J. Connor, of Belfast, Ireland, was third, 45 feet, 4 3-4 inches.

Ireland won the discus throw when P. J. Birmingham, of Dublin, hurled the discus for a distance of 133 feet, 7 1-2 inches, second and third places both falling to Egri and Somfai, respectively, of Budapest.

The United States took the honors in the weight putting contest when H. L. Schwarze, of the Illinois Athletic club, sent the 16-lb. shot through the air for a distance of 47 feet, 3 inches. R. Paoli, of the Olympique club of Paris, was second, with 46 feet, 2 inches.

Several of the best athletes of Great Britain are at present competing in the United States as members of the Oxford-Cambridge team.

Both Loren Murchison, of the Newark A. C., and H. T. Evans, Jr., of the Illinois A. C., raced successfully through the two heats of the 220-yard dash. J. W. J. Rickel, South English champion, and G. N. Butler, quarter-mile titleholder, also qualified.

In the half-mile run, Ray Dodge, of the Illinois A. C., qualified for the finals by placing second to C. R. Griffith, of Surrey, in one of the heats. J. N. McEacchara, who won the 500 metres run in the Tailteann games at Dublin last year, was the fastest of the half-mile heat winners.

George T. Stevenson and Ivan H. Riley, both of the Illinois A. C., qualified for the quarter-mile flat and the quarter-mile hurdles, respectively. In the latter event the British champion, F. J. Blackett, made 56 seconds the fastest time ever made by a British athlete.

In the quarter-mile L. P. Ross, of Yale university, was eliminated in the first heat after he had been put off his stride when another runner cut across in front of him on one of the turns.

STAR BASEBALL ATTRACTION AT STATE HOSPITAL TODAY

The New Departure Club of Bristol, semi-pro champions of the state will be the attraction at the State Hospital this afternoon. This should be the banner game of the season. The Riverview Club is bringing this expensive club to Norwich in order to give the local fans an opportunity of seeing a real ball club. Therefore all roads should lead to the State Hospital this afternoon. The New Departure Club has the same lineup that won the championship last season, winning 38 games and losing 9; splitting even with Gardner, Mass. champions, took two straight from Brown-Lipe-Chapin-Syracuse champions western N. Y. This season they have defeated Torrington, Manchester, Hudson, Fuller Brush, Pittsfield, Bardons and Medford, Mass, and the Grosgans of Troy, N. Y.

The Riverview Club has strengthened for this game with the addition of two former players. Belair will catch, and Tony West will toe the rubber. Couillard will play the initial bag with Eddie Burns taking care of the keystone sack. Normandin will play the shortfield, while the hot corner will be looked after by Dinty Moore. Joe Hamel will play left field, Mills in center and Chick Stanley in right. Noell, Allard and McKiernan will be available for emergency. Moran and Curran will umpire.

The clubs will go to the plate in the following order:

Riverview—Couillard, 1. b., Burns 2 b, Mills, c. f., Normandin s. s., Moore 3 b., Stanley r. f., Hamel l. f., Belair c., West p.

WATERBURY BUNCHES HITS IN FIFTH TO BEAT BEARS

WATERBURY, July 17.—(AP)—Waterbury overcame a five run lead of the Bridgeport club here today and bunched hits with the wildness of Horan and Caffery to win by the score of 14 to 5. McPhee, who relieved Bishop, pitched good ball for the local club. The hitting of Wotell, Yordy and Leary stood out. Catcher Lutz of the visitors, was put out of the park by Umpire Breslin for questioning his decision on the offerings of Horan. Score:

Waterbury	000	382 01x—14

Two base hits, Yordy, Horan, Wotell, Leary, Uteritz. Three base hits, Wotell, Yordy.

Warriors Down Rovers

Last night Healey's Warriors butchered the Falls Rovers an 8 to 1 scalp fest. For the Warriors, Healey pitched good ball, giving only three hits in four innings; Marchand who relieved Healey in the 5th with the game well sewed up offered but one hit and poled out two himself when his turn came to bat. Couture, the Falls regular ace was wild allowing five hits in four innings. Webster the relief pitcher succeeded in holding the visitors to three hits, allowing only one man to cross the rubber. Johnny Dorsch, the Rover's diminutive second string catcher, furnished the prize attraction of the game with his stellar fielding.

PLAYGROUND SWIMMING MEET IS WON BY GREENEVILLE MERMEN

In the final and deciding event of Friday afternoon's water carnival at Mohegan Lake, Rob Tennent, the leather-lunged merman from Greeneville swam to a victory which meant not only individual glory but also a win for his team-mates. With Greeneville leading its nearest rival Lake St., by a single point, the last swim of the afternoon was announced, an underwater swim for distance. Tennent with a swim of approximately 35 yds. gained the 5 pts which spelled victory for his team.

With the swimming of the final heat of the 50 yd. sprint for senior boys, Tennent managed to nose out J. Marks at the tape.

The diving exhibition was one of the features of the afternoon's two hour program. J. Dorsch, the winner, and J. Marks the runner up gave a fine exhibition of plain and fancy dives.

Spectators who were fortunate enough to witness the meet cannot help but say the aquatic program was one really worth while seeing. The only lamentable portion of the afternoon offerings was the dearth of a goodly crowd of onlookers.

Due to the able assistance of Instructors Murphy, Sullivan and Finnegan and Life Guard McNamara, Instructor Sage was able to run the meet through smoothly without the usual delay peculiar to this kind of meet. Mr. Sage cannot be commended-usual delay peculiar to this kind of the afternoon's program. To the park commission should be tendered a vote of thanks for permitting Paul McNamara to contribute his share to the success of the afternoon.

We are all eagerly anticipating the announcement of Coach Sage's next swimming meet. The next carnival should see more spectators lining the banks of Mohegan Lake, for after all there is not as much enthusiasm in a private meet as when there is a large audience to furnish the contestant with the stimuli of encouragement.

List of events: 20 yard dash, 1st, J. Crowd (G), 2nd, G. McNeal (G), 3rd, Bryant (G).

200 yard relay (each man to swim 50 yards). Won by Lake St.

50 yard dash. 1st R. Tennent (G) 2nd. J. Marks (L. S.), 3rd, Chas. Drew (L. S.).

Under water swim for distance, 1st R. Tennent (G), 2nd, A. Krohn (L. S.), 3rd, T. Tennent (G.).

Final points, Greeneville 24, Lake Street 19, Falls 5.

HARMON LEADS FIELD IN FIRST ROUND

BRONXVILLE, N. Y., July 17.—(A. P.)—Willie Harmon of the Hudson River Country club led a field of 170 players in the first 18-hole round of the Metropolitan open golf championship over the Grassy Sprain course today by rallying brilliantly on the home coming nine holes to shoot 70, three under par.

Harmon had started erratically, requiring two strokes over par on the first nine, but his approaching was accurate and he was sinking his first putts with uncanny regularity after that turn. He was out in 40 and back in 30.

Willie MacFarlane, national open champion, playing in the same foursome with Harmon, bowed in defeat to blistered hands which were covered by bandages. He required an 80.

With thirty players still to be heard from, three professionals were tied for second place. They were Gene Sarazen of Fresh Meadow, former open champion, Archie Anderson of Sleepy Hollow, and Johnny Farrell of Quaker Ridge. They turned in cards of 73.

Henry Cuici of Westchester Hills, Nick Costello, unattached, Lee Diegel of En Oaks and Anthony Manero of Fairview were close behind with 74's.

Playing under par on each nine, Bob McDonald of Chicago finished one stroke behind the leaders, Harmon and Walker.

McDonald, who won the event two years ago, shot 37-34—71. Mike J. Brady, winner of the title last year, took third place with 39-33—72.

HERMAN COMES TO TERMS WITH KAPLAN CONDITIONALLY

WATERBURY, July 17—(A. P.)—Jimmy Kelly, of New York, manager of Babe Herman, challenger for the featherweight championship, tonight conditionally accepted the terms of Promoter George P. Mulligan, of this city for a bout with Louis (Kid) Kaplan, of Meriden, world's featherweight titleholder at the Eastern league baseball park in this city on Saturday afternoon, August 15th.

The condition which Kelly asked was that Kaplan's managers assure Herman in the event of the latter losing the bout in this city to Kaplan on a close decision, that he be given another bout in New York within three months from the date of the contest here. It is expected that Kaplan's managers will agree to this condition.

Under the conditions of the offer made for the bout by Promoter Mulligan, Kaplan, the champion, will receive a guarantee of $15,000 with a privilege of 40 per cent of the receipts while Herman will be given a guarantee of $5,000, with 20 per cent privilege.

ENGLISH-COLLEGIANS BEAT PRINCETON-WILLIAMS TEAM

SEABRIGHT, N. J., July 17—(A. P.)—Tennis stars of Oxford and Cambridge universities in England captured five of six singles matches in competition with a Princeton-Williams team here today and left for the American collegians only a bare chance of a tie in the two-day tournament which ends with the doubles tomorrow.

John Vanryn, 19-year-old Princeton freshman, was the lone American victor, defeating the Cambridge player, J. H. Van Alen, 9-11, 6-4, 9-7 in a hitch contest. But another Princetonian, Wheeler B. Evans, succumbed only after a thrilling battle with D. J. K. Sumner of Cambridge, 17-15, 1-6, 6-3. The contest required two and one half hours.

E. M. Jonklass, Oxford, defeated Robert Hyson, Princeton, 6-4, 6-4, while Capt. J. T. Lezard, Cambridge, vanquished T. M. Banks, Williams 6-3, 7-5. H. K. Lester, Oxford, outclassed the American captain, Mills P. Baker of Williams, 6-2, 6-3. In the final match of the day the Oxford player Johnnie Carleton, formerly of Dartmouth, defeated C. B. Marsh of Williams, 6-3, 6-4.

PATTERSON PLAYS HARADA IN LONGWOOD FINALS

BROOKLINE, Mass., July 17—Evidence aplenty that Australia's bid for the Davis cup is to be a real one this summer was furnished at the Longwood cricket club's court at Chestnut Hill, this afternoon, when Gerald L. Patterson of Melbourne swept into the final round of the Longwood bowl singles at the expense of Zenzo Shimizu, captain of the Japanese team, 6-3, 6-2, 6-0. Patterson's opponents in the 33rd annual tournament final tomorrow will be Takeich Harada, another Japanese who today outlasted John B. Hawks of Australia, 8-6, 2-6, 1-6, 9-7, 6-4.

Miss Helen Wills, national champion from Berkeley, California, had the novel experience of losing four successive games in her semi-final match of the woman's invitation singles, but she never lost her poise against Mrs. B. E. Cole, 2nd., of North Andover, former national indoor champion, and gained a final bracket by the margin of 6-4, 6-0. Mrs. Marion Zinderstein Jessup of Wilmington, Del., fifth ranking player, eliminated Miss Eleanor Goss of New York, 6-3, 6-0, and will oppose Miss Wills in the final tomorrow.

MAILS PITCHES CARDS TO VICTORY OVER GIANTS

NEW YORK, July 17.—(AP)—Mails pitched the Cardinals to a 6 to 1 victory over the Giants today, and as the Pirates won from the Braves, the New York club dropped back into second place in the National League pennant race. Mails held the Giants to four hits. Hafey, recalled by the St. Louis team from Syracuse to replace Blades, who was hurt yesterday, led the attack for the Cards with four hits in five times at bat. After hitting safely in 19 consecutive games, Frank Frisch went hitless today. Score:

NO CASE AGAINST PROVIDENCE MEN HELD AT N. LONDON AS RUM-RUNNERS

(Special to the Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 17—As was anticipated yesterday the federal government was without sufficient evidence to warrant a hearing before United States Commissioner Earl Matthewson at the local customs house, of charges of violation of the prohibition law, in the case of Leif Nelson and Edmund Scanlon, both of Providence. The men were taken into custody Wednesday when the speed launch, C-214 was seized by a patrol boat off Fuck Island. This forenoon Commissioner Matthewson ordered the police to release the prisoners, who have been locked up since their apprehension. Commissioner Matthewson stated that the government was not possessed of information which would warrant the prosecution of the men. Nelson did not have his liberty more than a few minutes, for immediately following his release from the government charge he was rearrested at the request of the authorities of Wickford, R. I., who hold a warrant charging Nelson with the theft from East Greenwich harbor, last Sunday, of the launch, the property of Hugh McManus, of Providence. This afternoon an officer from Wickford came to New London and took charge of Nelson, who waived extradition. Scanlon was given his liberty and immediately started on his way back to Providence.

An automobile owned and driven by Paul Gager, of Quaker Hill, passing through Bayonet street last evening struck Frank Anelli, 36 New street. At Lawrence-Memorial hospital it was found that Anelli's only injury was an abrasion of one ankle.

The Crowley Club Vacation House at Ocean Beach, New London, has had many guests and visitors since its opening July 1st. Entertainments are given each week by various groups of club members. Last week the guests were entertained at an informal dance at Mabrey's Hotel. The following committee was in charge of the dance, Miss Alice Quinn, chairman, assisted by the Misses Dorothy Sylvia, Josephine Sullivan, Bessie Ryan and Nora Burke. On every Wednesday and Thursday afternoons members of the club participate in a swimming party at the beach, after which supper is served at the club house. The Vacation House is under the management of Miss Mary O'Keefe of Stafford Springs and Miss Florence Lennon of Hartford, who are conducting it in a very efficient manner, which is a source of satisfaction to the members of the club and their guests. Guests from Hartford, Meriden, Brooklyn and Waterbury are registered at the Vacation House this week.

Rose Hawthorne Lathrop and her husband, George Parsons Lathrop were for a time residents of New London. For that reason there is local interest in the following from a Hartford paper:

A Graceful Act. The bestowal of a degree of Master of Arts, "honoris causa," by the faculty of Bowdoin College upon Mrs. Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, daughter of Nathaniel Hawthorne, but known to thousands upon thousands of the stricken and their friends as Mother Mary Alphonsa of Rosary Hill, Hawthorne, N. Y., is a singularly graceful act. The fact that it comes from the college where her distinguished father spent four years of his youth does not detract from the honor in the least. The world does not soon forget such noble-minded contributions to the welfare of suffering humanity as that made by the daughter of the famous novelist. When she decided, after her conversion to the Catholic faith, her life's work should be the caring for those whom hospitals are forced to reject as incurable victims of the fellest of diseases, cancer, she showed the metal of which the great are made. It is fitting to signalize this remarkable woman with diplomas of honor. We join with those who are quite ready to lend their applause. And if our ears can catch the voices of the many who have been enriched directly or indirectly by her charity and service, there resounds a shout of universal satisfaction for a recognition that is indeed meritorious.

Mrs. Freida Wallace was fined $25 in the police court this morning for recklessly operating an Overland car on the evening of the 10th inst. when her car crashed into the Hudson coach of Henry B. Lee and made a wreck of it, on Montauk avenue, at School street. Mrs. Wallace admitted she was driving up School street and that she approached the intersection of Montauk avenue without giving warning or reducing the speed of her car. Mrs. Wallace's experience in the operation of an auto has been such that she may not desire to continue as an operator. She was fined last week for operating a car without possessing a license. That cost her $200 and now her fine and costs will amount to $50 more. The Lee car was damaged to the estimated extent of $800, while the Wallace automobile suffered a bad smashing. That Lee was not injured very seriously was the remarkable thing about the accident, for his car was upset and he was held by one wheel when assistance came, to drag him out and haul the car away. The case was continued Wednesday till this morning on the representation that a Mrs. Dickinson was to give testimony for the defense that would be important, she failed to appear today and the judgment came without taking any testimony and without argument by the attorneys.

Two truckers employed at a Water street factory quarreled over the manipulation of the trucks that they were pushing and then they came to blows. It was a Yucatan Indian against a Pole, and the former fared the better. He was called a vile name that hurt him, but he retaliated with a blow that was more stinging to his abuser. The part the men took in the row was admitted. Judge Prince deemed it wise to continue the case for a month, that the men might continue at work and resolve to be more patient when perplexing situations occurred. On the 17th of Augus. they will reappear in court when a report from the probation officer will be submitted, to decide the case.

The interior of St. James Episcopal church is to be repainted throughout a process that will require some three weeks or more.

Englebert J. Sautter 55, a well-known resident of this city, died at the state hospital at Norwich this morning. He had always made his home in this city, where he was born, the son of Englebert Sauter, at that time a resident of Bradley street (now North Bank street). Mr. Sauter was educated in the schools of this city, and in recent years has been a writer of life insurance. He manifested the keenest and most intelligent interests in the affairs of New London, making a study of the conduct of the city's departments in cases where there was dispute over management. He frequently was a speaker in city meetings and often appeared before the city council under the new management, protesting at the method of handling the city's business. He particularly criticised the board of school visitors, on occasion, and objected to the expenditures of monies when he believed the council was over-stepping its authority. His arguments were always made in calm and deliberate words and he had the facility of expression that made his remarks interesting and instructive. Mr. Sauter is survived by two brothers and by sisters also. He was interested in the Y. M. C. A. and in church work in great degree. He had much solicitude for the young people of the city and made a study of how best to control them. To this latter is attributed his mental impairment by many of his friends. From the time of his commitment to the hospital little encouragement was given that he would be restored to his former normalcy of mind.

The purchase of the Harris building on State street by Dr. Hugh Lena and his brothers was rather a surprise to the city. The purchase at the price of $230,000 is contrasted with the Woolworth building, a neighbor on the same street. It is figured that the Woolworth property represents an outlay of more than the Harris building cost, while the latter is two stories higher and can be made available for a much greater tenantcy than the Woolworth building. Of course the latter structure is of modern construction while the Harris building was built some 50 years ago, and to make it adaptable to full occupancy at a return in rentals that will pay profitable return on the investment, considerable must be expended. Still there is said to be a leeway of $20,000 for this improvement, and when it is perfected there will be a vast change wrought in the Harris property.

The body of Miss Grace E. Hartshorn, formerly of New London and daughter of the late John Hartshorn, whose death occurred in Providence several days ago was brought to New London at 12.32 o'clock this afternoon for burial in the family plot in Cedar Grove cemetery. The committal service was conducted by Rev. Joseph A. Elder, pastor of the Huntington Stret Baptist church.

Funeral services for Mrs. Esther A. Turner, widow of Isaac D. Turner, were held this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock at her home, 34 Waller court and were attended by a large assemblage of mourners. Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ and officers of the Woman's Relief Corp, of which latter organization Mrs. Turner had been a member many years officiated. Relatives of Mrs. Turner acted as bearers. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

Philip B. Grovan, 166 Jefferson avenue, has been compelled to give up his residence here, at least temporarily, and has left for Rutland, Vt., where he hopes the change of climate will result in his health being restored.

The funeral of Mrs. Bridget Sherry, widow of James Sherry, whose death occurred in Waterford Wednesday, was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Joseph's church. A high mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. William C. Fitzsimons. The bearers were Owen Perkins, Paul Cavanaugh, Francis Perking, Harold Peters, John Lalyand, Sylvester Perkins. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

The funeral of Francis E. Cross, formerly of Groton, took place this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church. The nigh mass of requiem was sung by Rev. William J. Fox, pastor of Sacred Heart church, Groton. The bearers were James Anderson, Harold Walsh, Frank Sullivan and Charles Rothweil. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

George Stenger, well known Waterford farmer, died last night at his home. He was of advanced years and had been in ill health about two years. Mr. Stenger is survived by several children, brothers and sisters.

Mary Catherine McGarry, 12, daughter of Mrs. A. and the late Michael McGarry, died last night at her mother's home, 43 Tilley street. The child had long been ill of heart affection. Besides her mother the child is survived by a brother, Michael McGarry.

Harold Gaudet, 51 Linden street, reported to the police this evening that while he absented himself a short time his bicycle, which he had placed in front of the Plant building, was stolen.

The condition of Charles Voss, of Pearl street, employed at the Hotel Mohican as room clerk, who was operated on at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital Wednesday night, is reported this evening as being considerably improved.

Mr. and Mrs. George Oldroyd, formerly of this city, now of Newark, N. J., are spending a few days in New London, guests at the Hotel Mohican.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Dalton, of Brooklyn, are spending a fortnight at Fishers Island, together with their children. Mr. Dalton was formerly a resident of New London, and is now employed by a New York construction company.

Mrs. Nancy Dewey Packer, 62, wife of Halsey Packer, of Orchard street, Mystic, died last night at a sanitarium on Vauxhall street, in which institution Mrs. Packer had been under treatment for some time. Besides her husband, Mrs. Packer is survived by two brothers, Charles Dewey, of this city, and Edgar Dewey, of Noank, and by a sister, Mrs. Ella D. Kellogg, of this city. Mrs. Packer was formerly a teacher in the public schools at Noank and Mystic.

Thomas Capabo, of Bradford, R. I.; Harry Fisher, United States Coast Guard academy; John Leford, Co. A., Fort Trumbull, and Ross Cook, United States Coast Guard, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were dismissed today.

Augur Pursky, a patient at Home Memorial hospital, returned home today.

James A. May, 53 Montauk avenue, upon entering his home shortly after last midnight, observed a Peeping Tom on the roof of the veranda of the residence next door. Mr. May communicated with the police, but before officers arrived there the peeper had made his escape.

The deed transferring the Harris building, five-story State street business and apartment structure, from the trustees of the J. N. Harris estate, to Dr. Hugh F. Lena, was received for record at the office of the city clerk this afternoon.

Misses Eleanor Crawford and Beulah Collins, who are spending several weeks at Camp Happiness, near Baltic, spent yesterday at the home of their parents in this city.

Charles Alexander, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony S. Alexander, 209 Howard street, and Miss Mary Silveira, daughter of Mrs. Rita Silveira, of the same address, were married yesterday at St. Joseph's church, by Rev. William C. Fitzsimmons. Francis Alexander, brother of the groom, was best man and Miss Mary Silva attended the bride.

HAROLD DENISON'S HERMIT WAYS ARE INTERRUPTED

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 17—Harold Denison, undoubtedly of unsound mentality, residing with his parents, at least a part of the time, at 94 Blackhall street, has been living the life of a hermit the past few days. As a result of his actions, Denison was taken into custody this afternoon by State Police Officer Bernard Kenerson of Groton barracks, following complaint being made to the state police of the movements and actions of Denison in Waterford and alongside the highways. An examination will be made by a physician to determine Denison's sanity and if his mind is adjudged to be affected he will be committed to the Norwich State Hospital, Preston.

Denison, according to the officer, has been in the Waterford woods the greater part of four days, during which time he has existed by the consumption of berries, which abound there at this season. Denison had been observed prowling about the borders of the woods and finally he appeared to passersby in an almost entirely nude condition. Complaint was made to the Waterford constabulary and when one officer observed Denison the latter was fired upon, but not followed and arrested. This caused the state police to be complained to. This afternoon Officer Kenerson found Denison near the Gardner farm. Denison was placed under arrest, but was taken to his home. When the officer and his prisoner arrived at the Denison home, neither the man's father nor mother was there. Denison then attacked the officer, only to be subdued and lodged in a cell.

In connection with the imperial gifts distributed in Japan to persons more than ninety years of age on the occasion of the royal silver wedding, the authorities found 19,500 persons in Japan who were eligible. Sixty per cent of these were women. Two women 111 years of age each, held the longevity record.

Noted Russian Evangelical Head Here

The Rev. I. S. Prokhanoff, Evangelical Christian Minister of Leningrad, and head of the "Christian" Evangelical paper in Leningrad, who is now in New York, having arrived on the S. S. Berengaria. The Reverend, who is to make an American tour, claims that 20,000 missionaries are needed to accomplish a complete reformation of Russia. The people have lost faith in the old orthodox religion of superstition, and are seeking a true religion. A great change has taken place in the spiritual life of Russia, claims Dr. Prokhanoff, who has spoken on many occasions in the most ancient orthodox churches in Moscow. Thirty years ago this would have been regarded as a sacrilege and would have met with the greatest of punishment.

C. B. Conway vs. Thomas Eual. Motion to assign, ready.

When Judge Michael J. Turano came into court he called a number of cases of infractions of automobile laws. Antonio Fiori, was charged on the 13th day of July, with taking passengers for hire as a hackney without first having secured a hackney license from the licensing officer, Thomas E. Brown, chief of police. Fiori entered a plea of not guilty and his case was continued to July 24th on which date surety for his presence was required in the sum of $200. A second complaint charged that on the 22nd day of June he did set up and use a hackney without first securing a permit from the chief of police. A plea of not guilty was entered and the case was continued to July 24th and surety for presence required in the sum of $200. A third complaint charged that passengers were taken for hire on the 13th day of July. This complaint was construed to July 24th and surety was required in the sum of $200.

Thomas Fiori, 17, was complained of as having operated a hackney vehicle without first securing a hackney license from the chief of police. He entered a plea of not guilty and the case was continued to July 24th with surety in the sum of $200.

For Annunziata Vuono vs. Albert Grillo a case of threatened assault, the reading of the complaint was waived by Town Solicitor Ferguson A plea of not guilty was entered and the case continued to July 31st with bail required in the sum of $5,000.

The case against Ida Grillo was similar and cared for in the same way.

George Dier, 23, of hite Rock, a six months' resident, was arraigned on a complaint charging that on the 17th of July he operated an automobile without first securing a license from the State Board of Public Roads Defendant said that the previous year he had a R. I. license and the day after was arrested obtained a Conn license. He was fined guilty and fined $10 and costs of $8, amounting to $13.80.

The case of the state, William Kay, police constable of the town of Hopkinton, vs. Howard J. Douglas, two cases were discontinued on the payment of costs.

Newman F. Tuckerman to the four complaints on violations of state and town automobile laws on which he had previously been arraigned signified his plea of not guilty to one of nolo. Town Solicitor Ferguson told the court that Tuckerman's was not a deliberate violation and his subsequent actions had proved the statement. He recommended that the cases be discontinued on the payment of expense costs.

For the cases against Natale Luppinnazo and Eugene Bennett there were the same proceedings and the same disposition.

The court took a short recess.

In the case of State, Frank H. Brown, vs. Raymond D. Maine, charged with recklessly operating an automobile on Laurel street, town of Hopkinton, July 15, the defendant pleaded nolo. He was fined $40 and costs. Town Solicitor Ferguson stated that Maine had been twice warned by Chief Brown and on the day in question he was driving a Ford roadster with three passengers on the seat and two more on the running board of the car. It was claimed that he was making 35 miles an hour in the closely built up section, and there was considerable traffic at the time.

Maine stated that he had two others on the seat with him and that he knew nothing about the law applying to three passengers on the driver's seat. He said that Chief Brown of Hopkinton had warned him twice, once at the sharp corner in the village in Ashaway and again near the Bethel mill when he asked him where his front number plate was. Maine said that another car passed him the day he was arrested before he reached the officer.

Jack Perry, arrested by Chief Frank H. Brown, of Hopkinton, for driving an automobile on Broad street, Ashaway, July 15, at a speed greater than was reasonable and proper, was fined $20 and costs. It was claimed that he passed two cross roads and four other machines going in the same direction.

Walter M. Killam was presented on complaint of Chief Frank H. Brown of Hopkinton, charging htat on the 13th day of July he operated an automobile recklessly on Broad street in Ashaway. It was stated that a car coming out of a cross road was ditched by the driver in order to avoid being hit by the machine operated by Killam. Killam pleaded not guilty and the case was continued to Aug. 7, bail being fixed at $500. His mother, Mrs. Berhta B. Killam, furnished surety.

In the case of state, Frank H. Brown, complainant, vs. Donald Whaley, charged with operating an automobile on Broad street, Ashaway, July 12, at a speed greater than was reasonable and proper. Whaley was fined $5 and costs. Town Solicitor Ferguson stated that the officer reported he was making 37 miles an hour, but he passed no cars and traffic was not heavy at the time. Attorney A. T. L. Ledwidge represented the defendant and said he had advised him to enter a plea of nolo.

A Hudson limousine was wrecked on the Watch Hill road, Thursday night, near "Bayberry Ridge", the summer cottage of Archibald H. Davis, when a telephone pole on the opposite side of the highway was snapped off at the base when hit by the car, which overturned. The five occupants were colored young people bound from a dance in Champlin's hall, Main street, Westerly, to Watch Hill, and the accident was reported to have happened when the auto skidded on the highway, wet by a sudden shower. The operator was Andrew Washington of Westerly.

Nearly all the windows were broken and the occupants were more or less cut and scratched by the broken glass. They were transferred to other automobiles and taken to Watch Hill. Sally Robinson, a maid employed by a Watch Hill family, was taken to the Ocean House, where Dr. John Champlin, Jr., was called to attend her. He found that she had sustained a fracture of the seventh rib on the right side caused by violent contact with a seat of the automobile. A large crowd of colored folks soon returning, Sergeant and Motorcycle Officer Robert Kessel and Lieut. Watch Hill Station Leiby Nerman were called and investigated. The front end of the automobile was smashed from striking the pole and stone wall when the forward left wheel was balanced on a top stone of the wall. As the rear end of the limousine extended back in the roadway a lantern was placed in the highway to ward off accidents to passing automobilists.

Earlier in the evening at the juncture of East avenue and the Watch Hill road the Maxwell meat truck of Earl Dower was in collision with a Ford auto driven by James Thompson as both were rounding the turn.

"Slightly improved and resting comfortably," was the statement concerning Margaret, 14-months-old daughter of James Grillow, 12 State street, Westerly, thought to be suffering from infantile paralysis by physicians Friday at the Providence City Hospital. Her left arm is paralyzed.

She was attended by Dr. Michael E. Scanlon of Westerly, who, after a consultation, decided that the symptoms indicated infantile paralysis. The residence of the parents was quarantined Thursday by Dr. Samuel C. Webster, Westerly health officer. So far as is known there are no other cases of the disease in Westerly.

August 15 has been chosen as the tentative date upon which the Westerly hospital will be open to the public. The opening will, however, depend on the progress made on the grading and the highway approach over Wells street to the hospital. The equipment of the hospital and nurses home is now practically complete.

Salvation Army Tag day will be observed in Westerly today (Saturday) in connection with the Salvation Army drive, which has been in progress during the past week. Friday Captain Cecil C. Austin issued a call for volunteers to assist him in selling tags. All volunteers are to report at the People's Mission at 9 a. m.

Due to the fact that so many members of the Army are helping to care for thousands of poor children all through No. England at this time, it is impossible to get them here to Westerly for Tag day, it was explained by Captain Austin.

He also stated, however, that Col. McIntyre had informed him that he would send the staff band to Westerly early in the fall to give a concert.

Rev. and Mrs. B. U. Hatfield expect to leave Monday for a vacation part of which will be spent in Nova Scotia with Rev. Mr. Hatfield's mother.

WATER COMMISSIONERS RECOMMEND

tioned for the city ever since Fairview was built, as the big body of water looks like an inexhaustible supply. It is situated about 5 miles west of the city and is high enough to give ample pressure. It was originally a natural lake the surface of which has been raised about six feet by the Falls company or their predecessors. It covers 5 or 6 hundred acres and about 1 billion gallons of water can be drawn from it. The drainage area, including the lake surface, is 5 square miles. This is about the same as our total watershed at present and the storage the same and would yield a dependable supply of 3 million gallons a day, or the equal to what we have at present. A pipe line could be run from the outlet around the hills into the upper end of Stony brook, about 4 1-2 miles. The latter part of the distance would be a very deep cut. With a pipe line about six miles long a connection could be made with the Stony brook pipe line. The dam, outlet and about 150 acres of land are owned by the Falls company. The gates are closed during the spring months and the water let down to the mills during the summer and fall.

The only way to use the lake for a domestic supply would be to purchase all of the land around the shore for a sufficient distance back to protect the water from pollution.

The lake has become increasingly popular as a summer resort of late years and the land increased in value accordingly. There are many owners of land on the shore and at least four camps of various size. The owners are opposed to their rights being taken away and the project would mean condemnation with the necessary delay.

The water rights would be much more than in any other place investigated, because it is a developed privilege and stored water that is taken.

The cost of this project would probably run to as much as either one of the following, and the dependable supply would be only about one half. In other words, we would not be getting nearly as much for the money as by taking Deep River or Pease brook.

Pease Brook and Deep River

These two projects will be discussed together, as they are the same in size.

Pease brook is located in the town of Leban. The dam site selected is about 1 3-4 miles above the site mentioned in the report of 1901. This location was chosen because of its higher elevation than the one further down stream. The distance from Harland corner is 3 1-4 miles.

The Deep river dam site is located in the town of Colchester. The distance from Harland corner is 9 1-2 miles.

Each site has a drainage area of 8 1-2 square miles. The dam at Pease brook would be 55 feet high and 1400 feet long. The dam at Deep river would be 50 feet high and 900 feet long. The Pease brook dam would cost about $130,000 more than the Deep river dam.

Each reservoir would hold about the same amount of water, 1,500,000,000 gallons. Either one would yield about the same. 5 1-2 million gallons daily supply in dry years and of course more in wet years.

The quality of water is about the same in either case.

The elevation of the spillway of Pease brook would be 284 feet above mean tide, of Deep river 350.

The number of houses on a watershed, in connection with their location, is the measure of its danger of pollution. The number of houses per square mile on Deep river is much less than on Pease brook. There are no cemeteries near the Deep river reservoir, while at Pease brook there are two in use. One is near the upper end of the pond and one near the brook which would require court approval before the project is started.

There is one more developed water privilege to settle with on Deep river than on Pease brook.

The cleaning and preparing the basin for water would be much less on Deep river than Pease brook.

The higher cost of the Pease brook dam and cleaning reservoir would more than offset the extra length of pipe line and extra diversion on Deep river by many thousand dollars.

Options for land at reasonable figures have been secured at both sites for the larger part of each basin. It would be necessary to condemn one piece of property at Pease brook, but none at Deep river.

The higher elevation of Deep river is an advantage over Pease brook in that water could be furnished the high parts of the city under good pressure. While all of the sections of the city get water from our present supply when the reservoirs are full, the complaints begin to come into the office when the reservoirs begin to drop down from full pond.

The pipe lines to Deep river would cross the main stream near the old Yantic paper mill site. This stream at this point is higher than the overflow of Stony brook, and if the pipe line could be laid to this point this season, water could be taken into the city from this temporary connection without the use of a pump.

The estimated cost of the total project of Deep River, with a 24-inch pipe line as far as Broad street in the city, is $1,570,000. This will furnish 5,500,000 gallons daily. A dam 20 feet lower could be built, giving a storage reservoir of 400,000,000 gallons. This would yield 2,500,000 gallons daily and would last the city quite a number of years. The pipe could be laid to Harland's corner, where a connection could be made with the 16-inch mains. Later it could be extended to Broad street. This lower dam and shorter pipe line would reduce the total estimate by $192,000.

It must be remembered that the water supply problem of a city that grows is never ended. In 1858, Fairview reservoir was completed. It had a watershed of three quarters of a square mile. Inside of ten years the city realized they needed more water, and in the spring of 1881 the laying of the 24-inch pipe from Meadow brook to Fairview was completed and the right to use the water was obtained from the Falls company when the water was running six inches over their dam. In 1892, the water was so low that additional rights were obtained from the Falls company, and in 1896, the right to take all of the water was obtained. Much agitation was made for more water a few years later, and resulted, in 1902, in raising Fairview reservoir four feet. This helped some, but more watershed was needed, and in 1910 Fairview was nearly empty and after putting in temporary supplies from Trading cove and Spalding pond, Stony Brook reservoir was built. This has lasted until the present time and we must look elsewhere for water. If we wish to look ahead many years when the Deep river project is not sufficient, we can remember that this proposed pipe line crosses a stream of good water with sufficient elevation and a drainage area, exclusive of the one recommended, of 27 square miles.

Engineer Palmer Speaks

At the conclusion of the reading of the report Mayor Milo R. Waters announced that City Engineer Shepard B. Palmer would answer whatever questions members of the court desired to ask.

Speaking on the report Mr. Palmer said that the report covered a series of plans and would need study. The present supply of water in the two city reservoirs, he said, gives 3,000,000 gallons of water daily but the need in Norwich is for 4,000,000 gallons daily. Of course, he said, in a wet year our reservoirs may supply us with 5,000,000 gallons daily, but we have got to have a dependable supply for dry years.

Records have been kept of streams, continued Mr. Palmer, and it is easy to figure what the yield will be with pondage and area known, for this determines the yield of the stream. Fairview was figured to give the city a daily supply of 1,500,000 gallons dependable supply and this has been proven a correct estimate. At the most our daily supply now is 2,200,000 if Stony Brook reservoir could be brought to full pond, but this has not yet happened owing to lack of rain.

Norwich will not need 5,500,000 additional gallons of water for daily use for some time to come, said Mr. Palmer, therefore the plan for partial development was investigated and the and the proposal made to pipe to Harland's corner and pipe into two 16-inch mains. These mains would not be large enough for the full project supply but with the partial project supply they would serve for a number of years.

We need not build the dam at Deep River to the full height figured. The smaller dam would give a pondage of 400,000,000 gallons, the same as Stony Brook reservoir and give a supply of 2,500,000 gallons daily. We are now short 1,000,000 gallons per day and this would give a surplus of 1,500,000 gallons per day which would carry the city for another 10 years if the present rate of increased consumption is continued. This project would be $125,000 less than the full project and would result in a saving of about $50,000 in 10 years. If the larger dam is needed at that time it may be built by raising the smaller dam and providing more embankment.

Questioned on Metering

Councilman Frank H. Quinley asked if the city could save enough water by metering the city, therefore not need a larger supply.

City Engineer Palmer stated that the report shows 40 per cent. of the city metered, this including all factories and large consumers, the remaining 60 per cent. being private residences. If by metering these, he said, a saving of 1,000,000 gallons could be made, we would still be using our entire supply. I do not think private houses could save a million gallons, he said.

Alderman Patrick F. Sweeney then asked if metering the city and stopping all leakages would solve the problem.

To this, Mr. Palmer replied by saying that he did not believe there was much leakage in the city system. New London found little when they covered their system. When Norwich first laid the system, said Mr. Palmer, wrought iron pipes lined with cement were used. These pipes were soon found inadequate for the work and about 35 years ago the city began replacing them with cast iron piping. Therefore, he said, by adding cast iron pipes to the system, a few each year, the piping is not old. Cast iron piping should be good for 100 years of service and because the pipes were laid by our own department and special attention taken to making joints tight, I doubt if there is much leakage.

If there was a big leak anywhere, said Mr. Palmer, it would soon show up, because the large flow would undermine the top soil and cause cavefins, or show up in other ways. The only chance of a big leak not being discovered would be to have it near a large brook, the leakage thereby going into the brook and escaping notice.

After all questions had been answered the council voted to refer the report of the board of water commissioners to a committee of the whole, to be taken up again at the adjourned meeting of the common council to be held one week from Friday (July 24th) at 7 o'clock standard time.

Other Business In Meeting

Previous to the reading of the report of the board of water commissioners several small business matters were taken up and disposed of by the council. The quarterly report of the auditors of the cashier's report of the water board was accepted and ordered printed in the council journal. A bill from Frank Brennan for a broken spring on his automobile caused by alleged road conditions on Boswell avenue was referred to the finance committee and corporation counsel. Similar action was taken on a bill for $20, submitted by Mrs. Marie Senft, charges for caring for the baby of Mrs. Cavanaugh, who was stricken with small pox a number of weeks ago.

The city treasurer was instructed to pay to John H. Barnes, attorney for Cornelius Collins, the sum of $200 in full settlement of claim, suit to be withdrawn. The accident happened in 1921 and suit was pending in court.

RIFF OFFENSIVE TOWARD FEZ GROWS MORE INTENSE

FEZ, French Morocco, July 17—(A. P.)—Abd-el-Krim's offensive toward Fez is growing more intense, but chiefly in a political sense. His plan, it is indicated from all quarters in the last few days, is to sweep toward the capital on a wave of insurrection among the tribes, saving his military strength for crushing blows. His attacks recently have been short and sharp, and on a small scale, compared wit hhis apparent forces.

Abd-el-Krim's men are expanding their process of formenting discontent among the tribes in the area north of Fez, occasionally they take hostages and go through a series of executions to show the tribes still loyal to the French that it is safer to follow Abd-el-Krim than to fight him.

The Riffan attacks recently have been at various places along the front north of Fez, with constant pressure southward on the roads to the capital, they are sudden and unexpected, and at scattered points, in order to keep the French troops busy rushing to the defense of their posts.

YACHT TAKES FIRE FROM EXPLOSION AT GREENWICH

GREENWICH, July 17.—(AP)—Fire which broke out on the 75 foot yacht "Usona" while she was taking on gasoline at an oil company's dock here today badly damaged the yacht and burned Anchor Johnson, a deck hand, about the face and hands. Johnson is now in the Greenwich hospital, but his burns are not believed to be serious.

The "Usona," owned by Norman P. Reams, of Belle Haven, Greenwich, was commanded by Samuel Barclay. Shortly after tieing up to the dock and beginning to take on the gasoline, there was a sudden explosion, followed by fire. Local fire companies were called and fought the flames for an hour before getting the fire under control. The interior of the yacht, which was purchased last year by Mr. Reams for $7,000, was wrecked.

The Old Quadrilles

Far, far away in the Ozark Hills,
The young folks dance the old quadrilles.
Overalls and shirts of blue,
Cowhide boots and jumpers, too,
Their swaying bodies all keeping time,
To the fiddler's tune, and caller's rime.

"First couple out, and lead to the right,
Follow the girl with the eyes so bright,
You-all jump up, and never come down,
The holler of your foot
Makes a hole in the ground,
Ala' man all
Around the hall."

Laughing Jane, her eyes full of joy,
Shyly watches the fiddler boy,
Playing as he never played before,
For her to dance on the puncheon floor.

"Do se do,
Around your beau
Roosters in the centre, four hands 'round,
Swing your partner off'en the ground,
Whirl the girl from Arkansaw,
Chaw more tobaccy than yer Paw kin chaw,
Saw more wood than yer Maw kin saw,
Dance with the girl from Arkansaw,
Balance all
Around the hall."

"Turkey in the Straw," "No More to Roam," "Arkansaw Traveler," Home Sweet Home."
"Git yer partners, last set of all,"
Gaily they follow the old-time call.

"Chase that 'possum, chase that squirrel,
Follow that pretty girl 'round the world.
Chase that rabbit, chase that coon,
Follow your honey 'round the moon."

The birds are singing of love and joy,
As down the trail the fiddler boy
Leaps the brook and over the rocks,
He follows on, and never stops,
Until he comes to the pasture gate,
Where happiness and Janie wait;
As he gaily speeds along,
He hums the caller's careless song:

"Chase that 'possum, chase that squirrel,
Follow that pretty girl 'round the world."

"In the Cool of the Evening"

In the cool of the evening, when the low sweet whispers waken,
When the laborers turn them homeward, and the weary have their will,
When the censers of the roses o'er the forest aisles are shaken.
Is it but the wind that cometh o'er the far green hill?

For they say 'tis but the sunset winds that wander through the heather.
Rustle all the meadow grass and bend the dewey fern;
They say 'tis but the winds that bow the reeds in prayer together,
And fill the shaken pools with fire along the shadowy burn.

In the beauty of the twilight, in the Garden that He loveth,
They have veiled His lovely vesture with the darkness of a name!
Through His Garden, through His Garden, it is but the wind that moveth,
No more! But O the miracle, the miracle is the same.

In the cool of the evening, when the sky is an old story,
Slowly dying, but remember, day, and loved with passion still! • • •
Hush! • • • the fringes of His garment, in the fading golden glory
Softly rustling as He cometh o'er the far green hill.

A MILE WITH ME

Oh, who will walk a mile with me,
Along life's merry way?
A comrade blithe and full of glee
Who dares to laugh out loud and free,
And let his frolic fancy play
Like a happy child through the flowers gay
That fill the field and fringe the way
While he walks a mile with me.

And who will walk a mile with me
Along life's weary way?
A friend whose heart has eyes to see
The stars shine out o'er the darkening lea
And the quiet rest at the end of the day.
A friend who knows and dares to say
The brave sweet words that cheers the way
While he walks a mile with me.

With such a comrade such a friend
I fain would walk till journeys end
Through summer's sunshine, winter's rain,
And then farewell, we shall meet again.

The Man Behind the Smile

I don't know how he is on creeds,
I never heard him say!
But he's got a smile that fits his face
And he wears it every day.

If things go wrong he wont complain,
Just tries to see the joke;
He's always finding little ways
Of helping other folk.

He sees the good in everyone,
Their faults he never mentions;
He has a lot of confidence
In people's good intentions.

You soon forget what ails you
When you happen 'round this man,
He can cure a case of hypo
Quicker than the doctor can.

No matter if the sky is gray,
You get his point of view;
And the clouds begin to scatter,
And the sun comes breaking through.

You'll know him if you meet him,
And you'll find it worth your while,
To cultivate the friendship of
The "Man Behind the Smile."

WHERE HAVE ALL THE SISTERS GONE?

Dear Sisters: I was going to write last week but had company and didn't get to it so will write a few lines now. I have been wondering where all the sisters have gone that they didn't write. Perhaps they are off on a vacation. If they are would be pleased to hear from them as they will have a lot of spare time if they are taking the right kind of a vacation. I think when any one takes a few days off they should forget everything at home. It is the change that does anyone good. I think everyone should take a few days once in a while. A change is good for everybody. You feel more like taking up your duties again. I think the housekeeper has quite a task planning three meals a day for 365 days in a year. That is one of a thousand other things a housekeeper has to do. Do you wonder the tasks gets rather dull sometimes? If there is anyone that deserves a pension it is the mother of a large family with the most of the work to do herself and limited means.

Kocha: Don't forget your hoopskirt when you come berrying. The flies and mosquitoes are very thick. I would be pleased to attend Twice Twenty's picnic if I have a way I can.

As I live on quite a large hill the autos have been flying by today on their way to Beach pond which seems to be the favorite resort. If you have never been there take a ride there some time. It is a very pretty pond three miles long and quite wide.

THE BIRDS AND THE FLOWERS

Dear Editor, Sisters and Brothers: This is Sunday and a very warm day, almost too warm to do anything. However as I haven't written for some time think I had better. I wish you could have gone with us to the woods hunting for flowers. We went nearly every afternoon and found flowers that we had never seen before. We have hunted in vain for maiden hair ferns. As yet we have found just one plant. This spring has been more pleasant than other years. The birds came so early. We had a robin that stayed with us all winter. Then came the bluejays, other birds we called grackles, a kind of blackbird. These birds started building a nest in my neighbor's grape trough. As soon as he saw what they were doing he started firing at them with a boy's air rifle. One came down dead. Poor things, trying to start housekeeping and now the wife or husband is dead. We had the little orchard birds. They are much like canery birds in color and age. Other birds were humming bird, bluebird, cat bird and sparrows. A pair of blue birds built their nest in an apple tree near our house. A pair of cat birds built their nest in the vines near the kitchen door. I watched these birds build their nest. They used mud, bark, string and lint. They lint they pulled my clothes line almost to bits, sometimes they had such a mouthful they couldn't fly and had to drop part of their load. These birds had sharp tuffs of feathers on their heads, a real top knot. Another grackel is out here in the yard as I write feeding her family of one. He does not look a bit like her, being much larger and of another color.

Perhaps he is adopted. He just runs around making the awfulest noise and eating all the worms his mother can find. He has eaten ten large earthworms. Now they have gone into the brush. One other bird is a cock pheasant, a very beautiful fellow and so tame. It was early in March and quite cold when he came first. He was looking for food on a dump. After he went I put some bread out and the next day he came again and was glad to find something to eat. I put some grain out for him and he came close to the house. He looked out of place walking up and down our driveway crowing with all his might. He hasn't been here now for sometime and I hope he is safe somewhere. Perhaps he is keeping house. One day while walking in the woods we found a nest with 13 eggs in it later we found eleven little quail. They were so cute. We found a large butterfly that day, which measured ten inches from the tip of one wing to the other. It was of a light green color with brown spots. We let him go after we had admired his beauty. His supper consists of five sow bugs, seven long worms called thousand legs, some flies if any can be got for him. Last Sunday while riding we saw seven long worms called thousand larger ones. One great one had antlers. They were near the road and seemed not a bit afraid of us.

The sisters and brothers do fine. Their letters are so interesting. I enjoy our paper and wouldn't like to be without it. Hope the sick are improving in health and all those who have lost dear ones have my sympathy. As this letters is getting quite long will close with best wishes to you all.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Just a cheery good morning to one and all. I wish to thank the editor for yellow slip. It came as a complete surprise.

Interested Reader: How are you since your seige with the grippe? Hope you are able to be up and around.

THE CHANCE ACQUAINTANCE

Dear Corner Members: I thoroughly enjoyed Billy's story. If it hadn't been for the Corner page would not have been so interested last week. I am going to send in a story of two girls as it was told to me.

A couple of us girls stood chatting with each other. Two young men passed us, walking slowly, making half audible remarks to the the effect that it was too bad they knew no one to introduce them. We, foolish, silly things that we were, felt flattered.

At last after several encounters, one of them stepped up to us, and, in the most courteous manner, asked if we would kindly direct him to the post-office. Now as the post office was directly across the street, and as they had passed it a half dozen times we laughed as wes pointed it out.

With perfectly serious face, the young man then said it was so far away he feared he might forget which building it was before he could reach it. "So won't you be so good as to walk over their with us to make sure that we find it?"

The ruse was obvious. We knew it and they knew that we knew it. But we were venturesome. They looked like pleasant company; so we walked them to the post office and past it. We were simply after excitement and adventure without thought of wrong doing, like thousands of others, vivacious, thoughtless but not bad, just a glutton for fun and many times took it without thought or care of the impression upon beholders. I did not talk this over with my mother, but at last came the awakening. Early in the fall I went with the rest of the family for a short stay in one of the large cities in the middle west. We stayed at a large boarding house which my father always patronized.

The landlady's daughter, being a bright girl, only a couple of years my senior, we became fast friends. We go in a way of strolling up and down the street for a couple of blocks in the evening, when all the grown ups were sitting in the yard talking and laughing, and paying no attention to us. It was not long before she confided in me that she too, had made a few acquaintances without an introduction, and thought it great fun.

We walked over to a large railway station a few blocks distant and saw two good looking young men watching us. We stood still, gazing at the crowd rushing here and there when one of them asked for which train were we waiting. We replied that we had come over only to see the crowd and they continued to talk. Finally, the young man who talked with Margaret suggested we all go and get some lemonade. The young man who walked with me was very quiet. I remember how hard I tried to get him to talk, in answer to my commenis on the beauty of the night. It was wonderful moonlight night, air as soft as silk. He made no reply and I realized afterward he was trying to reconcile my manner, apparently that of a nice girl, with the fact that I had permitted him to make my acquaintance on the street.

Being a stranger in the city I did not know just where we were going; but when we stopped at an open door I took it for ganted we had come to some quiet cafe. A white aproned man entered, my friend and I ordered lemonade, and chatted gaily but to my surprise the two men ordered beer. For the first time I began to feel vaguely uncomfortable.

The young man who walked with me remained silent. He still continued silent. He seemed to be pondering over something. But the escort of my friend began to change surprisingly as he passed her the lemonade strews, he touched her hand as if by accident, all the time talking more or less sentimentally. We were both frightened.

I think we had better go home now," said my friend.

I moved my chair back and got on my feet. My escort arise and said as he leaned forward and released Margaret's hand from her escort, "Girls go home! I am sorry you came with us, but you've been a pair of silly girls and I haven't much respect for you. My friend hasn't any as you see. I hope you'll remember that. Do ou think you will?

Just say to yourselves, occasionally. There are at least two men in the world with heaven's only respect for us. Probably there are many more, for if you are in the habit of making street acquaintances, as, of course you are—your manner showed that—it's pretty sure thing those ment you've walked with, and talked with have the same opinion that we have. That you haven't learned what they thought of you simply means you have been lucky up till now. Do you understand that her from one of her own, perhaps even thoroughly? I hope so. Good night.

I hope the girl who reads this and feels as I did, the longing thrill adventure, will let my experience save less to be desired, that their shall be no opportunity for the chance acquaintance.

REQUESTER RECIPES

Dear Sisters: To have the juice of your fruit contain acid, if it hasn't the desired amount of acid, you can take the juice of a tart apple, grapefruit or green grape. I prefer juice from grape fruit.

To make juiceless fruit jelly. I mean fruit like peaches, crab apples, or sour apples, cut them up in small pieces, skins, seeds and all. I put them all in and use them the same as the fruit that is more juicy. It does away with the question. It is all right, or isn't it all right?

You can ascertain whether your fruit juice has pectin by adding to one or two tablespoons of juice in a glass an equal amount of ethyl alcohol (50 to 95 per cent) mix thoroughly and let cool. A gelatinous mass will appear in the liquid which may be gathered upon a spoon if pectin is present.

Banana Cream: Take the juice and grated rind of one lemon; add 2 tablespoons of cornstarch dissolved in a little water, and one cup sugar. On this pour 2 cups boiling water, add three egg yolks and boil until it becomes thick. Then take from the fire, stir in the whites of the eggs beaten stiff and set away to cool. When ready to serve add to each dish three tablespoons of whipped cream, flavored with vanilla and sliced bananas.

Rhubarb Jelly: Cut up in small pieces without peeling, three pounds of rhubarb, add a cup of water, put on a slow fire and mash as it heats up. Don't boil hard. Just let it drip all night. Do not squeeze. To four cups of juice add eight level cups of sugar and bring to a boil. To that amount as once add done cup pectin, bring to a boil, boil for 1-2 minute. Take off stove skim and pour at once into glasses.

Rhubard and strawberries do not contain pectin so it must be added.

Currant Jelly: Just made my "currant" jell and had wonderful luck. Washed my currants after picking them over (but not of the stem) put on to boil in preserving kettle (no water) and boil 20 minutes. Strain, then add 3-4 cup of sugar to a cup of juice. Boil juice five minutes, add sugar warmed, boil one minute, remove from fire, skim and fill glasses.

Banana Jelly: Add one pint of boiling water to a package of gelatine and squeeze the juice of one lemon into it. Set in a cool place. When nearly hard, add 2 cups of hickory nuts, 2 cups bananas and mold in fancy shape. Turn onto lettuce leaves and serve with a cream dressing.

The Best Ice Cream: 3 cups sugar, 4 eggs, 4 cups milk, 1 quart heavy cream, 4 tablespoons vanilla, 2 junket tablets, 2 tablespoons water.

Put milk in dish and warm, stir junket tablets in cold water until dissolved, then add it to the warm milk. Now stir in sugar until dissolved. Now leave it 20 minutes and let it set, then add eggs beaten separately, cream, vanilla and freeze at once turning the crank very rapidly at first and it will soon freeze. Remove dasher when frozen and let stand at least three hours to ripen. Serve with any kind of fruit. Peaches sweetened and cut fine are very nice with it. Every one loves this cream. It is certainly delicious.

Poor Man's Mushrooms: Fry steak until you have the juice of the steak in the frying pan. Remove the steak and cut and peel about eight large radishes in this juice until quite brown. Then add one tablespoon butter 1-4 teaspoon salt and a pinch of pepper.

Fruit Pudding: Wash 1-2 pound of butter, cream, then add 1-2 pound of sugar, beat together until creamy, add yolks of four eggs, 1-2 teaspoon cinnamon, 1-4 teaspoon cloves, 2 1-4 cups of well sifted cracker crumbs, 2 cups chopped cherries. Add the beaten whites of the eggs and bake 30 minutes. Serve with sauce made of fruit juice thickened with cornstarch, of the juice just sweetened.

CLUB NO. 1 MAY CHANGE HALL

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: For a long time we have thought of finding another hall for our socials, with fewer stairs to climb and better conditions. On being asked to see what I could do I find we can have the parish house of the St. Paul's church. There is a kitchen with two sinks, two gas stoves and just a step into the dining hall and only four or five stairs from the ground on entering. It is always clean and pleasant as any one knows that has been there to their suppers. We can have the same for the second Wednesday in the month starting in this fall for $2 a month. It is on the corner of Walnut and Valley streets. Those sisters who could go to Versailles did have a good time and Student always makes a fine hostess. The young ladies pleased with there music.

Aries: You surely did your part and please don't use all the postage till I get one sent this way.

Comfort: That was very good. Perhaps some time I'll hop you are up here you will favor us with the same.

Sponge Cake: Two cups sugar, 4 eggs, 2 cups flour, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, 1 1-2 teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons baking powder, lemon extract. Separate the yolks from whites, beat the yolks with sugar for 15 minutes. Sift the flour and baking powder, salt, and cornstarch together three times. Add the water to the sugar and yolks then the flour, beat the whites stiff and fold in quickly, not beating, after they are folded in add extract. This will make two cakes. Make half recipe for one cake.

True Blue: It is past poppy time. Save me one this year.

Savitia: I thought I saw you last Wednesday.

Necia: How are you?

Red Clover: I am sorry you are still in bed.

Scottie: Just another piece of pie please. Please may I have a pin?

ANY RELIEF FOR BATHING RASH?

Hello, Folks: Hope everyone is enjoying this lovely weather. Great for you sisters that can go on these wonderful picnics that we read so much of now. That is where the stay-at-homes are luckier than those of us that are shut in an office all day. Hope you are all having a good time anyway.

Had to laugh at the sketch one of the sisters wrote for last Saturday's paper. How true it is about some people. They would do lots more good by staying at home. I suppose as long as they think they are cheering you up by telling ou how bad you look and of cases like yours we will be bothered by that kind of a pest. Glad I don't know very many like that and I am very much afraid I should tell them to stay at home if I did.

What has happened to Calla Lily? Has the hot weather dried up all your ink? Better get busy. Haven't seen a letter from you in a long time. Get a flying glimpse of you as I go by the store occasionally but not very often. How is the girl anyway?

Has any of the sisters found anything to offset that terrible rash that is the result of going in bathing this year? It is enough to drive a sane man to drink. Have heard a lot of people say that they have it but haven't found a remedy for it as yet.

Wonder how many of the sisters are enjoying (?) hay fever this time of the year. Think we should get up a special club for them. The only relief I ever got from it was to go to a chiropractor. I have had it so bad that I was almost blind and wasn't able to sleep for days at a time. Glad if the information is useful to anyone else.

Want to say thank you for letting me join your family and will try to do my share toward filling up the page.

SHRIMPO.

WIRELESS JOINS CORNER.

Dear Editor of the Social Corner: I would like to join the Social Corner if you have room for one more. Am acquainted with a number of the Corner sisters. Will take for my pen name Wireless. When I told one of the Corner friends what I would take for my name she said, "Oh, that's good. We always expect something new and good from the radio."

Would like to have some try my

Pineapple Whip: One cup cooked rice, 1 cup sugar, 1 cup shredded pineapple, 1-3 pint bottle of whipped cream. Stir all together and chill. Easy to make and it is delicious.

Elva: How do you like to walk down by the river? Some scenery! and the air is beautiful.

If I am accepted as a member kindly send me a pin. Thank you!

Yours for the success of the Corner,

WIRELESS.

INJUED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Dear Editor and Sisters of the Social Corner: Thanks ever so much to the editor for my Social Corner button. Am very well pleased with it.

To the shutins of the Corner, I can send you all my most heartfelt sympathy for I am shut in also. Had an auto accident on the Fourth that nearly fractured my skull and have the prettiest pair of black and blue eyes that you could ever see. And a big sore head. But am very thankful I wasn't killed. My husband got a sprained knee and youngest daughter a blue bruise on her forehead.

Will write more latter when I am in a better mood.

THE WILD FLOWERS

Social Corner Editor and Members: As nature study is one of my hobbies I enjoy reading the letters about wild flowers that have been written, from time to time in the Corner page. It seems strange that more people do not study the wild flowers that grow along our highways everywhere. Although many have small flowers that are not appreciable at a distance yet when seen closely are really very beautiful. Some of those that look like one flower are really a whole cluster of little flowers, handsomely shaded.

According to Dana's How to Know the Wild Flowers, there are three species of lady slippers, common pink, showy and yellow. There are large tracts of forest that are generously favored by the common pink, but the showy and the yellow are rare in this part of New England. I have been on several wild goose chases after yellow ones that proved to be only a common pink one that had grown in the shade. Each variety has a distinct habit of growth all its own. These plants belong to the orchid family. There are many others of this family common to this part of the temperate zone. Calopogon is in blossom at the present time, ale purple fringed and the ragged fringed will soon appear, if not already here. These varieties are not so plentiful and generally are picked by the roots if necessary, by some person who has no real pleasure in them except for the moment. One of the dearest memories of my childhood is a moist spot where arethus orchid grew every year in abundance. I did not know the name then but enjoyed their waxy pinkness very much. Big bushes have grown over the place now, so they appear no more. This variety of plants furnishes an extensive chapter for study and much worth while information can be obtained.

Another interesting group of wild flowers that is flowering at the present time are the lilies, wood, yellow and Turk's cap. "They toil not, neither do thy spin," but are robbed in beauty, unexcelled." Growing from great bulbs they are very hardy and would grace any cultivated garden.

At this time of the year frequent mention is made of the acres of white water lilies, to be seen at tadpole ponds but nobody mentions the wild luxuriance of the dodder that grows there also. This is a parasitic plant, drawing its life from some other plant, but very peculiar and interesting. It is a perfect tangle of thread like stems, orange in color bearing clusters of small white flowers, a novelty among plants. Jickerel weed and arrowhead grow side by side with these flowers, the former so strong and sturdy and the pretty arrow shaped leaves and frail while flowers of the latter plant forming a strong contrast.

Somewhere among my clipping I have the letter written by Aunt Mary about the wild flowers she saw as she rode about the country. Her active mind at her advanced years appreciated their beauty and gave her real pleasure in the evening of her life. I have great admiration for elderly people who keep their minds young during their sunset years by doing such things instead of lamenting.

Rural Delivery: Are you the party who used to get such big catches of fish at Bailey pond once upon a time? It seems to me now as I think of it, that I never saw so many nor such large fresh water fish as a Mr. Somebody from up your way caught and put in a wee crab in my grandfather's cellar. Fishing at the present time doesn't have a lookin with that.

Little Spinster: A compliment to you on wild roses.

Silent Partner: Cause our names to read Partners Silent and Stranger Silent and it would look as though we were sisters. Should like to get acquainted.

"Tongues in trees, books in the running brooks, Sermons in stones, and good in everything."

SILENT STRANGER.

GUARD WELL THE TONGUE

Dear Corner Sisters: I know I am either careless or very busy or else "don't want," to write but I guess its because I'm very busy. I find I can't do as much or as quickly as I use to. Several have told me they look for my letters every Saturday so will write a few lines but doubt if it will be very interesting. We have been having lots of things out of the garden to eat and it takes much time to pick and prepare them but how very nice they do taste when on the table! I have had lots of company this summer and the summer only just begun. We are always glad to see our friends and try our best to entertain them the best way we can. I am still nursing that blessed knee. It is hard to bear. Sometimes the pain is severe but I think I might have something much worse so don't fuss too much as I am able to get around and work. I would like a pin but suppose they are all gone by now. I also want to thank the sister for the picture which was taken at Central Village and also want to say to Calla Lily that I think it's fine idea to have our meetings where she suggeseted. I am not able to attend many of the meetings but will do all I can to help in any way when I do.

I do like the Social Corner I think you meet many friendly people and I think they are true blue. Of all things that is hard for me to bear is deceitfulness. There is so much of it nowadays. Some people will be so nice to your face, then the minute you back is turned say some nasty thing about you or yours. I try not to say anything only what I would say to their face. I am more careful then I used to be. I think folks will say somethings but when any one gets right down to saying nasty mean things it it not right.

Wait a minute before we speak
And consider if it will do any good.
To say a mean spiteful thing
And will we feel any better if we should.

Lets be careful how we use our tongues
They are unruly members at their best
Whether we are old or whether we are young
It neither brings happiness or success.

Yours as ever

FLOWERS ALWAYS INTEREST

Dear Corner Friends: The spirit has moved frequently to write to the Corner but the opportunity was lacking, so I am making a special effort to write, lest Mountain Primrose and others think the interest is waning in Club No. 1. Hope others will write, too.

Sorry the weather proved to be such that it kept the majority from attending our annual picnic, but those who braved the showers were well repaid for going. The spirit of sociability was predominant. The tables looked especially pretty with heir yellow decorations of crepe paper and flowers, and the dinner was up to the standard of excellence, with all the usual salads, sandwiches, pies, cakes, etc., arranged under the efficient management of Student. Also a very pleasing program was carried out.

Any item about flowers excites my interest, such as being told by Twice Twenty about the Lady Slipper or Moccasin flower reminded me of some recently seen in Millerton, N. Y., that were a beautiful specimen of pink and white and the central cup was pink, the like of which I had never seen before. They grew taller than the pink ones. Perhaps the white one you saw was a sport from these. In any event it is rare, the these pink and white are not as common as the pink. I think these orchids are most beautiful except perhaps the Indian Pipes which I think are wonderful.

A number of years ago some one set a few small plants of for-get-me-not on the bank of a small brook that ran near the house on through the meadow, pasture and woods, knowing that it thrived better in a cool, damp environment. That was the small beginning of what today is a spot of beauty, as the for-get-me-nots grew, blossomed and the wind and water wafted as carried the seed further down stream where it easily lodged and found rooting place and now for over a quarter of a mile you can find these dainty azure flowers, from early till frost in great profusion. They are frozen over in winter but come out each spring to grow and blossom in all their loviness to brighten the lonely waste places.

Lucille: Another three miles "up hill" before you reach the homestead and this flowering brook. Also, the church you saw nestled on the hillside was not at this place. I think, as the trees almost completely hide the village.

Canterbury Bell: I think of you among your many flowers and wonder why your silence.

Best wishes to all.

SYMPATHY FOR SICK AND INJURED

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Brothers, One and All: I know we have one bone brother belonging to us, but whether more than one I know not.

I have been thinking for some time, for I do so want a pin, It is astonishing how they hold out. They are like the widow's cruise of oil. I think our editor is one of the chosen few, for spending so much money on unknown persons. Such an unexpected gift for him to give us and I think it was a fine thing for him to do. I wonder if everybody appreciates his kindness. Each one has thanked him individually. I move that we give him a rising vote of thanks collectively.

Was sorry to hear that O. H. O. is not living there in her pleasant home. So hard to leave one's home and spend such pleasant weather as we are having in a hospital. Will try and write her soon.

Have been so anxious to hear about Red Clover who fell and broke her leg or hip, and was in the Backus hospital. If it was her leg where was the break, and how is she getting along? Wish some one who knows would write the corner, and tell us if she can walk without crutches and how long she was in the hospital.

SOME ORIGINAL RECIPES

Dear Social Corner Sisters: This week I am sending some original recipes;

Herring and Potato Salad: 1 cup cold potatoes, 1-2 cup of chopped hard cooked eggs, Spanish dressing, 2 eggs, chopped parsley, 1 cup fish.

Wash salt herring thoroughly in cold water, drain and cook 20 minutes in boiling water to cover; drian and dry on a piece of coarse cloth. Separate the meat in flakes and there should be one cup. Cut potato in slices the size of the flakes if possible, 1-3 cup of eggs, toss these together lightly. Marinate with French dressing and dispose in a mould of lettuce or watercress. Around the base, place rings of hard cooked eggs, first dipped in French dressing, then in finely chopped parsley. Press the yolks through a sieve over salad and sprays of parsely in center. Serve with pimento cheese.

A Good Pudding for Children: Soak 1 finely cup of dried crumbs and 1-2 cup of cream of wheat in a quart of fresh and whole milk for one hour. Stir in a tablespoon of melted butter and one teaspoon of vanilla. Beat in three whole eggs. Turn this mixture in a pudding dish and bake until it sets.

Salad: 2 tablespoons each of chopped onion, green pepper and parsley mixed with 1 1-2 cooked tomatoes, 1 cup of cooked rice, 2 hard, boiled eggs, 2 tablespoons of chopped veal, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon butter, 6 tablespoons grated cheese.

Mix chopped onion, green pepper and parsley altogether, then add tomato and rice mixed together. Sprinkle the chopped veal over the top, salt and peppered, melt butter pour over that, cut egg in slices and make a mould on top with yolks in white ring and serve with mayonnaise.

Musician's Salad. (Quartette of C's) 1 c—celery, 1 c—chicken, 1 c—carrots, 1-2 c—cheese.

Chop celery, carrot, and chicken, marinate with mayonnaise dressing. Arrange on lettuce leaves in mounds and sprinkle top with grated cheese and chopped nuts. Serve with watercress or parsley. Resides lettuce it is well to use pimento cheese if you don't have the nuts.

Triple O. Salad: 4 oranges, 1 onion, 10 olives.

Peel and slice oranges, slice onion, mix with mayonnaise, chop olives, sprinkle them over the onions and orange. Serve on lettuce leaf with mayonnaise on the top. This will serve eight people.

Quartet C. Salad: 1 cup chopped celery, 1 cup chopped chicken, 1 cup diced carots, 1 cup apples, 1 cup chopped nuts.

Cut apples in very thin slices and arrange on lettuce leaf. Mix celery chicken together with dressing, place on lettuce leaf sprinkle top with chopped carrots and nuts, cover with mayonnaise and on the mayonnaise sprinkle cheese.

BUMBLE BEE'S PARTY BIG SUCCESS.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: It has been quite a while since I wrote, so thought it would please you all to hear from me. I am getting along fine. It bothers me a little to see to write and also read but I am trying hard to get around and I think I have done pretty well. I went to the picnic up at Bumble Bee's and had a fine time. So many there and we were all so happy. I think it was the first club picnic I ever went to. Of course I have been on Sunday school picnics but that was a great many years ago. Well, I got home all safe and sound, and hope I shall be able to go to another one. I tell you the Social Corner is the place for a good time. Everyone was good and kind to me. I did not go around much, I was afraid I would fall, but I sat out under the tree and saw the children ride on the pony and I enjoyed the beautiful breeze. I think there were about 80 present. Well, I think you will get tired reading this. The one that is writing is tired all ready. Hoping all the Sisters are well and happy and wishing succes to the Corner, I am as ever,

CATNIP.

FINE TIME AT MAPLE LEAF'S PARTY

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: What lovely cool weather we are having and mother and I are having a wonderful time alone, as she at Camp Woodstock for the summer and my good man is working at Sound View for a month.

Whirlwind and I attended Maple Leaf's birthday party at her home last Saturday and I am sure all the sisters who were there will agree with we when I say we had a very fine time. We visited out under the trees, roamed around at will, had music, and a fine lunch, furnished by the hostess. My! how she must have worked for we had chicken and egg sandwiches, beans, salad, macroni and cheese, soft drinks and pie. Later before we came home we had cake and punch. Maple Leaf had some very pretty gifts.

Twice Twenty: Cheer up if all goes well Whirlwind and I are coming to see you Thursday.

Mable Leaf. Many thanks from Whirlwind. Mr. Whirlwind and myself for the lovely day we spent with you Saturday. Hope to do so again.

Whirlwind and I are both sorry we couldn't go to Bumble Bees' picnic but I spent that day with my son at Camp Woodstock. I had not seen him since June. Then Thursday morning at 6 o'clock we started for Twice Twenty's. We can not take them all in for we have so far to drive.

Now I wish to thank the editor for my Social Corner button and ask his forgiveness for not doing so long ago. Ironing is waiting to be done so will run along now. Yours for the Corner.

A DAY IN THE CITY

Dear Social Corner Friends: I am going to tell you just how gay I am getting to be. I was guest of honor at a dinner given at South Portland the past week, Tuesday morning we left here, Mrs. Foley and her sister, Mrs. Jackman for Portland. As their hubbies work in town and at teaters, we had to go early for me, but a reasonable time for them, for we people in the country and especially at Lakeside cannot get use to the daylight saving time.

Arriving in town we went to rMs Foley's home on eastern promenade where we rested and I took in the beautiful scenery, for she lives on a hill (very much like Clay avenue, in Norwich use to be) overlooking Back Bay, Boxes boulevard, Tukey's bridge, Burnum and Morril's canning factories and the city of Portland. I love scenery and I just feasted on the beautiful. After awhile we were moving up town. It was very, very warm, while we had left it cool and comfortable here at Dry Mills. We took a car for South Portland over the $1,000,000 bridge, a great work of art. It sure was a perfect day and we arrived at our destination in due time for the dinner that had been so carefully prepared in my honor.

Never did a person enjoy anything as I did that. It was a merry crowd and Mrs. Harrigan did not spare time nor strength, let alone expense to feed the hungry crowd. The sun shone and birds sang until about 1:30 when a black cloud loomed up over the harbor and soon thunder rolled, and lightning flashed and talk about rain! It fell in sheets, and soon the streets were turned into brooks.

It had not stopped raining when we were obliged to go back into town to do some shopping. But believe me I never did care to be out in the rain so our visiting in stores was only calls and short ones at that.

I being the guest of the party, I did not care much whether I went shopping. I only sized up the bargains and really I do not see but what one can buy just as reasonably in Portland as to send away for what they wear.

My son always bought his wearing apparel in Portland when he was a commercial traveler, but now he shops in Boston as he lives in Massachusetts. Well after looking over the pretty things that tempts the eye, and pocketbook, too, for that matter, the ladies thought it time for supper for we were to be in town until after the theater. So we went to the self service lunch room. I was not even to suggest what I wanted to eat, for Mrs. Foley was chaperone of the party and a royal one, I'll say. I did not see how I could be hungry or even able to eat much, if any. But when my tray was brought to me, I will say it easy so you won't get shocked, there was crab meat salad, biscuit and butter, coffee, water, apple pie and cream and watermellon. Say, the first taste of salad did the whole job. I was hungry as a bear and I thought, here's where indigestion comes in, but not for me. Miss Mildred Jackman had joined the party and it sure was some jolly crowd. After we had finished our supper we then went to the Empire theater where they were showing the Ten Commandments. Ever see it girls? Well you ought to. A person could read the book of Exodus, but never could realize everything and such brutality as was carried on in those days. A most wonderful picture and a work of art. I wish you could all see it. Watched the picture with great interest. Mr. Jackman works at that playhouse. Then from there we went to the Strand where we were guests of Mr. Foley to see a dandy picture and listened to some very good singing. The Charmer was the picture featuring Pola Negri Welcome Home was good. The Dublin Duo sang duets. It was midnight when we were ready to come home, for I was taken behind the scenery and Mr. Foley operated the different lights which I surely appreciated.

There was two cars coming home, Mr. and Mrs. Foley and I were in the leading car. We sang most all the way home. The end of a perfect day with such kind friends.

I wish I could read you the nice story of the play that was in the paper about a most beautiful picture. My friends are always doing something for me and I fully appreciate all the favors showered upon me. There are ever so many electrical showers and much wind, which is doing no end of damage all around us.

I am delighted to know my friends enjoy my stories and I have some more very interesting ones.

O. H. O. has my sympathy. Trust she got my letter.

Calla Lily: Many thanks. Kindness never to be forgotten. We have not had any hot weather here at Lakeside. Cool and nice this morning the tenth. Blueberries are ripening and have to make a pie.

Trust this story won't get into waste basket, but I did want to see the Social Corner page full once more.

Loving sympathy for those in sorrow and best wishes for all the rest.

BALSAM FIR.

Dry Mills, Maine.

GREETINGS FROM AUNT JERUSHA

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters, One and All both Great and Small: Just thought I must send a line so as to keep my name in good standing. First I wish to thank Violet for my nice pad paper. This is the first I've used of it.

Aries: I received your card and I

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

The burning question before Norwich voters a half century ago was the introduction of water into Greeneville. After a vote had been taken to introduce water a special meeting had to be called to reconsider. What took place at this meeting could not be foretold, this week but it is evident that the meeting would be one filled with "fireworks" as many Greeneville people were against the water proposition for any use whatsoever.

Items of 1875 as taken in part from the Norwich Bulletin of that year are as follows:

Monday July 12, 1875—Every effort is being made to stop people from bathing in the Thames near the Laurel hill shore. Before Laurel Hill was annexed to the city there was little chance of stopping people from swimming there and naked bathing was in vogue for those who cared little about people living nearby. A number of arrests are expected to follow if this practice is continued.

The common council committee on public amusements, to whom was referred the petition of Daniel Lee and others for a bath house to be established in the Thames, will not report in favor of an expenditure for that purpose.

There is considerable talk of sailing races on the Thames. There are enough said boats owned by local people to make this type of racing most interesting and it is believed that several races will be run off during the summer.

A blast at the Laurel Hill tunnel yesterday, threw a stone weighing 50 pounds onto the roof of the railroad bridge over the Shetucket.

A petition has been in circulation in Preston, asking that it be annexed to the city.

Tuesday, July 13, 1875 — A brass sword clasp was found not long ago by J. L. Denison while evacuations were being made for the shipyard of John Forsyth on the east side of the Mystic river in Groton. On it is represented the Colonial coat-of-arms of the state of South Carolina and was evidently lost while the officer was marching to or from the defense of Boston. Mr. Denison wrote to Capt. Thomas Y. Simons, President Washington Light Infantry, Charlestown, S. C., and offered the clasp to the company. The clasp was accepted with thanks.

A Norwich man owns an almanac for A. D. 1737, by Nathaniel Ames, published in Boston, New England, in the tenth year of the reign of our most gracious Sovereign King George II, printed by John Draper for the booksellers. At the end of the calendar the author describes the appearance of the other heavenly bodies to the inhabitants of each planet, by turns commencing with Mercury and ending with Saturn, it being the farthest then discovered as having five moons and one luminous ring.

A city meeting is to be called by the mayor to consider the matter of rescinding the resolution recently adopted authorizing the introduction of city water into Greeneville.

The New London Northern railroad now takes passengers via Palmer to Chicago for $22.50 a reduction of $3 via New York.

Wednesday, July 14, 1875—Conditions of local banks may be judged from the following statements; Shetucket National, resources $237,182.87; Norwich National bank, resources $629,997.90; First National bank, resources, $1,253,217.95.

In the senate yesterday, a bill was passed authorizing the winding up and disposing of the effects of the Greeneville Fire Association. Thomas A. Perkins, treasurer; William P. Potter, jr., secretary and Paul R. Greene, one of the Fire Police committee of the association to sell the real estate of the association and dispose of any overplus as a majority of members shall decide. The association was incorporated in 1842.

The postoffice now has a supply of old style postcards. The new five cent stamps for use on letters to England, Germany and other foreign countries have also arrived.

The Norwich Croquet club desires to announce to the world that they still hold the champion ball and mallet unchallenged.

Capt. S. T. C. Merwin and George P. Ward brought home 27 wood cock Monday, the largest bag reported around these parts in many years.

Thursday, July 15, 1875—The Norwich & Worcester railroad is now selling tickets to Oak Bluffs for $6 the round trip and to Nantucket and return, via steamer from the Vineyard, for $7.25.

The little steamer Endeavor will be removed from the lake at Webster and will run about Norwich during the rest of the summer.

The Jewett City Savings bank at its annual meeting reported assets of $65,-410.10, nearly two thirds of which is invested in real estate.

In the general assembly yesterday the sum of $2,000 was appropriated to contest the New York boundary question.

The house voted to indefinitely postpone the constitutional amendment increasing the senate to 45 members. The amendment was passed by the senate by a two thirds vote.

Friday, July 16, 1875—Interesting history of Ames almanac has been furnished the Bulletin. The writer says that Ames commenced almanac making in 1725 and they were printed in Boston until 1765, when they were reprinted and sold in New London by Timothy Green and Samuel Green in New Haven. In 1769 they bore the imprint of T. Green in New London alone. In 1771 Edmund Freebetter published his first almanac printed and sold by T. Green, New London and two years later the first number of the since widely known Daboll's Almanac made its appearance under the title, The Connecticut Almanack for the Year of the Christian Era 1773, in the Thirteenth Year of the Reign of King George III. By Nathan Daboll, Philomath. This almanac was also published by T. Green and ran with Freebetter's until 1791, when the latter disappeared and the New England Almanac and Farmer's Guide made its appearance. A Norwich man has an Ames almanac dated 1736, one year older than the one reported previously.

St. Swithin's day was clear in Norwich so we may be sure of clear weather for a month at least.

The first locally raised tomatoes have made their appearance, being raised by a Norwich Town amateur.

Blueberries and huckleberries are in the market and the price is low.

Saturday, July 17, 1875—An excursion to Shelter Island will be made next Wednesday, on the City of Lawrences, under the auspices of Sachem street, East Main street, and Greeneville Methodist Episcopal churches.

There will be two days trotting, for premiums aggregating $600, at the Norwich Trotting park, August 4th and 5th, under the management of Isaac Sanderson, lessee of the grounds.

St. Swithin's day received a jolting yesterday when it rained, breaking the expected dry spell of forty days, before the spell was a dozen hours old. However the heavy rain was of much benefit to the country.

Capt. Prentis of New London won a great personal victory in the house when he succeeded in reversing the vote which had thrown down the petition to restore old rates for the New London-Groton Ferry. The senate will probably take similar action and New London need lose money no longer.

A man in the state prison, freed yesterday by the general assembly, died at the exact time of the final vote.

A Greeneville property owner takes a rap at the city and the proposed Greeneville water introduction and the Bog Meadow Charity. Claiming the city debt to be $600,000 or more he claims the load began with the new reservoir and has been increasing, also suffering from the attack of the court house. He also claims that over two thirds of the Greeneville people would not use water for culinary purposes and that three fourths of them would not be for it for fire protection.

SOCIAL CORNER

hope the ships are doing good. The ivy geranium is some slow I think to root and start. Now if it does well and blooms let me know what color it is and when my others bloom will send you a slip of each. I have three colors, red double and white double and the pink. I think the pink is the color I sent you and that is partly double.

Well as for turkey raising I have not been very successful so far as I had 52 hatch out and only have 25 left. My first 19 got to be 2 1-2 pound and 5 of them have gone in one week. I suppose they had black head. We have one of the turkeys' setting on 15 eggs but I have lost faith in raising any. Now I will send in the address for the Magic Hoodoo Paper, for ants. It is John Stumpf's Sons, Ph. Chemists, Gretna, La., and enclose 25 cents in stamps. One of my neighbors got some. It comes in a sheet with directions inside.

Here is what a person told me. Take equal parts of sugar and 20 mule team borax, mix good and put round in rings and along the door sills and window sills and she says they don't go over it.

Violet: I thank you for sending the picture. It is nice of both but especially of Tipsy dog. Sorry your others of the turkeys did not come out good. Now, Mrs. B. our new friend we have been wondering if we met you on the right way to that house. It keeps dwelling in my mind and the more I or we thought of it we came to the conclusion that the house or place you wanted was on beyond where we said at the foot of the hill you spoke of. Now I do hope we meet again and hope you had good luck in finding the place. It was not a very pleasant day for the Versailles meeting the 9th. How I'd liked to have been there but I don't seem to get any where lately.

Aunt Sarah: See you have a new grandchild. Some time since we met.

How is Peggie Anne and how are you. Remember Me? I shall always remember the day at your lovely home the time the Social Corner met in honor of those birthdays when I met Chips with her whole bunch of yellow bow on. Now guess I've said enough for tonight so will stop and let some one else have some space. With best wishes to the Social Corner and editor. As ever and always.

AUNT JERUSHA.

THE NEW GARDNER LAKE ROAD

Dear Editor and Social Corner Friends: Just a few lines to tell you about my auto ride over the new state highway leading out to Gardner lake.

The first point of interest to which my attention was called was a very solid looking concrete bridge that replaced the old wooden one familiarly known as the Eupice Leffingwell bridge. Going up the well graded hill and when I reached its top, I looked to my left and saw the large maple tree, standing for many years as a landmark gone and in place thereof a very neat up-to-date railing in front of Sister Wild Flower's house. Then, on glancing across the highway, I saw mail boxes where once stood the blacksmith shop, owned and conducted by the late Mr. Geer whom, as we used to pass, we would see most always near the door, with a wave of his hand, a cherry smile and, if he was not busy, a pleasant word to greet you. Gone are the landmarks and him too, but not forgotten. Then, looking ahead we came quickly to Geer's flat, or the mud hole so called by reason of the depth of the mud in springtime; your wagon wheels would almost go down to China, but now a good smooth hard road and no fears of China. On leaving the route of the old road at the 5 mile stone, we suddenly came to the new cut up and around the hillside, cutting its way along and leaving the old road many feet below. As I looked out of the car I could not make out the old highway that I had, so many times, ridden over; for it looks more like a cart path now, comparatively speaking. A little filling in there and some straightening here and we glided swiftly over Holton Sweeting hill. But only soon to come to where once was that dangerous S in the road. This, too, was gone, and a good straight stretch of road with an unobstructed view for nearly a mile.

O! such a change. In coming to the "vineyard" so-called, for many grapes years ago, grew along the road side; I here, too, observed a great improvement. Passing on my next point of observation was the reformation, so—to speak at Maynard's corner. Had I not seen the house I would not have known where I was or at what I was looking. The new road, the cut in front of the Maynard house and the intersecting new Montville highway, made me marvel at what time and money will do. The Gardner Lake Methodist church where I attended services many years ago, as we passed, brought to mind some of its early preachers, Elders Pippitt, Bentley and others.

One of the oldest landmarks at Gardner lake, was the Franklin house, kept by Mrs. Franklin for many years and who conducted a store there. Later in life as she was not able to carry on the increasing business successfully, she sold out to William Hall who carried in the business in a very successful way. Looking into the future, he saw an ideal summer resort at the Lake. So he at once began improvements in building up, until his health gave out and was forced on that account to sell.

But the work was taken up by other hands and carried on; so that along this beautiful sheet of water (60 years ago called Gardner's Pond) today it is thickly dotted with camps and cottages, making the ideal resort and fulfilling the prediction made by Mr. Hall. Living at the lake as I did for 26 years, I rode over this road in summer heat and winter cold and have seen it at its best and at its worst, but the mud in springtime was the worst of all.

In conclusion I will say with the onward step of time, the turnpike I had occasion to pass over a few days since, stands today for the pleasure and appreciation of the public that will ride over it in the many years to come. But enough at this time as I am afraid my few lines have lengthened into many I will close.

GUSTA.

Asking Mr. Editor if I may have a Social Corner pin and thanking you in advance with success to the Corner.

HARTFORD GIRL'S CONFESSION LED TO COUNTERFEITERS

A 17-year-old Hartford girl, detained there two weeks ago when she attempted to pass a $10 counterfeit bill at the store of G. Fox and company, incorporated, gave information in her confession that helped to lead to the apprehension in Brooklyn, N. Y., of eight alleged counterfeiters, believed to be manufacturers and wholesalers of the fake money.

Seventy-two men and girls previously arrested in the drive on the counterfeiters are said to be mostly retailers.

The ring which New York secret service agents believed now they have broken up, is said to have been one of the most extensive for the circulation of counterfeit money ever operated in the United States.

The Hartford girl is said to be innocent, and has been released by the federal authorities, although she is still under investigation by James Callaghan, of Providence, head of the United States secret service in this division. She told the authorities that the $10 by which she was caught was part of $200 in bills which she stole from a bundle of money in the possession of mysterious strangers, to whose quarters she had access. In her story she gave the name of a counterfeiter known as an old offender.

However, Joseph A. Palma, divisional chief of the secret service in New York, declared that he personally has made an investigation of the person named by the Hartford girl, and believes him innocent in this case. It is Palma's theory that the girl is shielding the real owner of the bundle of money from which she says she stole the $200. He also believes that, although eighty arrests have been made, the head of the ring is still at large, probably somewhere in Connecticut, he said. The counterfeit money, made in Brooklyn, Palma says, was freely circulated in all states within an easy motor radius of New York. It is said that banks, merchants and individuals in Connecticut have been victimized to the extent of at least $5,000 by a flood of $5, $10 and $20 counterfeit bills.

The Hartford girl's confession was given to United States Attorney John Buckley, Assistant United States Attorney George Cohen, and the Hartford police.

The secret service men under Palma completed the first stage of their work Wednesday, when they surrounded a Brooklyn restaurant and captured eight alleged members of the gang.

In this restaurant, which is believed to have been used as a distributing center, the agents seized $18,000 in spurious bills.

With this seizure, and the arrest of eight men, it was learned that sixty-one other men and eleven girls were under arrest here and elsewhere throughout New York state, Connecticut and New Jersey, suspected of being members of the same counterfeiting ring.

For three months, the gang has been successfully circulating bogus $5, $10 and $20 bills. Growing more daring in recent weeks, they attempted to pass spurious $100 bills, and arrests followed rapidly until Captain Palma and his men had a grip on the headquarters and ring-leaders of the band.

Palma said that while eighty members of the band were in custody, others, including those who actually printed the money, had not been located.

"Probably they will keep right on turning out the 'phoney stuff' up to the last minute, and circulating it, too," the secret service officer said. "These fellows are not scared. Practically all of them are bootleggers. The law means nothing to them. Here's how they work:

"A member of the gang is a bootlegger, traveling around in a small car, delivering liquor anywhere within a day's run of New York. He sells to speak-easies and to other bootleggers, and to these he also sells spurious money.

"It isn't so bad—as appearances go. It would fool almost anyone, except an expert, the stuff this gang turned out. Towards the end their plates began to show signs of wear, but at first the money was an almost perfect imitation of the real stuff."

The prisoners will be closely questioned before they are arraigned, in an effort to learn the location of the plates and presses.

Only one of the recently arersted suspects has been arraigned, Benjamin Gallo, who was held in $20,000 bail.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

Adapted from a story by Frederick Stowers, redolent of the color of Chinatown nd hte impenetrable mystery of the Oriental, Tearing Trough, the first of the big new series starring Richard Talmadge, comes to the Palace theatre on Sunday, where it begins a four day engagement. This is by far the most elaborate Talmadge picture which F. O. B. has turned out, and it indicates that the producers think highly of their athletic stunt star; which is not extraordinary, considering his obvious popularity. Arthur Rosson has directed the picture with a fine sense of drama and comedy, and he has given Talmadge plenty of opportunity to indulge his favorite sport of risking stunts. Kathryn McGuire makes a delightful heroine. The rest of the cast also includes some excellent thespians notably Arthur Rankin and Dave Morris.

Palace Theater

Finding it impossible to place his invention, the Televisionphone, an apparatus which, when perfected, will allow one to see to whom one is talking over the telephone, on the market because commercial wizards declared it impracticable, he allows a woman to come to his financial aid and becomes thereby, a "woman made man."

Up the Ladder, the Universal-Jewel feature coming to the Palace theater Sunday, Virginia Valli's latest starring vehicle, is the story of a "woman-made man," boosted to fame and fortune by crushing the fingers of his self-sacrificing wife in his hurried climb to success. At the zenith of his fame, the husband-inventor forgets his humble origin.

How Miss Valli, as the wife, reclaims her husband, played by Forrest Stanley, from the primrose path of folly, this is revealed through a series of dramatic incidents among which may be numbered the Televisionphone in action, a beautiful dance interpretation of an Oriental dream by Olive Ann Alcorn, noted ballet danseuse and a tense dramatic denunciation of the other woman, played by Margaret Livingston, Miss Valli.

Up the Ladder, is the adaptation of Owen Davis' smashing stage play of the same name and is directed by Edward Sloman.

Broadway Theater

Old Home Week, the new Paramount picture, which opens Sunday at the Broadway theater offers the rare combination of an exceptionally interesting story and a brilliant star.

It was written by George Ade, famous American humorist and serves as a starring vehicle for that personable and popular screen idol, Tommy Meighan. Tom Geraghty, one of the best known scenario writers in the business, wrote the film adaptation, and Victor Heerman performed the directorial honors.

Meighan has a particularly sympathetic part in this picture—that of a likeable young chap who fails to make a success in New York and returns to his home town. The fun begins when the local citizens get the mistaken impression that he is the president of a big oil company of New York. For a time Tom is a veritable hero, but his triumph is short-lived. Even "the only girl" turns against him when he is publicly exposed.

Wholesome, humorous and human, Old Home Week is the type of photoplay that provides ideal entertainment. Lila Lee, Larry Wheat, Charles Dow Clark, Max Figman and Charles Sellon are among the prominent players who appear in support of Mr. Meighan.

The comedy feature is entitled, Oh, Bridgett and a new Kinograms makes up the short subjects on this fine program.

There will be a special augumented orchestra Sunday night which gives this program a perfect musical setting. Don't fail to be there Sunday.

Breed Theater

No star has made such steady progress on the screen as Richard Barthelmess, who comes to the Breed theater on Sunday in his newest production, Soul Fire, adapted from Martin Brown's drama, Great Music.

As a star, Barthelmess has been shrewd enough to realize that he should always try something new. No two roles, ever played by this young star have been alike. He has no intention, as he himself says, of getting into a screen rut. Each new role must be different from the last.

Before he became a star, Barthelmess had a number of hits to his credit. He had scored as the young Oriental dreamer of Broken Blossoms and as the vigorous young New England hero of Way Down East. He scored again in his first stellar role, the mountain boy of Tol'able David. His hits since have been widely varied; the young soldier of Sonny, the sailor lad of Fury, the adventurous young American enmeshed in Cuban adventure in The Bright Shawl, the roystering swashbuckler of The Fighting Blade, the boy broken on the wheel of war in The Enchanted Cottage, the dashing West Pointer in Classmates, and the serio-comic young husband of New Toys.

Soul Fire provides a brand new type of part, a young musical genius seeking to find himself. First of all, he is distinctly an American, although his search to express himself carries him from Italy to Paris, from Port Said to the South seas.

The role of Eric Fane, the young composer of Soul Fire, has been pronounced by critics to be Barthelmess' best acting role thus far. In it he strikes new heights of emotional force, wistful pathos and histrionic vigor. It is easily the big dramatic event of the screen year.

The contract for laying an eight inch water main from the military highway, through Fairview avenue to the Odd Fellows' home, Fairview, has been awarded to Fred L. Kiess of Groton. There were five bids entered, that of Mr. Riess being the lowest.

MIMIC WARFARE BY SOLDIERS AT NIANTIC

The 169th regiment, less the Second battalion, left Camp Trumbull at Niantic Thursday afternoon, under command of Colonel Hunter in the final campaign to drive out the "enemy" force of one battalion which was "somewhere east of the Niantic river." The regiment marched out with full equipment prepared to bivouac in the field for the night. The regiment left under "sealed orders," its mission vaguely known and the men without knowledge of the location for bivouac. The Second battalion, under command of Major Scarborough, also slipped out of camp during the afternoon, and as a detachment of an enemy's force estimated at a regiment or larger, is somewhere east of Niantic preparing a strong position for defense.

According to the orders "war" was declared at 6 o'clock in the afternoon, and from then until 10 o'clock the advance guards and patrol of the regiment were endeavoring to locate the enemy. An armistice has been agreed upon from 10 p. m. to 5 a. m. when the battle will be resumed. It is expected that soon after "war" is resumed that the attacking regiment will come into contact with the enemy's detachment entrenched in strong positions, the attack and in fact all maneuvers beginning Thursday afternoon and until the "war" is declared over, will be carried on in just the way it would be done in the case of a real fight. Intelligence and communication sections will keep patrols, outposts and cossack posts in touch with the regiment, reporting every information gained of the opposing force. Every attempt will be made by the regiment to locate the battalion on the defense, and Major Scarborough's men will bend every effort to find out from which quarter the attack is coming. Every officer and men is ready for the "war" and each one is prepared to act as he would in a real conflict.

Upon the return from the field today (Friday) polishing shoes and puttees, cleaning rifles and equipment will be the task of the moment, for at 4.30 p. m., or possibly 4 o'clock, the entire regiment will form on the parade ground for the final regimental review and parade of the year. It is expected that many visitors will be at camp to see the impressive sight, and an invitation to be present is extended to the public. Saturday morning will come the last inspection and Sunday the boys entrain for home, leaving ten a up and the camp ready for the 192d infantry coming in from New Haven and that vicinity a few hours later. The Friday review will be given for the regular army officers assigned to the Connecticut National Guard as instructors.

LAST CIVIL WAR NUN NURSE DIES IN NEW YORK, AT 86

Civil war veterans in eastern Connecticut will read with interest the notice from a New York paper that Sister Mary Ignatius Grant, 86, senior member of the community of the Sisters of Mercy, and the last survivor of the heroic band of nuns who went from the old Houston Street Convent, New York, to the military hospital at Beaufort, North Carolina, to devote themselves to the care of the sick and wounded soldiers in the Civil War, died there Sunday at the Convent of Mercy. She was in her ninety-first year, and sixty-nine years of her life had been devoted to religion.

June 18, 1857, Sister Ignatius entered St. Catherine's Convent of Mercy, in Houston street. Born in Ireland of Scotch-Irish parentage, she inherited the sterling characteristics and courage of those sturdy races.

Probably the most eventful period in the long and active life of Sister Ignatius was the time she spent at Beaufort, N. C., nursing to health both the Blue and the Gray soldiers who fought in the Civil War. She distinguished herself, it is said, by her untiring attention to the sufferers without questioning their allegiance.

With many disappointments and obstacles that would have discouraged a less zealous nature, she established the first home for business girls in the city of New York. The beginning was humble, in a rented house at 69th street and Lexington avenue, but the venture soon called for more spacious accommodations, and was transferred to the now flourishing Regina Angelorum, at 112 East 106th street. Later on, homes for business girls were opened in the uptown district, Devin-Claire, at West 120th street, and Susan-Devin residence, at 199th street, and Grand Concourse, and St. Joseph's residence, 47 East 81st street, the fourth and last of these homes, the founding of which she lived to witness were among those which were opened under the guidance of Sister Mary Ignatius.

For more than five years, she had been an invalid, and unable to take active interest in the work of the community.

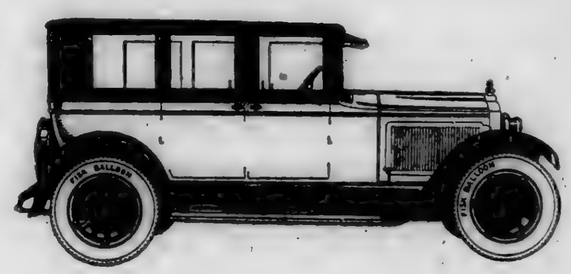
WILLYS-OVERLAND · FINE · MOTOR · CARS



If You Knew What Every Willys-Knight Owner Knows, You'd be driving a Willys-Knight Car

Up to June 30, this year, there were 200,000 Willys-Knight cars in active service.

And on that day and date, those owners were experiencing a degree of car-satisfaction the average owner wouldn't believe could exist in any motor car.

30,000, 40,000, 50,000 miles—not a day out of active commission, not a dollar spent for engine repairs . . . Not an uncommon experience among Willys-Knight owners . . . No carbon troubles. No valves to grind.

The patented Willys-Knight engine does away with both . . .

To the exceptional engine efficiency of the Willys-Knight is added another exclusive advantage—absolute lack of vibration, due to the Lanchester Balancer. The Willys-Knight is the only automobile in the United States equipped with this device . . .

These things the Willys-Knight owner knows, and, knowing, counts on keeping his Willys-Knight two and three times as long as any other car.

MARKET WAS BUOYANT.

NEW YORK, July 17.—(A. P.)—Stock prices continued their movement to higher ground today, despite an unusually heavy volume of week end profit taking. New leaders were brought forward, particularly in the mail order and motor groups in an apparent effort to stimulate public interest, which commission houses report has been increasing steadily in the last few days.

Chief financial interest centered in the announcement that a $75,000,000 Australian government 5 per cent. loan would be floated next week at a price slightly below par.

In the stock market, standard industrials again displayed a strong undertone. U. S. Steel common continued to discount the expected improvement in the steel industry this fall by crossing 119 to the highest price since last spring. American Can was pushed above 204 to the highest price in its history. Baldwin fell back 3-4 to 114 3-4 after having sold as high as 116 3-8.

Rails also presented several points of outstanding strength. Southern Railway was bid up to a new record price at 101 1-2 and then slipped back to 100 1-8, where it was practically unchanged on the day. Frisco common, which has been under accumulation on speculative expectations of an increase in the dividend before the end of the year, touched a new top at 85 7-8, but failed to maintain all its gain.

Oils changed hands in large blocks at fractionally higher prices in the early trading, but the buying movement soon petered out and several of the popular issues actually closed lower on the day.

In all about two dozen issues smashed their previous 1925 high records. Mail order issues bounded upward in reflection of unusually heavy earnings. Sears Roebuck closing four points higher at 117 and Montgomery Ward showing a net gain of 3 1-4 at 81 7-8, both new maximum quotations.

Among the many other stocks to better their previous year's highs were American Tobacco, Philip Morris, International Business Machine, Frank G. Shattuck, Sloss Sheffield Steel, Foundation Company, American Ice, American Agricultural Chemical preferred and Havana Electric.

Sugars were heavy. Punta Alegre and Cuban Dominican preferred sinking to new low levels for the year.

Call money held steady at 3 3-4 per cent. all day, despite a rather heavy withdrawal of currency from the federal reserve bank for week end purposes. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Heavy buying of Danish kroner in apparent anticipation of the early flotation of a large Danish loan in this market, sent the demand rate up about 30 points to around 21.10 cents, the highest since 1922. Demand sterling held firm around $4.85 3-4, French and Belgian francs were slightly easier around 4.70 and 3.70 cents respectively.

TAFTVILLE

In rerering to Denny Murphy's injury, a Los Angeles paper has this to say about the local boy who plays with the Vernon (Cal) Tigers. "It is a known fact that the Striped Cats are not flooded with catchers, with Denny Murphy on the bench. Murphy's foot is mending rapidly, and Manager Bill Essick said today that he will be in the game before long. He will be able to throw a few shortly. The star catcher of the Bengals is already walking without the aid of a cane. Hannah has not been doing good this and several times it is a known fact he has displeased his boss. In former years Hannah and Murphy have formed the best backstopping department in the loop. Perhaps Hannah will regain form and again work with Murphy, but many doubt it."

Aloysius Monk, who has been spending several weeks in the village has returned to his home in Woonsocket, R. I.

Miss Malvina Goyette of 33 North A street has moved to Canada, where she will make her future home.

Fred Kershaw of the Ponemah house was a visitor in Jewett City on Thursday.

Mrs. Philias Ducharme and her daughter, Miss Georgianna Fregeau of Providence street are spending several weeks' vacation with relatives in Waterloo, P. Q., Canada.

Theodore Maynard of Norwich was a visitor at the home of friends in the village Friday.

Inspection Visit at Norwich Jail.

Secretary Charles P. Kellogg of the department of public welfare, and Mrs. Martha H. Mitchell, a member of the commission, recently inspected institutions in New London county and the Mansfield State Training school. They found 29 inmates in the Norwich jail and 26 in the jail at New London. The population of the two jails was much less than it was when the jails were last visited in February.

SOUTHBRIDGE MAN DIES FROM INJURIES AT BISHOP'S CROSSING

William Nadeau, 19, of East Main street, Southbridge, Mass., a chauffeur, was fatally injured and Henry L'Heureux, 65, of 36 Worcester street, Southbridge, in whose coupe the two men were riding, received probable fatal injuries when the automobile was struck, Friday morning, by a southbound passenger train on the Norwich & Worcester branch of the New Haven railroad.

Nadeau died at the Backus hospital in this city at 5:30 in the afternoon and L'Heureux remains unconscious and in a critical condition at the hospital.

Which man was driving the automobile is not known, but it was proceeding towards this city and as it approached the crossing where there are two tracks, the view of the passenger train on the main line was obstructed by a long freight train which was standing on the switch track. The freight had been "split," so that half of the train stood at either side of the crossing, leaving a gap for traffic on the road to pass through. So far as known, no flag man had been put on by the freight crew to give warning at the crossing.

The Southbridge men drove through the gap and had almost cleared the main line when the passenger train caught the right rear end of their machine and hurled it twenty feet away into the traffic guard at this point in the middle of the road.

The passenger train conductor was Henry Harman, of Worcester, and the engineer was Jim Proctor, formerly of Jewett City. He stopped in a train length and there is every evidence given by passengers and people nearby that he had sounded his whistle a good quarter of a mile from the crossing and that the steam driven bell was in operation. But the men in the coupe apparently failed to hear either.

The force of the collision was terrific, bowling the automobile into the traffic guard fence and demolishing posts and railing of which it is constructed. Nadeau was thrown 25 feet up against a stone wall that runs beside the railroad track and L'Heureux was buried in the wreckage of the traffic guard fence. The automobile, a National coupe, was completely demolished.

Nadeau had both legs broken, skull fractured and numerous body cuts and bruises. L'Heureux had ribs fractured over his heart with possible puncture of the lungs and cuts and bruises. The men were picked up from the wreckage and placed in the baggage car upon improvised cots. Meanwhile, from a nearby farm house, Dr. J. H. McLaughlin, of Jewett City, was notified and the train proceeded to the Jewett City station, where the doctor was in waiting and accompanied the injured men to this city, where the Backus hospital ambulance hurried them to the hospital.

At the hospital the injured men were attended by Dr. J. J. Donohue and Dr. J. W. Callahan.

Telegraphic messages were sent to Southbridge, in response to which Mrs. L'Heureux arrived here about 8 o'clock Friday evening by automobile, accompanied by her brother, R. Peloquin, and D. Gagnon, both of Southbridge. They went at once to the hospital.

According to information received from them, the two men had left Southbridge, Friday morning about 9 o'clock, on a short vacation trip, intending to be gone about two days, with Bridgeport as a possible destination. Nadeau was single, but L'Heureux, who is a knife worker, is married and has five children.

The body of Nadeau was taken in charge by Undertakers Cummings & Ring. Relatives of the young man came here Friday night and gave directions for sending it to Southbridge for burial.

The highway traffic guard into which the automobile was hurled was demolished. Two of the wooden posts were broken short off, the concrete base which supported the steel mast for the traffic sign was split and the rails were smashed and hurled in all directions.

The wrecked machine was hauled off the road into a lot near the crossing.

JUDGE BROWN DENIES BRISTOL MAN'S DIVORCE

Judge Allyn L. Bown in the superior court has dismissed the divorce complaint of 21-years-old Richard Atkins of Bristol against Nellie Doran Atkins who is night telephone operator in Bristol.

Mrs. Atkins is nine years older than her husband and the case was tried on the ground of fraudulent marriage contract, Atkin claiming that his wife deceived him as to her age and as to her character.

The parties were married February 16, 1924, when Atkins was a student at a military school at Manlinus, N. Y., and Nellie Doran was a waitress there. The marriage resulted in Atkins being expelled and eventually they came to Bristol where Atkins's parents live, but their married life together was very short and the young Mrs. Atkins lays the separation to her husband's mother. Nellie went home to Baldwinsville, N. Y., for a short time but returned to Bristol where she went to work and also by court proceedings compelled young Atkins to contribute to her support. In his memorandum of decision Judge Brown says he comes to the conclusion that Atkins is not entitled to a divorce and in his memorandum of decision the judge says:

"While such testimony as the plaintiff's, of a marriage solely through sympathy for the defendant, and as the defendant's, improbable explanation of her escapade with Joe Charbonneau, does not convince the court of her thorough veracity of either party, the plaintiff must sustain his burden of establishing the essential allegations of his complaint. This in the light of all the testimony and the circumstances thereby disclosed, he has failed to do.

"This is my conclusion that not only did the defendant not declare to the plaintiff that she was a chaste and good girl but that in the ardent courtship which he was carrying on, he repeatedly said he didn't care about her past, that he had a past himself, that she was a sweet good girl and he liked her and that he urged and besought her to become his wife and to go to Springfield with him.

"Furthermore after the plaintiff claims to have discovered his wife's unchastity two or three days after the marriage, he continued co-habit with her at Manlins, Syracuse, Pittsfield and Bristol and accepted some $40 in cash from her toward his personal and their joint expenses. It was at this juncture, after the couple had been living for nine days in the home of the plaintiff's parents that he announced he was to leave for Cleveland to go to work and she was sent home to her parents. The plaintiff's testimony as to the situation at this juncture is that it was simply a case of we could not get along happily together because of our opposite dispositions, character, etc., no other reason.

"Thus a conviction reached by the plaintiff in the environment of his own home surroundings, and under the parental roof, that his passion and lack of judgment in entering into this hasty marriage had established a status which wouldn't make for his happiness, rather than any claim or conclusion that he had been tricked into it by fraud and misrepresentation of the defendant, apparently led him to part company with his wife in the manner which he did.

"The venture has proven unfortunate, but for the reasons above indicated it is my conclusion that the plaintiff is not entitled to a decree. The petition is dismissed."

WILL PREACH AT BROOKLYN UNITARIAN CHURCH

An appointment made for Rev. Dr. Samuel A. Eliot, president of the American Unitarian association, to preach at the morning service Sunday at Unitarian church in Brooklyn has been cancelled and in his place the preacher will be Albert C. Dieffenbach, editor of the Christian Register, formerly pastor of the Unitarian church in Hartford. Rev. Mr. Dieffenbach will speak upon the theme, Evolution versus a State Church.

The church in Brooklyn, known also by its corporate name of the First Ecclesiastical Society in Brooklyn, was organized in 1731, and, unlike many of the old Congregational churches of Massachusetts, was the only one of the early Connecticut churches to become Unitarian.

Notice of the cancellation of Dr. Eliot's engagement to preach was received by The Bulletin in a telegram from the Unitarian News Service.

RIGGED WAGON GUNS FOR FIRE FIGHTING

Under the direction of Chief Howard L. Stanton of the fire department the old Pope car has been rigged with two wagon guns for heavy fire fighting.

The wagon guns are on oak platforms mounted across the rail of the stream of water can be turned in all directions, either directly up in the air or in any direction to the side, front and rear. When the gun has been set in the desired direction it can be fastened that way and left to deliver a heavy stream of water on the fire.

With the wagon guns, a supply of heavy duty hose is carried and the apparatus will be operated by placing a suction pipe in the river or other water supply through which one of the motor pumpers will draught water to the wagon guns under high pressure. At a recent test made at the steamboat dock at the river, the gun delivered 500 gallons a minute through 1 1-4 and 1 3-8 nozzles.

The old Pope car was bought in 1912, but is in perfect condition, having been stripped and put into perfect order two years ago under the direction of Ernest Myers.

In rigging the wagon guns, Chief Stanton has effected a large saving by using old fittings and connections which the department had instead of buying new which would have cost several hundred dollars.

CONNECTICUT EDITORS WILL MEET AT COLLEGE

Editors from all over the state, accompanied by ladies, will arrive today (Saturday) mostly by autos at Connecticut College for Women at New London, which is to be headquarters for the annual mid-summer gathering of the Connecticut Editorial association. The college has invited the association members to be its guests for luncheon and to use its building for assembly, or its tennis courts for amusement if desired and will thereby gain a good opportunity to show the moulders of public opinion about the state what a fine institution of education for the girls of the state the college is.

Walter S. Garde, proprietor of the Colonial Shoppe, has also extended an invitation to the visiting newspaper party to be his guests at luncheon at 6 p. m. at his beautiful home in Neptune Park.

Few as pleasant places for a summer gathering can be found as the sightly and breezy location of Connecticut college and there is likely to be a large attendance of the newspaper men for this session.

Business is to be kept to a minimum and transacted at the luncheon tables after the luncheon is completed. Then the visitors will be shown the various attractive spots or historical shrines of interest in and about New London and will wind up at Ocean Beach, where some may try the beach's fine bathing facilities. A few of the visitors are expected to remain over night.

COMBAT TRAIN NOTES FROM TOBYHANNA CAMP

A member of the First Combat Train, C. N. G., of this city, sends The Bulletin the following inside notes of events while in camp at Tobyhanna, Penn., from which the boys will return Sunday:

As soon as we arrived at Camp Tobyhanna the large field ranges were put up in a jiffy and at 5:30 a. m. all the boys had their hot coffee which was sure welcomed by the boys in the chilly morning in the mountains of Pennsylvania.

To date (Wednesday) July 15, 1925, the newly appointed Mess Sergeant Leo Cimikoski has more than proven to the boys how a good meal is prepared with the assistant of "Cook" Donohue and his assistant. The boys now, not only come for seconds or thirds at meal times but fourths and fifths, that means more work for the cooks but they are pleased that everybody is pleased and nobody is happier than our new Sergeant Leo Cimikoski.

The rookies are sure getting their initiations. The first to run the gauntlet was a badly named Savage; when he was brought on a wheelbarrow through the streets of Tobyhanna he created no little excitement for the Pennsylvanians, living in that district. The next to go was Izbicki. After a little gentle coaxing he went through more than his former combatant. "Red" Connell, Levi Talbott and ol' friend Hudson had K. P. duty Tuesday and the best job they liked was to give out the grub at meal times. "Red" said he had indigestion but when he ate, it looked as if he didn't see any kind of a square meal for a long time, and then some. When it comes to work our friend "Levi" wouldn't take the place of one man but when a menu which read "Cabbage and Ham," with potatoes, a rice pudding and a fine cup of coffee was set before him he took the place of three men. Hudson was a busy man three hours out of nine, anyway he did his work and did it well.

Goldberg got a haircut while he slept for his initiation, and when he woke up he wanted to know who did it, and as a rule the Combatants tell everything they know. It wasn't that Goldberg was so mad that he wanted to find out who did it but he said whoever did it he wanted to thank them for he was fifty cents in the pocket to the good by not going to a barber.

McCarthy, the bugler, seems to have the least friends because in the morning he always comes out with the "You Gotta Get Up" solo.

Every evening when there is nothing else to do and the beautiful moon coming or going over the hills (we don't know which it is) but, anyway, it certainly is just wonderful, and just at this time, Robarge with Goulomb's ukelele strikes up a tune, especially the popular hit, "I'll see you in my dreams" with the assistance of his three warbiers, Tombari, Peck and Zaremba. When they all join nobody seems to mention Norwich, Connecticut, but always Pennsylvania, and especially Tobyhanna. If these fellows aren't singing all we can hear in the evening are the powerful engines puffing and climbing the mountains here. Burdick, the company clerk, is the man that is always rushed at, for he usually carries mail.

Sgt. Crowley is the referee here for all the boxing and wrestling matches we have here between all companies. Private 1st Class Chabot with his Mexican generals, Glaude and Gladue, leads all the raiding parties here. Sgt. Anderson hurt his foot Saturday hurrying for the meals; his foot is improving rapidly. Corporal Doherty has a squad that does things at his minute's notice. Wonder why.

Privates Kelly, Lewis and Avery are seldom seen around the camp after their day's work in the range. What does that mean? They won't say.

Last Sunday, "Cook" Donohue went to Scranton to Rocky Glen with the rest of the "bunch." He got on a roller coaster once and said that once was once too many times. Privates Byington, Porucznik, Cloutier, Hollingsworth and Guy were at home in Rocky Glen park.

The fifteen days training period is breezing by fast. All the Combat Train men are having a wonderful time. Do you blame them for raving about Pennsylvania? I should say not!

FRENCH WAR ORPHANS GRATEFUL TO TEMPLARS

The grand encampment of Knights Templar of U. S. A., since the close of the World War, has been assisting in the support of 500 fatherless French children and intends to continue this support until they are self-supporting. These children are from every part of France and were selected by Grand Master Leonidas P. Newby, assisted by Ex-Governor and Sir Knight Winfield T. Durbin, who went to France for that purpose. Each child is regarded as a protege of some American Knight Templar, who is spoken of as their benefactor. Regular reports of each of these children are made to the headquarters in Paris, maintained by the grand encampment, of which Madame A. Seligmann-Lui is secretary and in charge. The last semi-annual payment of $9,000 to this fund was made by H. Wales Lines in January. A regular payment for this fund is to be made this present week. His protege is Marie Louise Couteur, whose father was killed in one of the Verdun battles.

The secretary in charge of their Paris office writes:

"Our committee is proud of the great privilege you gave us of being your intermediary, and remains with enthusiastic admiration for the noble spirit of your order which you, dear sir, are illustrating so beautifully.

Yours truly,
J. A. SELIGMANN-LUI
Secretarie Generale."

Mr. Lines' protege writes him as follows:

"Dear Benefactor:

Accept dear benefactor for yourself and wife on the occasion of your sixty-first anniversary of entry into business, my wishes for happiness, for prosperity, and above all, of long life, and that you may be repaid, both of you, for the good you have done. I hope, my dear benefactor, that my letter will find you in good health, also your dear wife. I am well and my sister, my dear mother and my grandparents. I go to school always regularly and my mistress is satisfied with my work. Mamma goes always to service, but at this time she is having an unpleasant time, for it is hot, and on returning from her work she goes to the fields to gether wood for us next winter, for we do not have enough to buy it. She is courageous and has much trouble to raise us properly.

I think with you, it is very hot, but I hope that you do not suffer from this heat, for in the papers one sees some mortality cases in the United States.

I do not see any other great thing to say to you. Accept, dear benefactor, from your protege the best friendship and wishes.

MARIE LOUISE COUTEUR."

Marie's mother adds the following:

"Sir:

I join a word to the letter of my little daughter in thanking you also for the generosity which you have towards her. You can believe, sir, that this money is used for aiding me in holding them together, for you should know that with us the high cost of living is terrible.

Accept still once more my thanks, also that of my loved ones.

MADAME V. COUTEUR.

TENN. EVOLUTION CASE MAY BE CONCLUDED TOMORROW

Sunday Services in the Several Churches in Dayton Were Conducted by Visiting Evangelists—Orator Was Missing For the Large Crowd Gathered on the Court House Lawn—Scientists Are Condensing Their Statements.

DAYTON, Tenn., July 19.—(AP)—In sharp contrast to the turbulence of last Sunday when a week-end recess in the Scopes trial was marked by cancellation of church services, severance of church connections and open air speaking, the court and town today were "at ease" in fact.

A large crowd gathered on the court house lawn and picnicked in front of the combination band stand and speaking platform but it was an audience without an orator.

None of the Dayton pastors occupied his pulpit, services being conducted in several churches by visiting evangelists.

William Jennings Bryan motored to Pikeville, twenty miles "across the mountain," to address a gathering of Tennesseans. Other members of prosecution counsel awaited the word to deliver their speeches to judge and jury. The defense attorneys were reported ready to make their summing up speeches after spending hours in preparation of statements of scientists to be introduced in record to show what the experts would have said had they been permitted to testify.

The task of reducing the statements of the scientists to writing was not completed tonight and stenographers were still working overtime in an effort to have them ready for the record at the opening of court tomorrow afternoon.

Clarence Darrow, the "grandfather" of defense counsel as he has described himself, went to Chattanooga to lecture at a theatre at noon. He was accompanied by all his associates except Arthur Garfield Hays, who remained in Dayton to speed the making of statements.

Tomorrow may prove to be the last full day of court. After the question of the exclusion of scientific testimony has been disposed of, speeches will be made, a total of nine or ten being on the program. It was understood that each side would have four hours for argument. The speeches will probably not be completed tomorrow, but there should be little oratory carried over to Tuesday.

With the judge's charge, the only remaining detail before the case was given to the jury, a verdict should be returned some time Tuesday. Although the defense has admitted that it has no hope of a favorable verdict, constant observers in the court room were not so sure. Only unanimous agreement of the jury can result in a verdict unless attorneys on both sides should agree to accept a majority verdict.

The charge against Scopes is a misdemeanor and not a felony. He cannot be placed in prison in the event of conviction, the statute providing for a fine of not less than $100 and not more than $500.

BRYAN PREACHED ON TENNESSEE EVOLUTION LAW

PIKEVILLE, Tenn., July 19.—(A. P.)—A brief but vigorous defense of the Tennessee anti-evolution law and of the culture of Tennesseeans marked the appearance here today of William Jennings Bryan.

Speaking to several hundred Sequatchie Valley citizens at an open air meeting twenty miles from the scene of the Scopes trial, the fundamentalist chief began his address by expressing indignation "toward those who have aligned you—those who have come from another state to speak of you as bigots."

He expressed the same feeling toward "some of the newspaper men who have spoken of you as yokels."

"I wish that I could have dragged them here and placed them face to face with a humanity they cannot imitate," he declared.

The world is discussing the Scopes case," he said. "It has gone far enough now to uncover a gigantic conspiracy among the atheists and agnostics against the Christian conspiracy.

"The Christian religion is a revealed religion. It is the bible they are attacking, but they have not the honesty to make their attack openly, directing their attempts toward what they say would be a reconciliation of evolution with the bible.

Mr. Bryan was cheered enthusiastically by the audience assembled in the cool, natural ampheatre.

TYPESETTER IS CHARGED WITH ATTEMPT TO BLACKMAIL

NEW YORK, July 19.—(A. P.)—Dolin Siegel, 21-year-old typesetter who was arrested yesterday on a charge of attempting to blackmail Edward W. Browning, millionaire realtor who recently advertised for a girl to adopt, was held in $25,000 bail when arraigned in West Side court today. He is alleged to have sent Browning letters demanding $50,000 and threatened death if he refused.

Although detectives said yesterday that Siegel had admitted the attempted extortion, Joseph Broderick, attorney for the prisoner, said in court that the threatening letters were "a figment of Browning's imagination." Despite the attorney's objections, Siegel's bail was raised by Magistrate MacReady from $5,000 to $25,000 pending a hearing July 21.

Police investors said Siegel told them he wanted the $50,000 so he could elope with a girl, who was not approved by his family. The letters were signed "Leader of a Gang of Fifty." The police said they did not believe there was any "gang."

Detectives arrested Siegel after he accepted from Browning a bag which he thought contained the money.

The alleged blackmail letters were among hundreds which Browning received from all parts of the country after he had advertised for a young girl to be adopted as companion to his adopted daughter, Dorothy Sunshine Browning. The life of Dorothy also was threatened in the alleged blackmail letters, police said.

LOUIS RICHMANN, 20, HELD AFTER BOY'S ACCUSATION

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 19—Louis Richmann, 20, of 147 North Bank St., will be in the police court Monday morning on a most serious charge for he was taken into custody early this morning on a charge of sodomy. If the accused is convicted the penalty provides for a term in state's prison of not more than 30 years.

Shortly before midnight, Sol. Nahass, 27 Church street, stated to the police that his son, Fred, 9, who had been at home throughout the evening, had left the house an hour before, to go to a building and secure ice, at the request of a young man, the identity of whom the elder Nahass did not know. The boy had failed to return home. While the police were looking for the youth the latter returned and when questioned by his parents, as to the cause of his delay, the youth stated that he was taken to the Plant building, a State street business and office block, where Richmann committed the alleged crime.

Nahass and wife lodged complaint with the police against Richmann, for their son had accused the older youth. Patrolman Edward Daniels located Richmann on Douglass street some time later and placed him under arrest. Today, Jacob Hochman, Esther Lubchansky and Harry B. Sloan qualified jointly on Richmann's bond of $1000 for the latter's appearance in the police court.

RIFFS ATTEMPTED TO BREAK SPANISH LINES

MADRID, July 19.—(AP)—Advices received from the Spanish zone in Morocco are to the effect that on July 15 all available men of several of the rebel tribes assembled in the vicinity of Sidi Dauget with two cannon and attempted to break through the Spanish lines and cut off communication with Fondak.

The attack was put down and the rebels are said to have suffered heavy losses. Several of the villages from which the tribesmen were routed were burned by the Spaniards, who also used artillery and machine guns on the fleeing inhabitants.

TWO GUARDSMEN WERE INJURED IN AUTO WRECK

WESTBROOK, Conn., July 19.—(AP)—Two members of Company I, 102nd Infantry, C. N. G., were injured, one seriously, when the small touring car which they were driving to Camp Trumbull at Niantic, was wrecked near here shortly after noon today. They are Edward McClellan, of Ansonia, who is said to be in a serious condition at the Guilford sanatorium, and Albert Plocke, 22, also of Ansonia, who is in the Lawrence and Memorial association hospital at New London with a lacerated lip. The car is registered in McClellan's name. Information obtained from the Guilford hospital gave McClellan's injuries as serious, but did not include their nature. From the New London hospital it was learned that Plocke had been brought there late in the afternoon from the camp.

State police are investigating the accident which is believed to have been the result of defective steering apparatus. A third man in the car is said to have been uninjured. While the majority of the guardsmen from Ansonia left by train at 9 o'clock, a number went by automobile.

SWIMMING RECORD MADE BY MISS AGNES GERAGHTY

HARTFORD, July 19.—(AP)—Clipping eleven seconds off her former national record, Miss Agnes Geraghty of the Women's Swimming association, of New York, created a new national mark for the 300-meter breast stroke swim here today at Capitol pool, covering the distance in 5:21.

Finishing only one-fifth of a second behind Miss Geraghty was Miss Carin Nilsson, national 300-meter medley champion and member of the 1920 Swedish Olympic team and now a member of the Women's Swimming association. The race was a sensational one and was witnessed by 8,000 people. The winner was in doubt until the very last, both sprinting to the line, Miss Geraghty finishing ahead of the former Swedish star by a hair breadth.

Miss Geraghty's time was the fastest yet known for the distance but since the International Swimming association does not recognize the 300-meter swim for a world mark, the American breast stroke champion was forced to be content with breaking her own national record of 5:32 made in June, this year, at Asheville, N. C.

Quarrel of Unions Ties up Building

Plasterers and Cement Finishers Place the Blame on Bricklayer's Union.

NEW YORK, July 19.—(AP)—With the deadlock unbroken between the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers International Union of America and the Operative Plasterers and Cement Finishers International Association, both organizations issued statements today denying blame for the dispute which has tied up building construction in a score of cities.

Edward J. McGivern, president of the Plasterers and Cement Finishers Union, in a statement sent to building contractors and architects throughout the United States, charged the Bricklayers' Union with making "an effort to absorb our organization of over 32,000 members," and with casting aside "every constructive and co-operative consideration." Acting President George H. Thornton of the Bricklayers' organization, accused the other union of "a campaign of piratical encroachment, that began with the invasion of the state of Florida by the operative plasterers and cement finishers international association and has since spread to other sections of the country.

"The situation is still in chaos," said Mr. McGivern, "with the result that the building industry of this country, now in a state of unprecedented prosperity, faces disaster. The policy of the bricklayers is and has been to absorb the plasterers and in doing so to spend all the money necessary, to use every effort even to stagger the building industry of this country in their efforts to do so."

TWO STEAMERS STRANDED ON SHOALS OFF SABLE ISLAND

HALIFAX, N. S., July 19.—A. P.)—Two steamers were stranded on the shoals off Sable Island tonight and after repeated but futile efforts to get their crews ashore, life saving crews, baffled by dense fog and high seas, gave up the attempt for the night.

The French trawler Labrador went aground this morning and sent out urgent calls for assistance. The West Cohas, a freighter of about 4,000 tons rushed to her assistance and went on the rocks herself.

Both ships reported that they were in need of immediate assistance.

A life saving crew despatched to the aid of the Labrador, made three attempts to reach the craft but because of fog and waves could not get within a half mile of her. Another crew sent to the assistance of the West Cohas had no greater success.

Late tonight the life savers were camped on the north east bar awaiting favorable opportunity to make further rescue attempts. It was not believed, however, that there was any possibility of getting the crews from the two stranded vessels before daylight.

Orders were issued to Halifax salvage companies by the local agent of the marine and fisheries and steamers were being prepared to make an attempt to get the distressed craft off the rocks before they were pounded to pieces.

Word was sent to Ottawa advising that the government steamer Lady Laurier now coaling at North Sydney, also be despatched to the rescue.

TWO HAVE RIBS BROKEN IN PLAINFIELD ACCIDENT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PLAINFIELD, July 19—This evening at 7.30 a Nash touring car owned and driven by William Gagan of 15 Bullock street, Putnam, and a Ford touring car driven by Joseph C. Fournier of Goodyear met with an accident on the cement highway a quarter of a mile from Plainfield. The Putnam car, following the other attempted to pass and when abreast the Ford the driver noticed a car coming in the opposite direction. The driver of the Nash, Mr. Gagan, increased the speed of his car but could not make the distance as he cut in ahead of the Ford. The car turned a sharp right turn into the soft dirt of the shoulder of the road. On the turn the Goodyear car hit the rear fender of Gagan's machine and swung over the bank at the right hand side of the road and turned over. The Gagan car swung back across the road to the left and down the bank. The Nash car suffered very little damage but the top and windshield on the Ford were demolished. Mr. Fournier had three ribs broken and Mr. McGovern, riding in the wash, suffered a fractured rib. A woman passenger in the Putnam car was badly bruised and shaken up.

Officers Turcott and Morse investigated the case and placed Mr. Gagan under arrest for reckless driving. He will be presented in the Plainfield town court on Thursday.

ANOTHER ARREST MADE IN CHICAGO GANG WARFARE

CHICAGO, July 19.—(AP)—One man is under arrest and another is being sought by police in connection with the latest outbreak of gang warfare in Chicago, which resulted in the death last night of James Vanci, driver of the car from which "Mossy" Enright, labor leader was killed two years ago, and "Machine Gun Joe" Grennatta.

Grennatta and Vanci shot and stabbed each other to death in a fight in front of a south side saloon late last night. As is usual in such cases, witnesses were hard to find, although a crowd witnessed the affair. Examination of the bodies and questioning of the few who would talk led the police to believe that others took part in the battle.

Investigation led to the theory that Vanci and several friends had set out to "get" Grennatta for an alleged triple cross growing out of his failure to appear for trial on two jewelry robbery charges and the consequent forfeiture of his bonds totaling $30,000.

The man held is Louis Berndi, 21 who was in the saloon when the fight started. Joseph Grangrosso, owner of a soft drink parlor and said to be a business associate of Vanci is the man sought.

Earthquake Was Felt in San Francisco

Created a Near Panic in Memorial Chapel—No Fatalities or Damage.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—(AP)—A sharp earthquake shock was felt throughout the San Francisco Bay region at 11:16 a. m. today. No damage was reported.

The tremor was plainly perceptible in San Francisco and Oakland. It shook buildings in the towns along the peninsula south of San Francisco as far as San Jose, 50 miles away.

The shock alarmed numerous church congregations. In San Jose worshippers ran into the streets. In the Memorial Chapel at Stanford University, near Palo Alto, a rush for the doors started, but the minister quieted the people and they resumed their places.

135,000 GALLONS GASOLINE AND OIL BURNING IN CHICAGO

Watchman Was Killed and Panic Spread Over a Radius of Mile From Barge and Tug, in the Chicago River—Police Reserves Were Called Out to Quiet Thousands of Residents—Five Men Escaped—Blazing Oil in the River Set Docks Affire.

CHICAGO, July 19.—(A. P.) — A watchman was killed and damage and panic was spread over a mile radius at noon when 135,000 gallons of gasoline and oil in a Texas company barge exploded and sent a flood of flaming oil down the north branch of the Chicago river.

The barge and a tug anchored at the company's docks were destroyed by the explosion and subsequent fire. Five men, aboard the crafts, escaped.

The force of the blast shattered windows as far as a mile away. Police reserves were necessary to quiet thousands of residents of nearby sections who, frightened, rushed into the streets.

Blazing oil on the river set fire to adjacent docks and threatened bridges before it was confined by all the available firemen and equipment in the northwest and west sections of the city. Nearby gas tanks and oil storage tanks added to the hazard.

The body of the watchman, Jacob Jabersek, was seen hurling through the air. It fell into the flames and was not recovered.

A boys' bonfire near the docks started the fire, in the belief of Captain Charles Sigmond, who was the only occupant of the barge and discovered the blaze. His warning to the four men in the tug probably saved their lives.

The barge contained nine tanks, two of which had been emptied after it was brought to the dock Saturday from the company's refinery at Lockport, Illinois. Firemen believed the oil would continue to burn for hours and concentrated their efforts to confining it to a restricted area.

RIFFIANS ARE CAUSING FRENCH TROOPS ANXIETY

FEZ, Morocco, July 19.—(A. P.)—Increasingly hard Riffian attacks, after the lull in the fighting, are being met by the tired French troops with great persistency, the troops are heartened by the arrival of Marshal Petain.

The aviation arm of the French service is steadily growing in importance. Yesterday forty aerial bombardments were carried out by the aircraft which in an almost constant stream flew back and forth from Fez to the front, fifty kilometers (31.57 miles) away, where Abd-El-Krim's men, from Ain Aicha to Ain Mastouf, were making what were believed to be preliminary assaults for their final drive for Fez.

The French outposts are being given an anxious moments. A flying column from Teroual yesterday relieved two of them at Beab Hoceine and Oued Hamrine. They sent back the worn-out garrisons, which had long been besieged, and blew up their little fortresses.

Many of these outposts have from forty to fifty Senegalese troops and two or three white officers. They often have been practically abandoned, except for revictualing by airplane.

The situation is dangerous, but new life is being put into the French resistance. Abd-El-Krim's quick thrusts at unexpected points, which have been wearing out French soldiers unaccustomed to such hardships, are supposed to be only the beginning of the Riffian warlord's campaign.

EXTENSIVE CONSUMPTION OF GASOLINE IN UNITED STATES

WASHINGTON, July 19.—(AP)—Gasoline consumption is far more extensive anywhere else in the world.

A commerce department survey made public tonight showed per capita consumption in this country to have reached 69.3 gallons a year, while England was second with an average of only 11.6 gallons. One year's consumption in China would not keep the automobiles of the United States running eight hours.

To supply the demand, American production of gasoline was increased from 2,500,000,000 gallons in 1914 to 9,000,000,000 gallons in 1924. The United States accounted for 79 per cent. of the world's total consumption last year, while at the same time exporting $160,000,000 worth of the commodity.

The commerce department also announced today that in June the United States produced 350,557 passenger automobiles and 36,096 automobile trucks.

For the first six months of 1925, the United States has turned out 1,856,491 passenger cars, against 1,744,584 in the same period last year.

CONTENDS BETTER MUSIC WOULD AID RELIGION

NEW YORK, July 19.—(AP)—If hymns were played in dance time and the organ was replaced by the saxophone and the trombone there would be no more need for worry about how to fill empty church pews, Ernie Golden, director of a hotel orchestra, asserted from the pulpit of the West side religious forum today. His talk on "Better Music in Religion" was part of the regular Sunday morning service.

Golden said that jazz will be extinct in New York within a year and to illustrate the type of music which will supersede it his orchestra played several hymns to dance time, the saxophone and trombone predominating.

PRESIDENT HEARD DISCOURSE ON THE EVOLUTION CASE

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., July 19.—(AP)—The Scopes evolution trial was described before President Coolidge at church today as "the pitiful drama exemplifying the division among Christians."

"It is with very poor grace," the Rev. Charles H. Beale, who delivered the sermon at the Tabernacle Congregational church in Salem declared, "in that we church people criticise statesmen for not getting together when we ourselves cannot act in unison."

The pastor's pointed declarations on the evolution trial were brief and while he did not declare himself before the president as a modernist, he gave every substantiation to his statement that he was a "progressive preacher." The Rev. Beale preached for many years at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and is now retired, serving during the vacation period at the summer church of the president.

Otherwise, it was a quiet day for the executive. After church he and Mrs. Coolidge spent the time at their summer home on the Atlantic coast.

Tomorrow the president opens a week he expects to devote to the consideration of important government problems. Senator Curtis of Kansas, the Republican leader, comes to the summer White House in the morning for a conference with him which is expected to continue for several days.

In addition to a general discussion of the legislative program for next session, Mr. Coolidge is expected to take up with the senate leader a study of the tax and agricultural problems. Mr. Curtis is a member of the finance committee which will handle the next tax reduction bill when it comes to the senate, and is also well acquainted with the farm situation in the Middle West, in which the president is closely interested.

Fennelly after a chase down Main street and after McCarthy's alleged failure to stop following two commands to halt by the officer. Policeman Fennelly fired two shots, one into the air, the other "low, at the heels," in his words, and the bullet ricocheted, entering McCarthy's back and passing through the abdomen, examination at the St. Francis hospital showed. McCarthy and three others were alleged to have beaten a man in a brawl at Grove and Prospect streets. The man, who later disappeared after accompanying McCarthy and Policeman Fennelly to the police station, complained to Fennelly, running up to the officer who was talking with the night watchman at the Capitol theatre on Main street, with the word that four men had beaten him.

WILLIMANTIC

The nineteenth week of the industrial strife being waged here by former employes of the American Thread company, in protest against a ten per cent. wage cut, came to a close Saturday without any indication of a break in the ranks of the hundreds of operatives. The situation as it stands today can be summed up in two brief sentences: The protesting workers are holding firm and the American Thread company is gradually filling vacancies at the local plant with workers from other cities.

With this condition prevailing the outcome of the strike has ceased to be conjectural to many. Officials of the company state that the strike is ended. Production is being resumed in increasing quantities every week. The plant merely underwent a change of personnel, necessitating some delay in its operations but enabling it to keep unbroken any precedents involving the restoration of a ten per cent. wage cut.

On the other hand, the strikers have a goal in view and a remarkably large number remain optimistic in the face of great odds. While some have adopted a certain philosophic attitude and gone elsewhere to find work, many are remaining here and devoting many hours a day to assist in the management of the strike. Tenements vacated by evicted strikers in lower village and in The Oaks a residential part owned by the company are filling. Several trucks from Massachusetts and Rhode Island brought furniture to these houses during the past week, evidence that the new operatives are coming here to stay. Ten striking families were dispossessed last week, leaving about twenty-five more households to be so subjected next week. Four of the families are being quartered at the tent city, in the North Windham road, just over the city line.

The music to these hymns were Rev. Mr. Martin's composition. An original poem, "Grass," was given by Miss Susan Pendleton. Improvisation on the piano by Prof. Benjamin Bissell was followed by two delightful skits, the last one original, entitled A Children's Party and the Rubberneck Bus. A one-act play, "The Good Ste. Anna," by Miss Helen Gilbert, of Hebron, was given by members of the Hebron Dramatic club. The play deals with the power of faith and struck us, as was unanimous response in the audience. In closing Mr. Warren played and sang the most popular songs of the years 1900 to 1925. Friday evening, the school met at the home of Mrs. Lord and listened to a piano recital by Austin Warren, of Princeton, N. J., dean of St. Peter's school, and a program of tenor solos by James F. Martin, of East Hartford. Many friends from outlying towns were present to hear this musicale.
